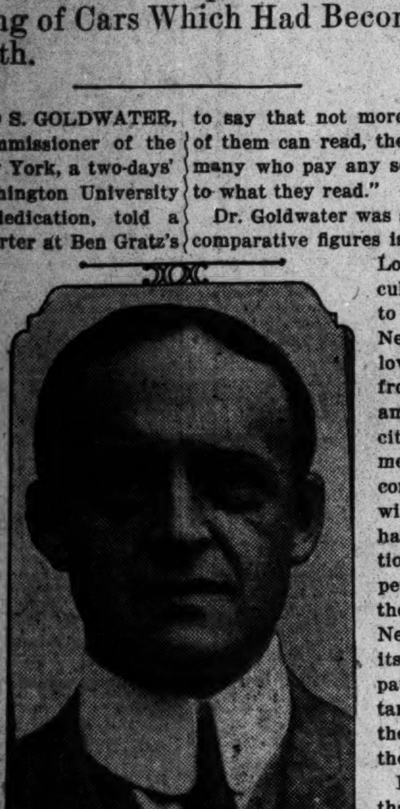
New York Health Chief Tells How His City Cut Tuberculosis Death Rate

Goldwater Also Describes Way in Which He Forced Traction Companies to Reduce Overcrowding of Cars Which Had Become Menace to Health.

DR. SIGMUND S. GOLDWATER, Health Commissioner of the City of New York, a two-days' est at the Washington University dical School dedication, told a st-Dispatch reporter at Ben Gratz's dell boulevard sidence Thurs- y, of the meas- es that New ork has taken to duce the city's ath rate, partic- arly from tu- rculosis, thus inting the way what can be ne by St. Louis. e also told how, a public health asure, he has mpelled the reet car com- nies to stop ercrowding.



DR. SIGISMUND GOLDWATER

Dr. Goldwater, o is 42 years , is now trying quit his job as alth Commis- ner, for the ason, he says, at he has done st of the things set out to do. e first thing, he ys, was the imination of litics from the partment.

"Mayor Mitchel appointed me," he marked, "without knowing whether voted for him or not, and he doesn't ow yet. And I don't know how e man in the department's employ tes.

"I found the department full of litics and honest graft. There were lot of employes who hadn't done a y's real work in so long that the ospect of getting them to do any ork did not look promising, and I t them out of the department. here was a great fuss made, but we ve men now who do the work.

"There are 3400 employes in the partment," he remarked, "and some the most effective work they have ne has been in working up neighrhood health organizations, for nitation and protection against in- ctious diseases.

dvisory Council Helps.

"THE Advisory Council of the Health Department was a hobby of mine, and I got e help of physicians, ministers, chers and neighborhood workers organizing it and putting it on constructive basis for practical alth work. It has not been a mere ell, or formal organization, but it given practical help in keeping e city healthy.

"One of the chief things striven has been to educate physicians the new idea that the prime duty the medical profession is to pre- nt disease, rather than to cure it. "We have organized groups of rkers for systematic medical su- vision of neighborhoods. This is only way to get many cases, par- ularly tuberculosis cases, in time do any good.

The very poor will frequently go the free dispensaries when they e the first symptoms of tubercu- s. But there is a class of 'office kers 'too good' to go to a free pensary, and yet not able to af- d consulting a physician unless y are sure something is the matter h them. The greatest difficulty is find these people in time to do m any good—and the class is a e one, for tuberculosis is most valent among clerks and other in- r workers.

upational Diseases.

THERE are also occupational diseases, which are peculiar to certain classes of ers, and our endeavor has been rganize these groups of workers train them in dealing with these ses.

The personal element is a large in this work. The press has n its space liberally, but you have ch our people by word of mouth. New York has 5,500,000 in- and while I would not like to say that not more than 3,000,000 of them can read, there are not that many who pay any serious attention to what they read."

Dr. Goldwater was asked about the comparative figures issued in the St. Louis antituberculosis campaign, to the effect that New York has the lowest death rate from tuberculosis, among American cities. This statement, and the comparison made with St. Louis, have been questioned by some persons here, on the ground that New York sends its tuberculosis patients to sanitariums outside the city, where they die.

His reply was that New York's only municipal sanitarium outside the city limits is at Otisville, and that it is only for incipient cases, so that very few deaths occur there. If the deaths of New York residents outside the city were added to the total as now reported, he said, the difference would hardly affect the city's present low percentage. This percentage, in 1913, was 6.16 per cent of all deaths, as compared with 11.41 in St. Louis, increased in 1914 to 13 per cent. The St. Louis figures include deaths of city patients in Koch Sanitarium and Mount St. Rose Hospital, outside the city, which are, however, only a small part of the total.

Tuberculosis Regulations.

FOR the information of St. Louis antituberculosis workers, Dr. Goldwater outlined the tuberculosis work now being carried on by his department. Of the means mentioned, St. Louis has a sanitarium for advanced cases, a small open-air school, a night and day camp and a few visiting nurses, maintained by the Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. Goldwater's list, with the times when the different details of the present method were adopted, is as follows:

1. Notification and registration of all cases (inaugurated 1894 and extended 1897). Manhattan, 1894. All boroughs, 1905. System of branch borough offices established, 1911.

2. Free bacteriological examination of sputum, to aid notification and to facilitate early and definite diagnosis (1894).

3. Educational measures of various kinds, circulars, lectures, exhibits, newspaper articles.

3. Visitation of consumptives in their homes (1894). Continuous supervision of cases in tenement houses by a corps of trained nurses (1903). Increase of nursing staff to 155 (1910).

5. Free disinfection by the Department of Health and issuance of orders for the renovation of rooms vacated by consumptives (1894).

6. Furnishing milk and eggs (now discontinued) and referring cases to the proper charitable organizations (1903).

7. Five classes of institutions are provided:

(a) Free hospitals for advanced cases (1903).

(b) Free clinics for diagnosis and treatment of ambulance cases unable to go to sanitoria (1904).

(c) Free sanitarium for incipient and early cases (1906).

(d) Free day camps (1910).

(e) Establishment of the tuberculosis hospital admission bureau for the proper selection of cases for institution care (1910).

8. Forcing certain classes of patients into a hospital and retaining them there (1901).

9. Enforcing regulations concerning spitting in public places.

10. Enforcing regulations forbidding use of public drinking cups (1911).

11. Research studies concerning the mode of infections, the role of bovine tuberculosis, characteristics of tubercle bacillus, etc.

Dr. Goldwater approved the St. Louis Health Department's program for the employment of municipal vis-

Age of Profit Sharing That Will End All Our Industrial Wars Is Here, Writes George W. Perkins

"Ford and Dennison Cases but High Lights on New Corporation Idea"

System by Which Labor and Capital Stand Off and Fight Each Other, if Continued, Could Only End in Chaos, While Under This New Inspiration They Are Joining Hands and Building Up Their Common Interests Together.

By GEORGE W. PERKINS,

Lately a Partner in the J. P. Morgan & Co. Banking House and Still an Active Director in the United States Steel Corporation and the International Harvester Co.

(Written Especially for the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.)

THE impossible is happening. Labor and capital are joining hands. The thing which everybody has wanted and few have dared to hope for is rapidly becoming an actual fact in American life. Quietly and almost unnoticed by the general public, the great change has begun. It is the change from competition to cooperation, from profit-grabbing to profit-sharing, from industrial war and the hope of conquest to industrial peace and the assurance of prosperity.

The public has had but an inkling of the change. The newspapers, true to tradition, have been "hitting the high spots." They have devoted page after page to Mr. Ford's rather melodramatic experiment. They have elaborated on the so-called "ideal" plan inaugurated by the Dennison Manufacturing Co. of Framingham, Mass., by which the employes may eventually get control of the plant. Every move about which a fascinating personal story could be woven has been played up with artistic finesse. I have no criticism to make of this. But while these glowing stories have been capturing the public imagination, changes of infinitely greater social importance have been taking place.

These changes do not represent any individual's enthusiasms and idealisms. They register something more important than that. They have been worked out as a business policy by the broadest and most far-sighted minds in the business world and indicate the direction the business world is taking. That it is taking the course, not from impulsive humanitarianism but from a keen realization of the needs of industry makes the step all the more significant.

War Basis for Industry Fatal.

THE story of American industry for the past 50 years has been a story of competition and conflict. Strikes, lockouts, unrest, continuous friction in the shops punctuated by continual breakdowns of the industrial machine—this was the order, or rather the disorder, of the day. Socialism grew. Syndicalism was born. The doctrine of the "class war" seemed to be well illustrated in facts, facts which were under everybody's observation.

A house divided against itself cannot stand. Industry cannot continue to develop upon a war basis. Unless the workers have a direct interest in the success of the industry, the most perfect mechanical system will lag and break. And the system of working for a flat rate per week, regardless of the success or failure of the undertaking, has failed more and more to inspire a loyal interest on the part of the wage earners in the business which employes them. This is not the discovery of a social reformer. It is a fact which all practical business men must recognize. It will not do simply to deplore the "loss of loyalty" among the workers. We must understand why that loyalty has vanished.

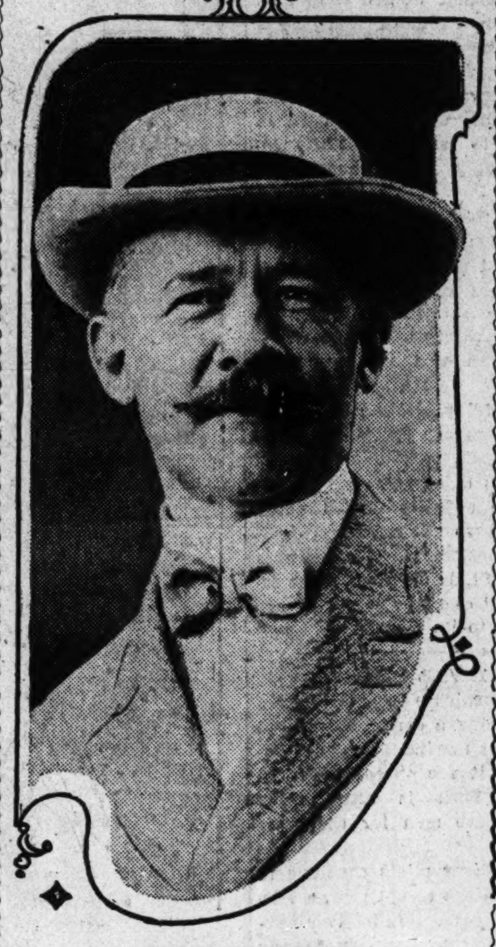
The answer is found in the very things which made industry on a large scale possible, universal education and intercommunication. Without these, modern industry could not exist. With them, the ancient relations of capital and labor cannot exist.

To speak of the tariff, high or low, as the main cause of industrial growth or industrial unrest is the loosest kind of talk. Free trade could be instituted tomorrow and no intelligent man would expect to see a single so-called trust go out of business. But take away electricity and the printing press, and not one of them could continue a single day. These forces, which have made it possible for all the world to get acquainted with all the world, have made large-scale industry possible. They have also revolutionized the relation of the man of capital to the man of labor.

They were once known as "owner and slave." Later it was "master and man," a very different expression, although the mastery was still all on one side. Finally they became "employer and employe," indicating that labor had risen to the position of a contracting party. With this relation began a struggle on the part of the worker for something more than a mere living.

Result of Worker's Education.

HE struck at first for a "raise," on the theory that $2.25 a day was more desirable than $2. If he got it, he struck again. You couldn't blame him. Three dollars a day was better yet. Soon the product of education and intercommunication began to get in its work. The worker began to see his position in a different light. He began to demand his full share and to see that his wages—whether $2 or $5 a day—did not represent that. How could he get it? Since there was no other relation between him and his employer except the wages contract, there seemed to be no other method except to make the wages higher.



GEORGE W. PERKINS.

Right or wrong, society was reaping what it had sown in universal education and intercommunication.

One of the keenest observers of the situation was a silent man at the very head of America's financial and industrial life. He was so silent that he was misunderstood and died before the people ever had an opportunity to appraise his character. He was J. P. Morgan. Being at the head of industry during such a turmoil, he was often caricatured as the embodiment of capitalistic greed. As a matter of fact, he sympathized keenly—much more keenly than did many of his associates—with labor's demands. He saw the justice of them, and he, more than any other industrial magnate of his time, took the workers' side in the constantly recurring controversies. To establish a just relation between capital and labor was his constant aim; not a mere temporary truce, but a permanent, working harmony.

That this permanent harmony is essential to the further development of industry no one will deny. What it would mean to both capital and labor almost transcends imagination. But that it can never come by a mere raising of wages is now a demonstrated economic fact.

Co-Operation Only Means.

THERE is only one way open. That is through actual co-operation and profit sharing.

Why not? Why should not the workers in each industry become partners in that industry? It is not a matter of charity, but a matter of right. Their position as workers entitles them to their full share in the benefits of industry. Industry demands that they feel a personal interest and responsibility. Their lives are as much a part of the investment as is the money which the capitalistic investors subscribe. Why should not those lives draw dividends, too? This is the recognition of labor in a somewhat different way than the labor unions have clamored for it. But it is an important recognition and embodies the very thing which the unions have been fighting for.

On the other hand, it means no opposition to capital. It renders industry constant and investment secure. It raises both capital and labor to the highest point of efficiency by utilizing all the energy which is now wasted in futile conflict, in active work for mutual advantage.

The tendency toward the new idea must be noted by everyone. At last winter's session of the Industrial Relations Commission it furnished the dominant note. To the great majority of observers Mr. Rockefeller and his collagues appeared as converted beings, men altogether unlike the irresponsible tyrants they were presumed to be.

Mr. Rockefeller's meeting with Mother Jones, which so captured the public imagination, must be considered as something more than a piece of stage play. It would be wrong, of course, to think of its marking a sudden turnabout in the industrial world. But it illustrated a new tendency, a tendency so marked that one of the keenest observers of it, Miss Ida Tarbell, original muck-raker of Standard Oil, has been inspired to write upon "the golden rule in business."

The tendency has shown itself in varied experiments with various degrees of success and failure. No doubt the old idea of "piece-work" as opposed to flat wage scale was inspired by some idea of co-operation. The net result, however, was disappointing. The principle of the old system was retained. Wages, which usually represented what the workers out of work were willing to work for, were simply supplanted by a percentage which those out of work were willing to work for. The standard of living did not rise and discontent was often increased.

Bonus System Not Effective.

NEXT the granting of bonuses beyond the wage scale became popular. It is still in favor with some employers; but too often partakes of the nature of charity or gratuity and the enlightened worker spurns the thought. The worker has become a different man since the school and the newspaper and the telephone came into his life. He wants his rights now, not a pat on the back and a Christmas turkey.

> A HOUSE divided against itself cannot stand. Industry cannot continue to develop upon a war basis. Unless the workers have a direct interest in the success of the industry, the most perfect mechanical system will lag and break. And the system of working for a flat rate per week, regardless of the success or failure of the undertaking, has failed more and more to inspire a loyal interest on the part of the wage earners in the business which employs them. This is not the discovery of a social reformer. It is a fact which all practical business men must recognize. It will not do simply to deplore the "loss of loyalty" among the workers. We must understand why that loyalty has vanished.—GEORGE W. PERKINS.

If he accepts the bonus as a right and not a gift, he is in no better position than if he had received a raise in wages. He reckons on his bonus just as he reckons on his wages and spends them both as soon as he gets them, if not before. Also, he feels himself exploited in as great a degree as he was before. Even though his income may have increased, his share in the product has not. And his position in relation to the industry is unchanged. When his labor power is gone, he is gone. He may wear out his life in the factory and be laid off to make way for younger and more competent men.

In former days such a man was cheerfully scrapped with the comfortable statement that it was his own fault if he did not save. The new capitalism is not content with such a verdict. It is taking a social, if not a socialistic, view. It deals with men as they are, not as they ought to be, and realizes, whether the individual is at fault or not, the social result is equally bad.

To improve on this situation many employers devised various philanthropic schemes. The workers were the first to object. They said they did not want anyone spending their money for them. If they had their rights, they reasoned, they could take care of themselves.

Various Profit-Sharing Disguises.

ENTER actual profit-sharing. It has entered in all sorts of guises and disguises, running the gauntlet from fantastic humanitarian experiments to grudgingly given dividend systems about which too many questions may not be asked. There are plain counterfeits appearing, too. To the public the situation must present a confused jumble and labor can be forgiven for showing an attitude of suspicion. But through all the confusion business seems to be finding the certain course—straight, open-and-above-board proftit sharing, in which the workers become actual partners in industry itself.

The last two decades have brought about a change in attitude of capital which amounts to almost revolution. Few large capitalists today will say: "This is my business and I have a right to run it as I see fit."

The welfare of the workers in any industry is conceded to be very much the business of the whole people, and business is beginning to appreciate that it is the business of business, too.

Following the lead of the profit-sharing plan of the Steel Corporation, inaugurated 13 years ago, a large number of industrial concerns have introduced plans based on the principle adopted by the Steel Corporation, and today many thousands of men, through ownership of securities in these various industrials, are actual partners in the concerns. All such men, for services rendered, receive their regular wages, and in addition such profits as come to them through the profit-sharing plans of the company with which they are associated. This increases the compensation of the laboring men and at the same time increases his interest in the business in which he is engaged. His surplus earnings become invested in the business; he becomes a partner. No longer does his interest in the business cease with his hours of labor; it continues in his mind whether he is at the shop or at home, in precisely the same way that his employer's interest continues. Thus we approach the great new period of copartnership.

The system by which capital and labor stand off and fight each other must be ended very soon or industry will be brought to chaos. With the public alive to the social significance of profit sharing, the change will shortly be made.

If our free educational system is to mean anything worth while, should it not lead us out of the jungle, away from war and competition, into a system of common interest and common aims? If we are to derive any real benefit from our giant industrial machine, can we afford to let it remain society's great battleground? The hope of the future for the worker's fair share as well as for capital's fair protection, lies only in co-operation. The most inspiring sign of the times is the big way in which big business is beginning to appreciate this truth.

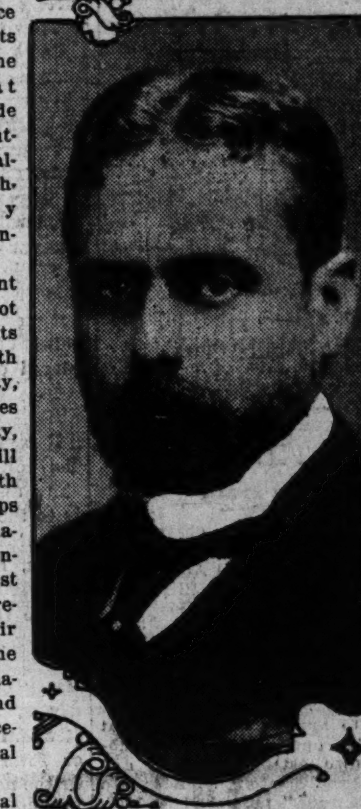
"SPIRIT OF LINCOLN STILL RULES U. S. NEUTRALITY," SAYS SIR GILBERT PARKER

English Author and Journalist Writes That the Fairness of America Adds to Value of National Sympathy.

By Sir Gilbert Parker,

Member of British Parliament and Eminent Journalist and Novelist.

WAR is the supreme test of the qualities of a nation, and it will be admitted by independent opinion in neutral countries that the people of Great Britain have stood the test well. Peace has its great tests also, and the country that stands outside the ring of fighters is tested almost as searchingly as any beligerent country.



SIR GILBERT PARKER.

The belligerent country has not to weigh its every action with exquisite nicety, because war gives wide liberty, though it still must walk with guarded footsteps where neutral nations are concerned; it must have strict regard for their rights under the rules of international law and the long precedents of naval warfare.

The neutral country, however, which stands as it were, between the combatants, holding the balance level, has a task that tests its statesmanship and the character of its people as it is never tested in ordinary peace times, or in ordinary war times.

In this extraordinary war, the American Government and American people have been supremely tested, and they have stood the test nobly. The United States—the greatest of all the neutral nations—had a gravely important part to play both from the moral and from what may be called the political side.

Put to Severe Test.

FOUR of the greatest nations of the world are at war, and it is natural that each of the two sets of belligerents wish for the moral support of ninety millions of people, whose power to affect the ultimate result of the war by their influence with other neutral countries could not be overestimated.

Official bias in dealing with questions such as contraband, purchase of ships, blockade and so on, toward either combatant—a preference which would be a variation from the strict rules of neutrality, affecting supplies of all kinds—would have as serious an effect upon the ultimate decision of the war as active participation.

It must be said that, in a position of immense delicacy, the United States has interpreted her official neutrality with an unimpeachable fidelity to long established rules.

Never, since the rules controlling the conduct of nations in time of war were established, either by precedent or by the written rules of the Declaration of Paris, has any neutral nation had to face the difficulties attached to its neutrality such as have faced the United States since August, 1914.

She has had to make protest, or to seek explanation, of acts of naval warfare of Great Britain, in which there were certainly elements of anxiety for the British Foreign Office and the Government, but whether it was the question of the Dacia and the purchase of ships, or the Wilhelmina and contraband, or the new blockade, a temperateness, a courtesy and a moderation have been shown for which this country cannot be too grateful.

Breathes Spirit of Lincoln

THAT temperateness, moderation and courtesy, however, have not by a hair's breath infringed the rights of our foes under international law. Since this war began there has breathed through the official actions of the American Government in relation to this country the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, and no higher tribute can be paid to any government than that.

At the time of the Civil War a most delicate question arose between the United States and this country, namely the seizure of British packetship Trent by the United States man-of-war San Jacinto.

On board the Trent were two representatives of the secession Government, Mason and Slidell. The British Government demanded the release of the envoys on the ground that the Trent should not have been seized and that under the British flag the two envoys were immune from capture.

The cry, "They shall never be given up!" was universally heard in the United States.

Public opinion was stormy and indignant. Then it was that Lincoln in peril of his own political position, at a most critical time in the history of the Civil War, insisted that the seizure was not lawful under international law, and that Mason and Slidell must be given up.

In the face of threats and widespread anger Lincoln stood by the principles of international law, not as a President but as a patriot to whom the perfect honor of his people and his country was more than all else.

Effort to Incite Feeling.

EFFORT has been made by Germany, through political pressure by German-Americans, by the incitement of racial feeling cultivated by the German Ambassador and by Herr Dernburg's Publicity Bureau, with its immense ramifications, to move President Wilson toward an abandonment of the strict rules of neutrality by prohibiting the export of munitions of war to Great Britain.

Had President Wilson yielded to this political pressure he would have sacrificed that neutrality, which, with a great anxiety and diligent care, his Government has steadfastly preserved.

That Germany cannot avail herself of the open market for munitions of war in the United States is due to the fact that her great navy is unable, in the presence of the British naval force, to protect those munitions of war and supplies which she would buy of the United States, if she could.

Germany Seeks U. S. [illegible]

THE influence of Amer[illegible]lic opinion is alwa[illegible]own on the side of rig[illegible]hat opinion sees it, not on [illegible] prejudice.

It can be truthfully said that the American people stand for charity to all and malice toward none. It is not surprising, therefore, that all the combatants in this great war desire at least American good opinion, while Germany has desired, not only the good opinion but an active support—not through armies and navies, but through the manipulation of neutral rights in her favor.

The use of German-American influences, and the threat of what [illegible] could do, was not a very logical position for a logical nation like the Germans to take up. Because if the influence of sections of the American people are to be considered, then, in my opinion, on the basis of the majority ruling, the American Government must have abandoned its strict neutrality in favor of the allies. For we are assured from a thousand quarters in the United States that the overwhelming majority of the American people are in sympathy with our cause.

That is acknowledged, bitterly and Germany Supreme in Music.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A few comments on Prof. Eliot's observation that Germany has not produced a single supremely great man to compare with Michael Angelo, Cavour, Pasteur, Darwin, Shakspeare, Milton and others mentioned in your article in the magazine of the Post-Dispatch. His conclusion is truly remarkable, linked as his name is with Harvard. One would expect an approximately accurate statement from a man whose life-work was given to the education of the young.

I will not presume to answer his charge, but will content myself with quoting from the published works of our own esteemed author and student of philosophy, Prof. Denton J. Snider. In his work, "A Tour of Europe," published in 1907, page 325, he says: "Formative art is not, and never has beeen, and probably never will be the truest and deepest expression of the German spirit. I believe its native, profoundly instinctive utterance is to be found in its music, in its poetry, and in its philosophy. In each of these spheres it has produced a supreme universal genius:

1. Beethoven in music.
2. Goethe in poetry, and—
3. Hegel (or Kant if you will) in philosophy, along with lesser lights who would be great elsewhere. Who would be the painter or sculptor to be compared with these three? They are the genuine, unforced, unborrowed outbursts of the German folk-soul, welling up from its profoundest depths. When it comes to German painting, German sculpture, there remains something alien, acquired, imported, un-German in it to the last, with all its care, and learning and attention to detail. Glory enough to old Deutschland it is to be supreme musician, poet and pholosopher to our modern world. Let me add that the Anglo-Saxon has to give up supremacy in two of these forms of expression; he is no musician, is supremely the builder of institutions, particularly the State; this really has been his grand historic task."

Again on page 332: Passing out of Germany into Italy—"I have felt the contrast between the two civilizations of Europe, the transalpine and the cisalpine, or the Mediterranean, both of which have expressed themselves quite fully in their respective fine arts. It is this expression which attracts me now * * * the visible arts, or those which embody themselves to sight in spatial forms. 1. Architecture. 2. Sculpture, and 3. Painting. * * * or the external forms of art, have their generative fatherland around the Mediterranean Sea; while the equally one-sided pursuit of internal forms of spirit (music, poetry and philosophy) is Germany. Teutonia is born musical, poetic and philosophic. These three ways of expression are native to her, bursting up spontaneously from the deepest depths of her folk-soul. I have visited in succession the three German homesteads of poetry, philosophy and music—Weimar (Goethe and Schiller), Prussia (Hegel and Kant), Vienna (Beethoven and Mozart.")—D. J. Snider.

Further comment seems unnecessary. Our own American folk-soul craves for, and is justly entitled to the truth, and the whole truth. She has often been reminded in the past of the debt to German savants and genius and it comes with somewhat of a shock to be reminded by one who has filled a niche in her temple of culture that the Teuton has not borne to the common storehouse of the race any pre-eminent genius for whom the human race feels indebted in honor and gratitude. Lest we forget, let the German names of Gutenberg, Humboldt, Kepler, Koch, Virchow, Roentgen, Froebel, Mergenthaler and a vast army of lesser lights be mentioned whose services to the race are truly universal.

O. C. BACKOF.

A Reader Is "Amused".

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It was with considerable amusement I read your editorial in this evening's Post-Dispatch on "Germany's Amazing Admission." Does not the fact that the carload of machine guns was confiscated by Switzerland go to prove that they have put an embargo on war material, and is this not equally true in regard to Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden? I would also suggest that you turn to page three, column five, Wednesday's Post-Dispatch, headed "Stone Gets Facts on German Action in Linzon Case," and read Ambassador Andrew White's opinion as to Germany's fairness.

At the start of the war your editorials used to hurt our feelings; now they only cause amusement. Every time you let out a yell we know that the Germans have given the allies another healthy dig.

Golly, but you are funny! LIMBERGER.

His Idea of a Calamity.

From the Chicago News.

For a time Col. Roosevelt must have worried lest the women should actually keep his letter dark, which was a terrible fate for such a letter.

ROOSEVELT'S BLIND SIDE.

Repeating on the witness stand the story of his giving immunity to the J. P. Morgan interests in the purchase of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, Col. Roosevelt is reported to have remarked with pride: "The panic was stopped."

The panic was checked, not stopped, because it had accomplished the purpose for which it was intended; it enabled the J. P. Morgan interests to acquire property of enormous value for a song and perfect the monopoly of the United States Steel Corporation without danger of prosecution for violation of law.

Col. Roosevelt tells lightly of the visit to the White House of Henry C. Frick and Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation; how they assured him that if J. P. Morgan would take over the Tennessee Coal and Iron property that morning before the Stock Exchange opened everything would be saved. This transaction was the one and only thing needful—the panic panacea to cure all disorders.

The fact that J. P. Morgan's taking in the Tennessee property for United States Steel involved a violation of law and that an assurance of immunity from the President involved an improper and illegal exercise of power on his part did not stop Col. Roosevelt. He held up the law and pulled the Morgan chestnuts out of the fire.

The repetition of the facts in this disgraceful transaction was necessary to complete the picture of the Roosevelt revealed by the records brought to light in the Barnes libel suit. It emphasizes that blind side of him which sees no wrong in any act that is necessary to accomplish his own purpose or serve his personal ends. It throws vivid light on the danger element in the man as a public leader or officer.

INQUIRIES INTO SUSPICIOUS DEALS.

Perhaps after the Nichols-Ritter deals and other deals from which trustful St. Louisans have lost great sums of money have been investigated, time will be found for a grand jury inquiry into the various deals of the Bankers' Trust Co.

While it is not known that any of the responsible officials of the Bankers' Trust Co. suffered from goiter, they suffered from something that caused ruinous losses to those who placed confidence in the concern.

GARDNER'S JUNK VISION.

Representative Gardner's question concerning the policy of our Government in building slow ships and failing to provide swift battle cruisers is to the point. He is right in saying that speed has proved invaluable in modern naval warfare. When, however, he insists that Secretary Daniels' letter on the condition of the navy is wholly beside the point because he does not show how our navy compares with the navies of Europe, he is hypercritical. It is wise to compare the efficiency of our navy with the efficiency of other navies, boat for boat, but what shall be the standard of naval strength—England, Germany or France? Do we want the strongest navy? Or the next strongest? Or the third? We must set a standard before we can compare strength in number as well as efficiency of all classes of boats.

Mr. Daniels' comparison of the navy today with the navy of yesterday is to the point so far as it goes. Showing increasing units and efficiency it demonstrates greater resources for defense. It is evident that Mr. Gardner is determined not to be satisfied. He sees nothing in America but naval junk.

DEMORALIZING GRAPE JUICE.

Not content to leave grape juice in its pure and unspoiled innocence, the Department of Agriculture has found a way to "concentrate" it. The method may well cause alarm to the sumptuary reformers who zealously advocate its perfectly sober virtues. The method consists in freezing the juice into solid ice, cracking it into pieces the size of a walnut and whirling it in a centrifugal machine.

We exclaim, will the concentrated and pickled stuff impart its dizzy momentum to its devotees and turn them into a sort of whirling Dervishes?

The Department of Agriculture had better let grape juice alone or Mr. Bryan won't have anything left to run on.

GETTING OUR DOLLAR'S WORTH.

Brother John Hall, esteemed esquire and editor, of Salem, Ark., invited us to send him a dollar for his paper for a year so as "to post ourselves up on the coming presidential campaign." We sent the money and we have already got more than we bargained for in the first copy of "The Sun" that he has mailed us.

He says he "can't be positive that Hearst will be the Democratic idea in the next campaign, but it's a cinch that the Democratic idea will be hearsed." To those not already familiar with "The Sun's" point of view, let us hasten to explain that it is mildly Republican. These paragraphic passages illumine it:

"Count the days and your ribs till the Republicans come back."

"Bryan is no humorist, but he is the end man of the Wilson Tragedy Combination."

"A pig-eatin' razorback sow that devours her own offspring is one of the Three Graces compared to an Arkansas Legislature."

"What a pity women can't vote in all the states. All the old maids will indorse Wilson's waiting, watchful policy. But they're the all."

"Bryan is now trying to disgrace the noble prohibition movement by making it the Democratic 'paramount.'"

"It is easier for the G. O. P. elephant to gallop through the squirt hole of a hypodermic needle than it is to elect a Democratic President 2 times in succession."

And this finally will remove any doubt as to where Brother Hall stands:

> Everything is coming our way this beautiful spring. Bill Sunday has converted Philadelphia to unanimous republicanism, a Kansas Republican has knocked the stuffin' out of a Texas nigger, the wicked city of Chicago has repented and elected a Republican Mayor, by a majority of 140,000, Fulton County's Republican Sheriff is making extra good and Judge Carroll has h'isted county scrip to the $ mark. The prospect for a big fruit crop in the Ozarks is a close second to the chance of a Republican victory next year. Strawberry short cake and PIE. Yum, yum.

We think well of our $1 investment. We wouldn't take $2 for it right now, and there are 51 numbers yet to come. We commend "The Sun" to all Democrats who want to hear the worst that can possibly be said of themselves and their party. If Democratic hopes are too high anywhere, "The Sun" will prove a wholesome corrigent. On the other hand, we will cheerfully pay $1 in cash for any Arkansas Democratic paper that will undertake to dispel a little of the gloom from the neck of the woods where our extinguished solar contemporary radiates. Extinguished is a printer's error—we mean distinguished, of course. But there is such a thing as intensive glooming, and it ought not to be carried too far. We should rejoice at least one dollar's worth to see a local contemporary lead "The Sun" out into the light.

AN ISSUE FOR WOMEN'S CLUBS.

The very first important legislation coming before the new Board of Aldermen was a bill reorganizing the law department. Because of a minor provision relating to four stenographers this bill, on whose passage the legal business of the city is waiting, was rejected.

The bill did not direct that women should be named to one or all of these four clerical places. It merely permitted them to be named within the discretion of the appointing power. It recognized that male stenographers of equal competency with women stenographers are hard to obtain and still harder to retain. But the Aldermen insisted that only voters should be eligible.

The 17 to 9 vote is strongly indicative of the existence of that spoilsmen's combine suspected to have been formed just prior to the organization. The women's clubs of the city should take cognizance of the action. An issue is raised that should be fought to a finish. Women pay a large proportion of the taxes of St. Louis. As wageworkers women are showing themselves adequate to all possibilities open to them. As a whole women are exerting all the time an increasing influence in city affairs and even carving out careers of leadership.

But because they are unjustly denied votes, they must also be denied even subordinate places which most men would not want. The pettiness of the action will make St. Louis gasp. The issue can be decided in but one way if the women of St. Louis are aroused to its meaning.

A SCHOOL FOR RIVER PILOTS.

Massachusetts has a schoolship to give instructions to young men desiring a career as officers or sailors in the merchant marine. The 1915 applications for places on it are three times the number available. New York is also giving nautical training to prepare men for the same important service.

If our old Mississippi River pilots continue to die at the same rate as in the recent past, a Missouri State schoolship for instruction in river navigation will be a necessary preliminary to any revival on a large scale of the use of valley waterways.

EXTERMINATE THE FLY.

A woman doctor, urging that every effort should be made to clean up the city, so that flies will not have to be killed by children, says:

> Murderers do not represent the highest types of civilization; then why should we teach children to 'swat the fly' and reward them for developing barbarous tendencies?

We are heartily with the writer of this extraordinary plea in urging that, prevention being better than cure, it is better to clean up and stop the production of pests. But why call children who kill pests murderers? Neither religion, with the exception of Buddhism, nor nature nor experience has taught us that all life, irrespective of species, is sacred. Certain forms of life, such as disease germs, vermin, poisonous reptiles and wild carniverous beasts are pests and it is the duty of humanity to exterminate them. The fly and the mosquito are vermin, no matter how highly organized and admirable they may be from the standpoint of the naturalist and nature lover.

But the pests must be exterminated without false sentiment. It is merely a question of self-defense on the part of humanity against a form of life that carries the menace of death to ourselves.

PATRIOTISM AND THE STAGE.

"A manager always takes a chance when he produces a play that sounds a patriotic note," says Mr. Charles Frohman, "because patriotism in America is not a crystallized sentiment." Perhaps, on reflection, Mr. Frohman will admit that playwrights and managers may think they are appealing to patriotism when in fact they are addressing themselves to a different sentiment.

War plays at this time are likely to encounter all the difficulties attendant upon neutrality. There are as many different ideas of neutrality in this country as there are Americans of varying birth and antecedents. The drama, therefore, does not touch their patriotism. It awakens controversy and increases contention.

It will be easy enough to crystallize patriotic sentiment in the United States when something happens to give it an impulse. Every neutral is a patriot according to his own lights. Whenever American patriotism may be challenged, there will be only one light on stage or field.

SOME NEW MONROE DOCTRINE.

Judge Monroe of Los Angeles has rendered a famous and maybe immortal decision. He lays it down cold that a well-to-do old lady who has taken a young husband to raise must pay him alimony pendente lite in case she gets tired of seeing him around the house and sues to divorce him. In the legal rumpus of the elderly Mrs. Krause versus her spouse of tender years (that is, he is 21 years the tenderer of the twain) he testified that she has a rooming house and that he "makes the beds, sweeps out the rooms, washes dishes and performs other work usually done by a maid." Now she wants to be rid of him, and refuses even to feed him, much less give him any money.

But listen, young husbands, to what the Judge says:

"If you stay at home she must feed you properly. Else you are to notify me. And if you prefer to leave the house pending the trial she shall pay you alimony of $40 a month."

Young husbands, be comforted and reassured. Judge Monroe's doctrine, however novel, is fundamentally sound. Has not the law always existed for the protection of the innocent and the weak?

A SOLDIER OF THE ALLIES.

I.

A soldier of the Allies
Was fighting in his trench;
Around him were the British,
Beside him were the French.
He thought of Piccadilly,
He thought of Leicester Square,
And he ducked to let a cannonball
Go whizzing through his hair.

II.

The soldier of the Allies
Had notions of his own;
He didn't give a whoop outdoors
For anybody's throne.
He'd battled since October
In pleasant times and rough,
And it struck him in a quiet way
He'd shot around enough.

III.

A soldier hard beside him
Sat down a bit to rest;
They often talked of this and that,
Except when matters pressed.
"I wonder how much longer,"
The other soldier said,
And watched a German aeroplane
That circled overhead.

IV.

The soldier of the Allies
Looked very, very wise;
A quizzical expression swept
The corners of his eyes.
"You tell me why we're fighting,"
He said unto his friend,
"And I'll be glad to tell you when
The blooming thing will end."

HE MISSED IT.

Housewife: Beef is higher, isn't it?

Barnes vs. Roosevelt Libel Suit

NOTHING "ON" ROOSEVELT.

Kansas City Star (Ind.). William Barnes sn't "got anything on" Theodore Roosevelt, be- use there was nothing to get. When a man has en guiding his course through a long career by at he conceives to be the public good, you can mb his past until your arm gives out without ing able to produce the slightest evidence to his scredit.

WILSON LUCK.

Philadelphia Record (Ind. Dem.): "The real neficiary will be Woodrow Wilson," says the pringfield Republican in commenting on the pectacular success of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel it in reviving G. O. P. animosities and tearing pen old wounds. Continuing, it says:

"Already the President is himself gaining fresh restige. Business is reviving. The neutrality olicy of the administration commands the sup- ort and admiration of the nation as a whole. he trial at Syracuse may insure the re-election the present occupant of the White House."

Whatever the outcome of the trial may be, the epublican party as a whole is bound to suffer om all this washing of dirty linen. The in- amous record of its Legislature has turned New ork against it, and in other states the same ckless reactionary spirit is causing a great re- ulsion in popular feeling. The pendulum has ready begun its swing toward Wilson again in 916.

ROOSEVELT'S OPPORTUNITY.

Des Moines Register and Leader (Ind. Rep.): hether there be much or little in this specula- on, one thing is sure, Mr. Barnes has done the ry thing best calculated to bring Mr. Roose- elt into the forefront, and if he has ever had e slightest intention of trying for national con- ol again, this libel suit will prove his oppor- unity.

There are those who believe that he does not sire another candidacy for the presidency, and it ould be hard to give any reason why he should ant to lead a national campaign. But Roosevelt Roosevelt and he is not amenable to any of the dinary rules of human conduct. He is only 56 ars old, and as full of fight as ever. And the rst states to select delegates are to hold pri- ary elections.

Perhaps the President and his friends are wise having their eyes fixed intently on Syracuse.

HE SANCTIFYING TOUCH.

Baltimore Star (Rep.): It is impossible to ade the plain lesson of Theodore Roosevelt's ssertation on the difference between the just the unjust in politics. It is a constantly re- rring interlude, of the nature almost of a leit tif, in the acting version of that great chin- sic drama at Syracuse, Jekyll vs. Hyde, or Hyde Jekyll—the form of the title depending upon other you "get" the show from the viewpoint the protesting Barnes or of the levitatious osevelt.

And out of the laboring of the bassoons and the iffling of the horns and the tintinnabulating the kettledrums proceedeth, for the discrim- ting analyst, this truth: that politics is poli- , save only when the hand of Roosevelt touch- it.

PRACTICAL MAN.

Washington Post (Ind.): The principal evi- ce adduced against Col. Roosevelt in the suit ught by William Barnes Jr., for libel, merely to show, as he once wrote to E. H. Harriman, the former President is "a practical man."

Entirely aside from the question whether he did injustice to Barnes, it is certain that nothing ugning the honor or integrity of Col. Roosevelt be brought out at the trial. It has been that he worked with the late Senator Platt, Barnes himself, and with all the men whom he has called bosses. He was as willing to talk things over with millionaires as with prize fighters.

The fact he is a practical man, willing to work with men of all shades of opinion, explains in a large measure his great political successes in the past. He is turning the present trial to his own political advantage, and finds in it an opportunity to fight one of the two men who are obstacles to his return to power in the Republican party.

There are ample evidences that Roosevelt again regards himself as a Republican, and that he will use his political experience in helping to bring about the nomination of the best man to oppose the party in power.

"COME-BACK" FOR BARNES.

Washington Herald (Ind.): The identity of this politicians in Washington who are quoted in some of the newspapers as predicting that, as the result of Mr. Barnes libel suit, Col. Roosevelt is "coming back," remains a mystery. It may be that some hopeful Democrats were responsible. About all the "come back" to be observed so far appears to be on the side of Mr. Barnes.

A BOSS REFORMER.

Indianapolis News (Ind.): We think that it has been made clear that Mr. Roosevelt, up to 1912, devoted most of his time, not to fighting bosses, but to reforming them. The "issue" does not, as far as he was concerned, appear to have been directly raised till 1912. And yet bosses are as old as politics. We seem to have heard of Boss Tweed, who was active in politics in New York long before Mr. Roosevelt's militant or missionary activity. How far afield the cross-examination is to go we do not know. But it would be too bad to have it close without an inquiry into the old relations between the witness and Quay and Penrose. It would be interesting to go into the classification of bosses given in this testimony. But the problem is too difficult. Penrose was undoubtedly a boss. We are surprised to find that Murray Crane was not. These is even some doubt about Cannon, who, it is admitted, was defeated as a boss, but did not "come back" in that capacity. Barnes, however, was always a boss, though he was tenderly dealt with as long as there was any hope of converting him. There ought to be an edition de luxe of this testimony.

FAIR TO HIS OPPONENTS.

Indianapolis Star (Ind. Rep.): It can not be said that Mr. Roosevelt is not entirely fair to men who have been his political enemies. In his cross-examination in regard to the Republican campaign fund in 1904 he said that he considered the contributions from certain business men to be in the same category as contribution from the same men to the Y. M. C. A.; meaning by this that the donors had in mind the good of the community through the success of the party in the one case and the influence of the Y. M. C. A. in the other, and not any direct personal reward.

"Would you feel the same way, precisely," asked Mr. Ivins, "if equal contributions were made to the gentleman running against you? To be specific, would you place Thomas F. Ryan's big contribution to the Parker campaign as being given in the same spirit—that is, would it be in the same category as his contribution for the building of St. Joseph's Church in New York?"

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he did not doubt that it was given in the same spirit. "I do not believe," he said, "that Mr. Ryan's money was given with any idea of political gain or advantage. He was strongly opposed to me and wished to beat me and I believe he was entirely sincere in his wish to do so."

That is doing the handsome thing by a political opponent. Mr. Ryan owes T. R. a note of thanks in acknowledgment. The former President's reference to Foraker, an opponent in his own party, as a boss, but not a corrupt one, a powerful man, whom he had always liked, was in the same frank spirit.

The Rockefeller-Walsh Controversy

"A FROTHY AGITATOR."

Pittsburg Gazette-Times: That any "investigator" pursuing such methods can be expected to frame a report which will be of value to thoughtful lawmakers anxious to accomplish something in the betterment of industrial relations hardly seems probable. It is surprising that a President of the United States, striving to be just, should trust such a frothy agitator and superheated zealot with an important commission of this kind.

ROCKEFELLER'S ACCUSATION.

Washington Herald: It is a serious charge which John D. Rockefeller Jr. makes against Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations. Referring to the commission's inquiry into the Colorado strike, Mr. Rockefeller asserts that its chairman "even falsified the record itself" and was guilty of a statement "every word of it false." The commission will have to clear itself of these charges or all of its prolonged and expensive investigations will stand discredited in the eyes of the public and will count for naught.

THE ISSUE IN COLORADO.

New York World: How a good cause may be injured by excess of zeal was never better shown than in the investigations of the Commission on Industrial Relations into the Colorado miners' strike.

Things were done in Colorado for which the nation blushed. A State surrendered its sovereignty to private power. A commonwealth rich in every gift of nature was too poor in spirit to do justice. A free people abdicated. In the silence of law murder was done and private warfare took the lives of men and women and children until humane people everywhere cried out upon the lengthening tale of horrors.

Here, if ever, was a case calling for the most searching, the most judicial and unpartisan inquiry. Why did these things happen? What were the facts? What is the matter with Colorado? How can her self-respect and respect for law be restored, and her example be used to warn her sisters? It is deeply regretted that Chairman Walsh is in danger of undermining the authority of the commission's conclusions by practically announcing them in advance of testimony. He should not be an advocate. The facts require an investigator. The lessons taught demand a Judge.

UNSUITED TO HIS JOB.

Indianapolis Star: The United States Commission on Industrial Relations, of which Frank P. Walsh is chairman, is supposed to have been appointed for the purpose of ascertaining certain facts bearing on the conditions of labor and business. It is the place of the chairman and other members of the body to be entirely impartial and unbiased in their attitude toward the witnesses who come before them. All they have to do is to assemble the facts; there their duty and responsibility end.

The preposterous Walsh, however, has assumed to be judge, prosecutor and jury. His animosity toward certain witnesses, especially John D. Rockefeller Jr., has been open and of quite a ferocious character. He now makes a personal and public attack upon the young man that is as much out of place as if a judge were to denounce a litigant before the conclusion of a trial.

Rockefeller may be wrong in his statements and Walsh may be right in regard to the particular question in dispute, but that does not alter the impropriety of the chairman's course. He has proved his unfitness over and over again, for the position conferred upon him, and this last act merely emphasizes his failure to comprehend the rightful nature of his duties.

WAIT FOR MAY 4.

St. Joseph News-Press: Letters and telegrams exchanged between John D. Rockefeller Jr. and the Rockefeller interests in Colorado bearing on the recent strike of Colorado coal miners, have come into possession of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, and are considered of enough importance to warrant a reopening of the Federal investigation. The general tendency of this correspondence, so far as appears on the surface, is to show that John D. Jr. and his associates in New York kept in close personal touch with the strike situation in Colorado, and that they placed obstacles in the way of the Government's efforts to effect an amicable settlement.

Just before the strike began, in September, 1913, the Department of Labor sent an agent to the Rockefellers to solicit their co-operation in the attempt to avert the clash. The agent consulted with one Starr J. Murphy, personal representative of the senior Rockefeller, who informed the agent that nothing was known in New York as to the Colorado situation, and that the entire matter was in the hands of mine operatives on the scene. Details of this interview, it seems, were communicated to officers of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., who in a telegram expressed their approbation, saying: "You handled the matter raised by Mr. Stewart (the Government agent) with exceptional skill, and it leaves us unhandicapped in event there is a strike."

Now comes Mr. Rockefeller Jr. and in a published interview says the correspondence didn't mean that at all, and that Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Industrial Commission, has drawn from it inferences which are entirely misleading and erroneous. He is to tell the commission all about it when the investigation is resumed at Washington May 4, and until that time fairness demands that we take Mr. Rockefeller at his word, and hold judgment in abeyance. The Rockefeller explanation promises to be of exceptional interest.

WALSH CONDEMNED.

Philadelphia Ledger: Mr. Walsh is the president of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, and as such his function is that of an investigator, not that of a judge in the court of last resort. But even if he had presumed to exercise a judicial function, it might have been forgiven had he shown any regard for the amenities of judicial procedure. Nothing could be less consonant with his office than to pass judgment upon Mr. Rockefeller in an ex-officio statement to the public press.

Women in the Week's War News

A TOO WOMANLY PEACE PLAN.

Chicago Herald: The woman delegates now at their Hague peace conference have already split on a question of policy. Some of them favor the plan of "direct intercession" with the rulers of Europe to stop the war. Others, led by Mrs. Fanny Garn Andrews of Boston, and evidently comprising the more influential section, hold that such a plan has no part in the present conference.

We agree with Mrs. Andrews. But if it has no part in the present conference it has a very plain part in feminine psychology. In spite of all ancient intimations to the contrary, directness is a woman's way of getting things and doing things. When a woman wants anything her first and exceedingly practical instinct is to go right to the person or place where it can be got.

So what some of the women delegates to The Hague conference are talking about doing is femininely consistent—if not politically advisable. It contemplates going straight to the point—to the men more or less in authority. It is a plan which has scored many feminine triumphs—though here, unfortunately, it wouldn't work at all.

PROTEST WILL DO GOOD.

Indianapolis News: Between 900 and 1000 women have met at The Hague in an international peace congress. It is not so much what this congress may accomplish as what the gathering really typifies that is of interest to the world. The steps taken to bring about the meeting are already familiar to the American public. Among the women are some half-hundred Americans. Most of the delegates, as is natural, come from Holland. Five women represent Belgium, coming by special permission of the German military authorities. At the first session, letters were read from practically all the countries interested save Belgium.

It is not to be expected that this International Women's Peace Congress will accomplish anything immediately. Possibly the present gathering may not exist long enough to witness tangible results of the situation. But the protest uttered is not likely to die out.

THE UNAPPRECIATED WOMEN.

Detroit Free Press: That excursion of the innocents, the pilgrimage to the women's peace conference scheduled for The Hague, has run hard aground on the rough, unemotional rocks of reality. The German delegates have been forcibly detained at home. The Swiss delegates have sent regrets without explanations. An unsympathetic Government first arbitrarily cut down the number of English women who were to be permitted to cross the channel, and now has completely cut off intercourse with the promised land of Holland. The French and German women turned down the project of their own accord. And finally the American delegation is hopelessly marooned at the Downs and is vainly sending S. O. S. signals to Washington. The exigencies of war have callously outweighed the exigencies of the pacifists.

Recently one of the American enthusiasts in discussing the projected conference asserted that the full significance of the movement was not understood. She was wrong. The Governments of Europe have understood its significance very well. They have classified it as a needless nuisance and have determined not to be bothered with it while other, and to them infinitely more important, matters demand their attention. So they have quietly suppressed the meeting and have told the women to go home and mind their own affairs lest they get in the way and perhaps get hurt. The treatment accorded the women isn't particularly polite; it really isn't gallant; it is only necessary.

WERE GOVERNMENTS AFRAID?

Pittsburg Leader: The action of several Governments in refusing to allow women delegates to the International Peace Congress at The Hague to attend, to even leave their own countries, is giving the women another view of their masters. When the British Government officially announced that a large political meeting so near to the war zone would be inadvisable, it now appears, may have been speaking for others than itself. For two other Governments have positively forbidden their women delegates to leave their countries, and, surprisingly, Switzerland is one of them.

What these women, earnest as they seem to be, could have accomplished to hasten the coming of peace is doubtful, probably even in their own minds. At the most their work could scarcely have gone further than the adoption of resolutions making paper demands upon Governments, which Governments would, in all probability have tossed into the official waste basket without reading.

But in view of the drastic action of several Governments forbidding delegates to leave their home countries to attend the international gathering at The Hague, it may be that the women had plans that were more significant than the world was permitted to know anything about. For Governments like those which have taken this action are not the sort that shy at trifles.

"FOR HER COUNTRY."

New York Times: A woman who is about to present the State with a "war baby," who in doing so risks her life to protect the race from the adverse eugenic effects of war, might be pardoned for asking by whom she needs to be forgiven and for what? She is in a position, indeed, to raise a most embarrassing issue. A woman cannot give her life in battle, as a man does; she has another function, which is to replace life, and she who performs this function out of wedlock may make a greater sacrfice than one who has observed the forms.

BRITISH "WAR BABIES."

Indianapolis Star: A peculiar social problem is presenting itself in England. It appears that all over that country where large bodies of troops have been quartered there is a prospect of many illegitimate children. It is said that many thousands of young, unmarried girls are soon to become mothers. In one county borough alone the number is put at 2000.

The soldier fathers of these prospective infants are scattered far and wide and many of them have laid down their lives. The argument is now urgently advanced that this problem of unexampled illegitimacy must be met in an enlightened way by the casting aside of theories and prejudices about the encouragement of immorality and looking after the welfare of the mothers and their children. As one writer puts it, it is the duty of the British people in church and state to take up the question, not so much as a matter of humanity as a duty to the nation. "The present wastage of [illegible] most vigorous British manhood sets a [illegible] exceptional value on the approaching [illegible] to the population," it is said. In other words the nation needs these children and should see that they are reared properly and with no stigma upon them. The same writer says:

"In the middle of a national life-and-death struggle, even the most censorious—and especially those pious personages who exhort us to forgive the bestiality of our enemies—may surely look upon the frailty of our own men and women with an eye of sympathy and forgiveness undarkened by blame. Let it be frankly acknowledged that the women are no more blameworthy than the men. The strictest justice, then, demands for the women complete and whole-hearted forgiveness, sympathy and assistance. At this [illegible] memorable period of our history let [illegible] repetition on a large scale of the horrib[illegible] that idolized Nelson and left the women to [illegible] whom he committed with his dying breath to the nation's keeping."

If this attutude of friendly protection in any general or official way is taken toward these young women it will indeed be a new departure and a step in a new social order. But it is a painful situation for a highly respectable and moral people to be obliged to confront.

Marriage of Miss Ruth Bixby to Ir A. Stevens Will Take Place May 17 and Wedding Will Be a Small One, Bride and Bridegroom Each Having Only One Attendant—Once There Was a Superstition That It Was Unlucky to Wed on Saturday and in May, but Styles Have Changed and Old Belief Has Been Lost.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

ONCE upon a time it was supposed to be unlucky to be married in May. How the belief came about is not known. Also there was a superstition it was unlucky to be married on Saturday, according to a rhyme that goes "Monday for health, Tuesday for wealth (or the other way round), Wednesday the best day of all, Thursday for losses, Friday for crosses and Saturday NO DAY AT ALL.''

But no one pays any attention to these superstitions these days. A girl chooses any day she wants, and Saturday has become quite a fashionable one for weddings.

So has May become a favorite month for weddings, especially in St. Louis. Perhaps it is because May is always so lovely here, and perhaps old superstitions no longer hold good, times having changed.

One of the most important weddings in May will be that of Miss Ruth Bixby, who has chosen the seventeenth for her marriage to Ir A. Stevens.

It will take place in the evening at 6 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby on Lindell boulevard and King's highway. It will be a small wedding, because Mrs. E. L. Bixby, the bride's grandmother, who is more than 90 years old, has not been well of late.

So Miss Bixby will have but one bridemaid, Miss Edith Whittemore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Churchill Whittemore, and Mr. Stevens will have just his best man, Edward Hotchkiss.

The ceremony will be in the art gallery of the Bixby home, a great room shaped like a square cross. After the return from their wedding trip Mr. Stevens and his bride will be at home in one of the Tudor Apartments.

ANOTHER May wedding will be Miss Caroline Garrett's to Richard Stanley Tuthill Jr. of Chicago, and which will be May 10. The ceremony will be at St. Peters' Episcopal Church, followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Garrett of 29 Kingsbury place.

Miss Stella Garrett will be maid of honor and Miss Elizabeth Hays, Miss Ann Lowe and Miss Harriet Tuthill of Chicago and Miss Stella Bryant of Montclair, N. J., will be bridemaids.

WHY is it that persons who have rather small houses do not have their weddings at clubs and hotels where there are rooms well adapted for such affairs and that lend themselves so well to decoration. Of course it has always been the custom among prominent Jewish families here to have their weddings at the Columbian Club whether they have large houses or not and often such weddings are celebrated in one of the fashionable hotels. Within the past two or three years several notable weddings have been held in hotels and one, Miss Helen Givens' to William Barton, was at the Woman's Club, said to be one of the prettiest of the season, and one or two, including Miss Olive Rae's to Charles Burnham Squier at the Buckingham.

But after Miss Lelia Dixon's wedding to James Walker Cain, Wednesday evening at the Hamilton Hotel, there is every reason to start a new fashion in wedding celebrations.

The ceremony was performed in the large drawing room which is panneled in green brocade bordered in pink. Four columns form a square in the middle of the room and each was wrapped with smilax and had a huge French basket fastened to it, arranged so that quantities of Easter lilies semed to be spilling from it.

The entire east wall opposite the entrance of the room was hung with smilax, and an altar was improvised with three tall candles on either side, each one rising out of a lily. Between the columns were white pedestals topped with great bunches of lilies. Forming an aisle from the doorway to the altar were white satin ribbons wrapped with smilax. They were fastened to the column and festooned between. The bridal party was rather unusual as it included every member of the two families.

The bride's sister, Miss Mary Dixon, was her maid of honor. Her mother, Mrs. William Dixon, was one of the matrons of honor and the bridegroom's stepmother was the other. His brother, Benjamin S. Cain, was best man, and his father was one of the ushers. The bride's father gave her away.

The bride's cousins, Misses Nelle and Sara Kouns of Topeka, Kan., were bridemaids. Before the wedding ceremony began they sang two duets.

It is said to have been one of the prettiest weddings this season. The Cains are from Houston, Tex., where Mr. and Mrs. Dixon also resided until a few years ago, and where the bride made her debut winter before last. Mr. Cain and his bride will return there to make their home.

MISS ADELAIDE WALKER, who has been in California for the past two months with her father, William H. Walker, has gone to New York to join her mother. Mr. Walker arrived here today and is stopping at the Racquet Club.

Mrs. David C. Buntin of the Aberdeen apartments, has returned from Santa Barbara, where she has been spending the winter. Mrs. Buntin's mother, Mrs. N. C. Walcott, came with her and will make her home in St. Louis.

The annual May day festival will be held Saturday, May 22, afternoon and evening, and will be for children of members, with a dance for the grown-ups in the evening. The June regatta will be held Sunday, June 6, and the autumn regatta, Sunday, Sept. 12. June 19 is the date for the club's annual automobile run, which will occupy the afternoon, and will close with a dinner for all contestants at the club in the evening, with an informal dance to follow. July 4 will be celebrated with a fireworks display and dinner, and the two river excursions of the season will take place July 16 and Aug. 27. A "Midsummer Night" concert with professional talent will be given July 31, and a garden party Aug. 14. The season will close with the autumn regatta.

A WEDDING of unusual interest in army and navy circles took place at Jefferson Barracks Wednesday, when Miss Hester Nolan, daughter of Mrs. Charles Farmer, was married to Lieut. Donovan, C. A. C. Miss Nolan is the daughter of the late Lieut. James Nolan, Fourth United States Cavalry, and granddaughter of the late Commander James B. Kimball, U. S. N.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Mayer, pastor of St. Andrew's Catholic Church of St. Louis, at 8 o'clock.

Officers and ladies of Jefferson Barracks, with quite a number of St. Louis friends, assembled at Capt. Farmer's quarters, where a white and gold altar had been placed, decorated with bride roses and lighted by numerous wax candles. Pots of tall lilies with white satin ribbons formed an aisle through which the bridal party entered.

The bride's gown of ivory satin with a court train was trimmed with point applique lace and her veil of the same was held in place by the usual wreath of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The only ornament worn was a diamond and platinum brooch, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Blanche Nolan, who was her sister's only attendant, wore a gown of white net combined with pale pink and blue satin, and carried a bouquet of pink roses with showers of pale blue. The bride's gift to her sister, a string of gold beads, completed the costume.

As at the last minute, Lieut. J. R. Davis, C. A. C., who was to have been best man, was detained at Fort Wright, Lieut. C. C. Keleher filled his place. The music was furnished by the Jefferson Barracks Orchestra and arranged by Chief Musician J. H. Scully.

After the ceremony and congratulations, a bridal supper was served. The table was decorated in white and at either end was a wedding cake, which were cut with the bridegroom's saber in military fashion.

Among the number of presents received were a handsome set of silver from the officers and ladies of the post and a richly mounted carving set and silver punch ladle from the Twenty-third Recruit Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Ferguson will give up their house at 5038 Washington boulevard, this week, and take possession of their new home at 4912 Berlin avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Minnis of 6231 Waterman avenue, have returned from Long Beach, Cal., where their daughter, Mrs. Joseph S. Moriarity, has been quite ill. She is recovering and will return late in the spring.

The Reducing Machine Co., 750 Century Bldg., reduces flesh without discomfort. Call for demonstrations.

Mrs. Hannah Freund and her son, J. J. Freund, have returned from a trip to Chicago and are again at the Washington Hotel.

Miss Marion Rowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Rowe of Albuquerque, New Mexico, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Robert B. Grant, 4183 Morgan street.

Mrs. Lawrence Fabacher of New Orleans is visiting her sister, Mrs. Max Feuerbacher of 3551 Sidney street.

Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Kessler of 3446 Shenandoah avenue have gone east to stay about two weeks.

"The Rainbow Kinono," a comedy in two acts, will be presented at 8:15 on the evening of May 10 by the Daughters of the King class of the Third Baptist Church, in the church assembly room, at Grand and Washington avenues. Special arrangements are also being made for a between-the-acts entertainment. The cast which will present the sketch includes Misses Eulah Urban, Lillian Carpenter, Jane Ryan, Beulah Harding, Margaret Fleming, Cora Ferrier, Helen McPhail, Mabel E. Copley and Mrs. Harry Borders.

Washington Hotel, the coolest summer location in the city; convenient and select. J. L. Alexander, proprietor.

The St. Louis Chapter, U. D. C., will meet at the residence of Mrs. John C. Roberts, Partridge and Page avenues, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Hosmer Hall Seniors are being entertained over the week-end at a house party given by the Juniors at "The Cedars" near Barnhard, Mo. This is an annual affair. Miss Elenore Frech of Flora boulevard, as president of the Junior class, made the arrangements this year. The party of 40 includes Miss McNair, Miss Lange of Dayton, O., and Miss Woods of Hatfield, Mass. The guests are Miss Gretchen Bilhart of River Mines; Jessie Collett of Macon, Mo.; Sally Cun

WASHING WON'T RID HEAD OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

"Record Breaking" Suit Sale

BEFORE READING FULL DETAILS BELOW, YOU MAY AS WELL ERASE FROM YOUR MEMORY ALL PAST SUIT SALES—FORGET ALL PAST SUIT VALUES—PREPARE YOURSELF FOR A NEW STANDARD.

Right at a time when other stores are talking "Clearing Sales," closing out their odds and ends—"leftovers"—here we are with one of those welcome surprises which we are continually springing on an appreciative clientele. A sale embracing too much "Suit Style"—offering "Suit Values" too great for any smart dresser to overlook, or any woman with a sense of economy to ignore. A sale we'll talk about today, because all St. Louis will be talking about it tomorrow, and for weeks after.

FOR $10 785 $25, $30, $35 and $37.50 Brand New Suits for Women, Misses and Juniors FOR $10

IMPORTANT—The latest fashion edict is that Cloth and Silk Suits are to be worn all Summer. These Suits were made up with that end in view. Fabrics are light in weight—the styles are loose—"airy"—"fluffy."

DON'T STOP to ask "how can such values be possible?" Don't "worry" because you think we're losing money—we're not. The manufacturers are the losers. But forget that part of the story—don't even give Garland's a thought—but read what we tell you about the Suits.

Come to our Third Floor and see them; examine the materials, the tailoring and finish—slip into a half dozen of them—"pose" in front of the mirror—"see yourself as others see you"—note the fit, the elegance of style, "hang" and drape—do this and we'll leave the rest to you.

6 of the 100 Styles Are Shown in Sketch Above at 10.00

785 Suits—over 100 styles and colors—and here's how it all happened: Two large Suit makers found themselves overstocked and their season literally at an end, one had 425, the other 360. We were fortunate in being on the ground just when they were ready to close them out at our own price, provided that we take all they had. We grabbed them quick, before they could change their minds—and now its your opportunity.

Rich Silk Suits—Wool Crepe—Serges—Gabardine—Wool Poplins—Checks—Stripes—Ripple Cloth. Colors are Copenhagen—Hague—Navy — Mahogany — Leaf Green—Reseda and Hunters' Green—Wistaria—Dahlia—Black. Styles include the Semi-Novelty—Tailored—Combinations Short Peasant Jacket—Eton and Bolero—Cutaway—Belted and Box Backs—Slashed Backs—Tailored and Flare Collars—Circular and Flare Skirts, Etc. Sizes, Juniors and Misses, 14 to 20 and Women up to 44 Bust.

$10.00 Not a Suit in the lot worth less than $25, most of them worth up to $30 and $35, a few are $37.50 values. All go in this sale at one price— $10.00

Sale Starts at 8:30 Monday—Extra Salespeople Will Be on Hand—Assure Prompt Service.

NOTICE—OUR MAY SALE OF UNDERMUSLINS, CORSETS AND INFANTS' WEAR WILL BEGIN MONDAY AND CONTINUE THROUGHOUT THE WEEK.

The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

Madeline: To make your too-fat figure round and just right, dissolve 4 ounces of parnotis (from drug store) in 1¼ pints hot water. When cool, strain and take a tablespoonful at mealtime. This is a rational, harmless treatment and gently dissolves the fat without leaving the skin wrinkled or the flesh flabby. The parnotis treatment acts differently from other reducing methods, inasmuch as it restores the graceful lines of the figure without dieting or exercise, and when the weight is sufficiently reduced the treatment can be discontinued.

Betty: I am certain a daily use of this vegetable cream jelly, which is easy to make at home, will soon eliminate your wrinkles and clear the skin of local impurities, leaving it smooth and velvety and give to it the pink and white bloom of youth. Get from your druggist and dissolve in ½-pint cold water 1 ounce almozoin and add 1 teaspoonful glycerine. To remove the wrinkles apply a little of the cream jelly lengthwise of the creases, leaving over night. The starved tissues quickly respond to this treatment and assume their correct proportions; then the skin will be smooth and wrinkleless. The The almozoin cream jelly is especially good to cleanse the skin of pimples and blackheads.

Diana: Your daughter can easily protect her skin against freckles and from spring winds by using this simple lotion: Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax (from drug store) in either ½-pint hot water or witch hazel and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply sparingly to face, neck and arms and rub lightly until it vanishes. The spurmax lotion is superior to powder because one application lasts an entire day and seems part of the skin. Spurmax makes shiny skins, oiliness, pimples and other complexion blemishes disappear quickly and it is a benefit to the finest complexion.

Flo: Yes, it is easy to keep your hair fluffy and soft if you are very careful about what you use in shampooing. I always use canthrox. It will quickly remove all dandruff, excess oil and dust, making the scalp so clean and healthy that the hair grows heavy and long. I prepare such a head wash at home at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by dissolving one teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This keeps my hair so lustrous and fluffy that it seems much heavier than it is. Betty Dean's Beauty Book, $5.—ADV.

Nemo WEEK—Beginning MONDAY MAY 3

NEMO WEEK'S MESSAGE TO YOU: "Get Back Your Shapely Figure!"

Four Old "Nemo Friends" You'll Quickly Recognize as "Real Friends," Vastly Improved

THIS Nemo Week is an event of vast importance to all womankind. For more than two years the corset business has been a riot of fads and freaks. Corsets were little more than rags. Some women wore no corsets, others were induced to desert the corset-friends of a life-time to join the absurd, disfiguring and unhealthful "slouch."

But women are now wearing real corsets, and have risen en masse to demand the style and healthful comfort that the Nemo alone can give. As a result, the sale of Nemo Corsets, especially the old, well-known and favorite models, is greater than ever.

Nemo Week marks the annual high tide in the corset trade. At that time, dealers everywhere have full lines of Nemo Corsets. You can get the exact model and size you need. Therefore, NEMO WEEK is the BEST TIME to buy Nemo Corsets.

"Nemo Week Special"
Nos. 344 and 345

Made especially for Nemo Week selling. Have the new "Invisible" Self-Reducing Straps.

Wide bust-gores take care of excess fat at waist-line caused by wearing low-bust or topless corsets. Long flexible skirt.

Made of the fine mercerized batiste we use in $5 to $10 corsets. Sizes 22 to 36.......... $3.00

For All Average Full Figures

No. 322 NEMO SELF-REDUCING. Most popular corset ever made—worn by literally millions of women. Long skirt with elastic Lasticurve-Back. Medium bust. Sizes 20 to 36 $3.00
(In EXTRA SIZES—38, 40, 42 and 44—$5.00.)
No. 326—Same as No. 322, but longer skirt—$3.00

For Large Figures, Flesh Evenly Distributed

No. 403 NEMO SELF-REDUCING. Has improved Nemo Relief Bands to support and reduce abdomen. Long skirt, with elastic Lasticurve-Back; medium bust. Sizes 22 to 36 $4.00
(In EXTRA SIZES—38, 40, 42 and 44—$6.00.)

For Full Figures, Flesh Rather Soft

No. 506 NEMO SELF-REDUCING. Four elastic gores in front of skirt, and elastic bands at back, make this the most wonderful and comfortable figure-reducing corset in existence. Long skirt, medium bust, sizes 22 to 36.......... $5.00
(In EXTRA SIZES—38, 40, 42 and 44—$7.50.)

For a Heavy, Sagging Abdomen

No. 523 NEMO SELF-REDUCING, with the famous Nemo LASTIKOPS BANDLET, which gives perfect abdominal support from underneath, and is approved and "prescribed" by physicians everywhere. Medium bust. Long skirt. Sizes 22 to 36.......... $5.00

FIGHT OVER LEASEHOLD OF BUILDING ENDS AMICABLY

Bondholders Buy Interest of Williams and Montgomery in Title Guaranty Trust Litigation.

Litigation for possession of the leasehold of the Title Guaranty Trust Building at Seventh and Chestnut streets came to an end yesterday when George L. Williams and H. B. Montgomery withdrew the receivership suit which they filed Friday.

A counter-suit filed at the same time by the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Co. also will be withdrawn, according to Charles Cummings Collins, the company's attorney.

It was learned that interests representing the bondholders had purchased the leasehold interest of Williams and Montgomery. Attorney Collins would not make known the consideration, but said it was "only a few thousand dollars." The leasehold is now in the hands of the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Co. as trustee for the bondholders.

Judge Taylor yesterday afternoon told counsel he would appoint a receiver on the petition of Williams and Montgomery. The offer of bondholders to buy out their interests was then made and accepted.

PRAISES PARKWAY PROVISIONS FOR WORKING PEOPLE

Minnesota U. President Approves Plans for Recreation for Children of Poor.

SITES FOR APARTMENTS

Dr. G. E. Vincent Says Plan Reveals St. Louis as a Real Progressive City.

Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota, after studying the plat of the proposed central parkway in the city plan exhibit, 521 Olive street, yesterday told a Post-Dispatch reporter the plan included nearly everything which could be suggested for a perfect parkway. Dr. Vincent visited St. Louis to attend the Washington University Medical School dedication.

He commented particularly upon the children's playgrounds, the athletic fields and swimming pool, included in the plan, and the fact that the parkway would provide a recreation place for the inhabitants of a district settled largely by working people.

Dr. Vincent, a student of municipal affairs, has visited the larger cities of the United States and of European countries to study the manner of beautifying cities and of providing places of recreation for working people and their children.

He studied the parkway plan in detail and asked many questions about the surrounding territory and treatment intended for each block of the parkway.

Pleased at City's Advance.

"I was not only surprised," he said, "but greatly pleased to find that St. Louis has advanced far beyond most cities in its plans for the future, and that here you are seeking to provide for the children of the poor, and for the men and women of the less wealthy class, exactly what most other cities provide only for the residents of their more wealthy districts.

"There is always opposition, however, to any great public undertaking, usually because there are many people who cannot see into the future, and who do not know how similar improvements in other cities have affected property values.

"It is my opinion that if this parkway project is realized the value of every foot of ground fronting on the parkway will be enhanced greatly in value. It seems to me that the logical effect of the parkway would be the erection of moderate-priced apartment houses almost its entire length. These, I should think, would be apartments which could be rented by working people.

Delay Will Increase Cost.

"It is to be regretted that so much of the business of St. Louis is in a district which requires the hauling through the parkway of heavy goods and it would be a grand thing if there could be subways at proper distances under the parkway, but that probably would be too much to undertake in connection with the plan.

"It is well that St. Louis is undertaking this parkway plan at this time. Of course, it would have been better if the parkway had been constructed a number of years ago, because the property then would have cost less. But the citizens should bear in mind that it costs less today than it will cost 10 years from today.

"Cities larger than St. Louis which neglected to provide the parks demanded by the people are now paying for them at staggering prices. It is well that St. Louis is acting before prices become prohibitive.

"The parkway plans reveal St. Louis as one of the real progressive cities of the country."

City Has 148,000 Seedlings Which Would Provide Trees for Parkway.

The final report of Park Commissioner Dwight F. Davis, who retired from office yesterday, shows that the city now has at the Chain of Rocks 148,000 seedlings, which will mature in two years, and provide trees needed for the parkway. It is estimated that the use of these seedlings will save the city $100,000 in trees for the parkway.

Davis in four years increased the planting of trees and shrubs from 5719 to 46,566. In 1911 the city had in all parks a total of 4375 perennials. It now has 10,396.

The city has greenhouses in Forest Park and at the Chain of Rocks occupying about five acres. The increased use of playgrounds and parks during the past few years has caused much greater wear on trees, plants and shrubs and a greater production has been required to replace them.

ROCK FALLS, KILLS MILL CREEK SEWER LABORER

Man's Head Is Crushed When He Is Hoisting Stone in Bucket to Dump Wagon.

A heavy stone which fell back into a shaft at the Mill Creek sewer excavation at Armstrong avenue and Hickory street at 5 a. m. yesterday, while a hoisting bucket was being unloaded, struck M. P. Murray, 35 years old, of 3140 California avenue, a laborer, on the head and fractured his skull. He died at the city hospital an hour and a half later.

Murray was standing on a platform near the top of the shaft where he pulled a rope by which the buckets of blasted rock which came up from the bottom were dumped into a wagon. The stone which killed Murray missed the wagon, bounding back into the shaft.

That touring car may be sold with least delay through a Post-Dispatch Want Ad., and runabouts and electric cars find ready purchasers through the "Wants."

37,254 PERSONS SEEK WORK THROUGH FEDERAL BUREAUS

2516 of Unemployed in St. Louis Make Application During Months of February and March.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—During February and March there were 37,254 applications for employment and inquiries for help received at the various headquarters of the Federal Employment Bureau throughout the country, according to the Department of Labor today.

Philadelphia received 7429 applications, Chicago 5105 and New York 4485.

Other cities, during the same period, received the following: Boston, 999; Baltimore, 1012; New Orleans, 2508; Galveston, Tex., 937; St. Louis, 2516.

Other inquiries made at postoffices throughout the country are not covered in these figures.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Will Stand on Head Daily for Month.

The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O.

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood sts., Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Young Woman:" "For several years I have doctored for distressing stomach symptoms, such as sour stomach, belching, accumulations of gas, heart-burn, drowsiness after eating, sleeplessness, coated tongue, bad breath, inertia, and I am getting thin and weak, my complexion is poor, and so far have not been improved by the medicines I have taken."

Answer: Your need is medicine to aid digestion, overcome dyspepsia and tone up the stomach, liver and bowels. I advise you to take "double-four stomach and bowel medicine," sold in sealed packets, by druggists, with complete direction.

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is very annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions.

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

Henry T. C. writes: "Something seems to be wrong with my system and I don't know what it is. I have huge puffs under my eyes, my eyes are bloodshot in morning and my feet and ankles are swollen. Sometimes I have chills and feel weak and tired most of the time."

Answer: Your eliminating organs, such as liver and kidneys, are in need of treatment. Begin taking balmwort tablets at once. Get them in sealed tubes with full directions of any well-stocked druggist.

C. M. C. asks: "Please relieve me of a coated tongue, foul breath, headache, constipation and general ill health."

Answer: If habitually constipated, you should take three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) and arouse the organs which eliminate waste material from your body. These tablets purify the blood and improve the health by acting on the liver, kidneys and bowels. Obtain in sealed tubes with full directions.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism? If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be relieved of your rheumatism if you take the following. Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at meal times and at bedtime and you will soon be relieved. Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

Miss Bertie L. asks: "What reme can you recommend to reduce obes safely? I want to reduce about pounds."

Answer: I rely on five-grain arbolo tablets as being the most effective an convenient treatment to reduce abnorma fat. Druggists supply this in seale tubes with complete directions. After the first few days a pound a day is not too much reduction.

Mrs. M. D. D. asks: "Do you think is possible for me to increase my weigh from 97 pounds to about 125 pounds?"

Answer: Yes, I believe that the regula use of a special tonic tablet will do th for you as it has for thousands of other Ask your druggist for three-grain hyp nuclane tablets in sealed package wi full directions. Take them for severa months to get the full benefit.

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer fro bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors d not seem to help me. What would yo suggest?

Answer: To relieve chronic cold, sor throat bronchitis, I would advise the u of concentrated essence mentho-laxe Purchase this at any drug store in 2 oz. packages and mix according to dire tions given on bottle and you will ve shortly be relieved of all bronchial tro ble. This will not only relieve, but wi correct, and is very pleasant to take.

M. G. W. asks: "What can one do f a bad catarrhal condition? I have suffer a long time and am unable to find reli In addition to catarrh in throat and no trils.

Answer: A good tonic and builder su as three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets shou build up your vitality, while using anti septic Vilane Powder for local treatmen Get either a two or eight ounce packag of the powder and complete directions wi package will tell you how to use.

John C. L. writes: "I find my natu strength and nervous system failing I do not recuperate as of yore. My fo and rest seem not to benefit as th should. Am weak, despondent and unab to perform the duties which were accom earlier in life, while my ambition for w and pleasure is slowly going."

Answer: I think a powerful harmle tonic and nervine medicine will rejuven and restore the functions of digestion, similation and elimination by invigorat the nervous system. Obtain three-gr cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tu and take as per directions accompanyin ADVERTISEMENT.

Fortified Tires
Are Always Climbing Upward

104,000 Men are Working to Supply Goodyear Tires

In the jungle and the field, in our fabric factory, our tire plants, our branches, etc., 104,000 men are employed to meet the demand for Goodyears.

That demand has grown until last year men bought about one Goodyear tire for every car in use.

It is growing now faster than ever. Our sales to dealers have this spring shown an increase of 52 per cent.

We Fortify Tires

The reason is, we fortify our tires. We give you the best that others give, plus five exclusive features. In costly ways, employed by no one else, we combat these six great troubles:

Rim-Cuts Insecurity
Blowouts Punctures
Loose Treads Skidding

Not all these troubles can in any way be completely ended. But we combat them in the best ways known. We do it regardless of cost. Our "On-Air" cure — one exclusive feature — costs us $450,000 yearly.

We Never Skimp

Despite all price reductions, we never skimp these tires. In fact, scores of experts work all the time seeking new ways to improve them. Lately we have added three conspicuous improvements, each of which adds much to our tire cost.

This policy is apparent. Compare Goodyear size and thickness with the average tire. Compare the number of fabric plies. Some Goodyear supremacies can be seen at a glance.

Prices Way Down

Goodyear has made in about two years three great price reductions. They total 45 per cent. The last was on February 1st.

Every saving we make—in rubber or cotton or through multiplied output—goes to Goodyear users. Our present output enables us to give you a value which none can duplicate.

Men who use Goodyear Fortified Tires get better tires than others. They have less trouble on the average, and less cost. The evidence lies in our exclusive features. It lies in our dominant place. And it lies in the swelling Goodyear tide. We urge you to join this army. Any dealer will supply you. (2366)

COSTS HALLER A BOX OF CIGARS TO BE ACTING MAYOR

But His Only Official Problem Yesterday Was What His Pay for the Day Would Be.

It cost Alderman Julius Haller a box of cigars to be Acting Mayor in the absence from the city of Mayor Kiel yesterday morning, when someone tipped off city hall officialdom that Haller had offered a cigar to the first friend who dropped in to admire him in the seat of the chief executive.

A lively interest in Haller was manifested immediately, and a box of cigars which Haller had expected to enjoy a bit himself disappeared before the Alderman could finish his first cigar.

As Vice President of the Board of Aldermen, Haller succeeds to those duties that would have devolved upon A. H. Frederick as President of the Council. Frederick would have been Acting Mayor of St. Louis yesterday had he not resigned when indicted for forgery and been sent to prison.

The only problem of government that intruded itself upon Haller was the question of what his compensation in that post would be. Haller receives $1500 a year as Alderman. Mayor Kiel receives $5000 a year, his salary under the old charter. Mayors who take office under the new charter will be entitled to $10,000 a year.

Under the old charter, the Acting Mayor was entitled to pay at the rate of $13.85 per day, on a basis of $5000 a year. The new charter makes no provision for paying extra compensation to the Acting Mayor and Mayor Kiel said before his departure, Friday evening, that he would ask the Law Department for a ruling upon his return.

SEVEN ENGLISH KINGS, IN MARBLE, IN ONE WAREHOUSE

London Has No Place to Display Statues and Can't Decide What to Do With Them.

LONDON, May 1.—Seven heroic statues of English Kings, which formerly ocupied a position of great honor in the old Westminster Hall, near Westminster Abbey, are gathering dust in an obscure warehouse, because no suitable place for them can be found.

The huge statues were accepted by the City Corporation as a loan in perpetuity, but ever since then the officials have been at their wits' end as to how to dispose of them. All sorts of sugestions have been made and sites proposed, but in each case certain difficulties stood in the way. The statues are of delicate marble and cannot be exposed to the weather, and there is distinct opposition to dividing the Kings among several museums or public buildings, none of which seem capable of housing the entire group artistically.

It is not unlikely that they will be allowed to remain in the warehouse until some new art museum is erected in which provision for them can be made. The statues are by the leading sculptors o ftheir time and are regarded by art experts as works of considerable merit.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove the hairs, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone.—ADV.

Englishmen Forced to Admit Fairness of U. S. Neutrality

viciously, by the Germans themselves. There are those, however, in this country, who have been as illogical, as unreasonable and unwise as the Germans. They have been unable to understand why, when the Americans in an immense majority favored the allies, the American Government should remain neutral or should not completely and openly support the allies.

They cannot understand why the United States should not officially have condemned Germany for its violation of Belgian neutrality. The position is short sighted, is unjust and is pedantic.

The newspapers and the people of the United States have been free to express themselves untrammelled by any complication which might have occurred if, for instance, Germany had told the United States to mind her own business on the receipt of an official note conveying reproach.

The reply to the few dissatisfied people in England to this would be, "Ah, then, the United States, if she were challenged by Germany, would abandon her neutrality and take part in the war on the side of the allies!"

To very many others, however, it is infinitely better for the world's sake and I believe for our own, that the United States should not abandon her neutrality.

It may be that many more nations than are now at war in Europe will be involved before summer has come.

In the interests of a stable civilization it is essential that steadying, wholesome, dispassionate and honorable influence of the United States should, unhampered by the terrible restrictions of belligerency, be used in the interests of the whole world and particularly in the interests of the small nations when the end of this war comes.

Against militarism and the results of militarism the United States is opposed to a man.

Conceive what would be the state of Belgium today if the United States had abandoned her neutrality in favor of the allies. Millions in Belgium would be starving. Since August last the United States has been busy in the interests of humanity, lessening the horrors of war by hospital relief, providing comforts and necessities through an awful winter for the wounded of all the nations engaged.

Every week there comes from the United States especial gifts to each State, ships loaded with flour and food of all kinds for a people whose land has been denuded as locusts ravage the fields of ripening grain and leave them bare.

If for no other reason the neutrality of the United States should be welcomed by every British man because of what she has done for suffering, starving and tortured Belgium.

If humanity is indebted to the United States Government, for the incalculable service it is rendering in bringing relief to Belgium, how grateful should this country be to the American Government for the services rendered to our thousands of prisoners in Germany.

The American Ambassadors in London and Berlin and the whole ambassadorial staff have been placed at the services of our suffering wounded and our helpless officers and men, who have had insufficient clothing and insufficient food.

American Newspapers Fair.

Newspaper men in Great Britain will gallantly agree that the American press has exhibited the greatest enterprise and shown extraordinary ability in dealing with the war in their editorial columns.

I have watched American opinion. I have read scores of American newspapers steadily; I have received vast numbers of letters from prominent Americans of all professions and positions since this war began. I am convinced that the American people understand this war even better than we do.

As one prominent American wrote to me: "You are fighting as you never fought before; and we are thinking as we never thought before, not even in the days of our struggle to preserve the Union."

I ask such fellow countrymen of mine as have been impatient with the Government at Washington, whether they have fully estimated the value of the moral support given to us by the people of the United States.

Is there no material power in sympathy? The voice that says outside the ring, "Your cause is just, fight on," gives a higher volume of energy.

Sympathy makes for the understanding and that understanding was never more valuable than when we departed from the old traditional blockade and relied upon the United States to see that our interpretation of the principles of international law had not been changed by the new practice we were compelled to make. Sympathy disarmed suspicion of motive and of act.

Lincoln on Moral Support.

Nothing has ever been said upon this matter of international sympathy and support which has the meaning and permanency of the reply of Abraham Lincoln on the 19th of January, 1863, to an address from the workingmen of Manchester. This is what Lincoln said:

"It is not always in the power of Governments to enlarge or restrict the scope of moral results which follow the policies that they may deem it necessary for the public safety to adopt. I have understood well that the duty of self-preservation rests solely with the American people.

"But I have, at the same time, been aware that favor or disfavor of foreign nations might have a material influence in enlarging or prolonging the struggle. * * * I have, therefore, reckoned on the forbearance of nations.

"Circumstances—to some of which you kindly allude—induce me especially to expect that if justice and good faith should be practiced by the United States they would encounter no hostile influence on the part of Great Britain.

"It is now a pleasant duty to acknowledge the demonstration you have given of your desire that a spirit of amity and peace toward this country may prevail in the councils of your Queen, who is respected and esteemed in your own country only more than she is by the kindred nation which has its home on this side of the Atlantic."

So much for the value which Lincoln placed upon the moral support offered by public opinion.

Not Commercial Question.

Here and there in this country it has been said that the United States kept silence officially when Belgium was invaded, but became animated and vocal when American commerce was touched; that she was chiefly concerned in making money out of this war.

It is not really necessary to reply to such foolish statements; but, if it were, the critic could be reminded that again and again, when other countries have been at war, Great Britain has been charged with anxiety to secure advantage and make money out of other people's troubles.

It is perfectly true that in the early part and the middle of last century Great Britain did greatly profit by the wars which upset the trade and commerce and industry of other countries. I do deeply trust that the United States will increase the production of her soil and the production of her workshops while this war is on, and when it is over.

Her prosperity would be an advantage and not a disadvantage to the belligerents. It is essential that the United States should have a population at peace, cultivating the soil, developing industry, while Europe is in a state of war; that at least one great power shall not be building up thousands of millions of debt and living on credit; shall be free from the direct disturbance of finance.

Heart Still Rules.

The vast majority of the people of this country profoundly believe that if it could choose the American nation would not have this war if it meant a tenfold increase to its prosperity. The almighty heart is still stronger in the United States than the almighty dollar.

The American people may rest assured that in this country the immense majority are deeply and profoundly grateful to them for their chivalrous and genuine sympathy. Not simply because it is sympathy, but because the American people have made up their minds that we are right.

We should have had many searchings of conscience if the judgment of the American people had gone against us at this time. Removed from European complications, the United States is a great court of equity, and its judgments are invaluable to the nation that secures from it the verdict of acquittal of crime against the peace of the world.

For such a judgment we are thankful. We are convinced that in the years to come we shall have to be more to each other than we have been in the past.

How Overcrowding of Cars Was Stopped in New York City

iting nurses, and for a bond issue to enlarge Koch Hospital. But he said the education of the public, through voluntary health organizations, was, in his opinion, as important and immediate a need as any.

He has treated overcrowded cars as a menace to public health, and has ordered them abated as a nuisance. And he has succeeded in stopping the overcrowding, he declares—in the subway all the year round, and on the surface and elevated lines in cold weather.

Under the Goldwater rules, which he has succeeded in enforcing, surface and "L" cars must not be overcrowded when the windows are closed. But with the windows open, the Health Department's power over them ceases. This means that his method cannot be used for the relief of St. Louis before next fall.

As to that, we should not be severely perturbed. We have the jitneys this summer. Next fall, if the jitneys go into hibernation, we can try the Goldwater plan. At any time it is interesting.

Company Kept Cars Crowded.

"Our city transportation lines," he remarked, "are in the hands of men whom I would not like to call lacking in public spirit, but who are looking for profits first.

"The company's reply to complaints about crowding of the cars has been that the 'maximum service' was being given. The Public Service Commission seemed to be convinced that this was true. I was never convinced of this, and I was still less convinced when I saw that, as soon as the traffic would slacken somewhat, the number of cars would be reduced, that the crowding would be practically the same.

"This applied to the 'nonrush' hours of the day, and it applied also to the summer months, when travel is normally much lighter on all city lines than in winter. Either by timing the service, or by visiting the car barns and seeing the number of idle cars, it was easy to figure out the company's method—namely, to run as few cars as possible at any time.

"In the efforts that the Health Department has made to clean up the tenements and improve living conditions, we have found that we had to consider the conditions in the cars where so many of the people spend an hour or more of every working day. The effect of street car conditions on health would, naturally, be chiefly in the winter time on the surface and 'L' lines, but would be an all-year matter in the subway.

Freedom of Movement Demanded.

"The Health Department made laboratory tests of the air in crowded street cars, and showed that infection was not only possible, but likely, when persons were crowded against each other as they were in the car aisles. When an epidemic of colds and sore throats spread through the city, I was ready to prove scientifically that it was due largely to the transportation conditions.

"I took the matter up with the chairman of the Public Service Commission and he seemed to think nothing could be done. He said the 'limit of human endeavor' had been reached in the efforts which he had made to get the company to provide sufficient service.

Another member of the commission put the matter somewhat differently. He pointed out that the commission had issued 65 specific orders, none of which had been heeded. The orders, he said, had been based on investigations made by the Transit Bureau of the commission.

"I decided to issue one order, not 65 orders, and to make that one order go. The way to do it, I decided, was to put the order in such form that failure to comply with it would create not one offense, but a series of offenses.

Order Issued Last January.

"In January I issued the order. It was that not more than one person should stand in the cars for every two persons occupying seats. This is not the ideal condition of a seat for every passenger, but it allows freedom of movement through the car and keeps people from having to stand jammed together, breathing and coughing into each other's face.

The order was so worded that every overcrowded car constituted a violation. It was based on the city's power to forbid the maintenance of any conditions which are a menace to public health.

"As was to be expected, the companies disputed the Health Commissioner's authority to make any such order, and as was also to be expected, they proposed to bring a test case in court. A test case would run through the season, maybe through two seasons, and they would leave the service as it was. Then, when they lost the test case, they would be out only one fine of $250.

"So my reply to the suggestion of a test case was that I would not have one test case, but that I was quite willing to have 1000 test cases. The Health Department, I stated, was quite ready to gather evidence by wholesale and to pile up any number of prosecutions.

Multiplicity of Test Cases Planned.

"Well, the companies complied. I had only Manhattan and Brooklyn in mind when I issued the order, but in a few days I began to receive letters from Staten Island, thanking me for the improvement in conditions on the trolley cars there. I wasn't after the Staten Island street car people, but they seemed to think I was, and reformed before we knew how bad they were." (A case of "the wicked flee when no man pursueth.")

"The companies have never acknowledged, in so many words, the Health Commissioner's right to regulate them. But they have complied with the order, and that was the main thing. Mr. Shonts of the Interborough (Subway and 'L') writes me formal letters, in which he questions my authority, but the Interborough complies.

"The Interborough has been notified that it must keep up its winter schedule of cars in the subway through the summer, instead of slackening up as in past summer seasons. But in the cars which run in the open air, my jurisdiction ceases when they raise the windows. It may be just as uncomfortable to stand in a crowded car in summer as in winter—perhaps even more so—but it is not the means of communicating disease to any great extent, so far as can be demonstrated. If the Public Service Commission wishes to improve summer conditions it has the chance to do so."

One straphanger to two seated persons may not seem, to St. Louisans, exactly like a great reform. But it must be remembered that New York is the home of the traction sardine, and that the skilled employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. have achieved the feat of packing, with their hands, 100 standing persons into the aisle and vestibule of a bridge car seating 40.

The public must do its part in helping to get street car comfort, Dr. Goldwater says. People must learn not to insist on massing in the first car, leaving perfectly good cars behind it, half empty. The New York papers have aided the doctor in impressing this upon the public.

Dr. Goldwater's Mission Here Was to Find Man to Take His $7500 Job

DR. GOLDWATER'S visit to St. Louis last week was made, in part, in order to look for a man to fill his place as Health Commissioner of the City of New York. The post pays $7500 a year, and the department has 3400 employes.

Dr. Goldwater recently told Mayor Mitchel that he wished to be relieved of his duties of the past two years and a half, and to return to private practice and hospital work. The Mayor consented to let him go, on condition that he would find another Health Commissioner for the city. There was no limitation of residence, he was told, so long as the man selected was an American citizen.

The commissioner said he would see what he could do. He went to Chicago before coming here, and talked to some men who have attained note in the public health service and in hospital work. A report that he had determined on a Chicago man was telegraphed from that city to New York newspapers.

But when in St. Louis, Dr. Goldwater said he had not made up his mind, and that he was going to interview more men, some of them in St. Louis. He would not name anyone whom he had seen here, or whom he expected to see, aside from the medical men whom he met at the Washington University celebration.

Ailments of Men Happily Overcome

Successfully Tried by Many.

Undoubtedly the following suggestion will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their strength, find themselves in a run-down condit[illegible] before the three score and ten [illegible]lotted to life's pleasures and enj[illegible]ments are reached.

It is presumed to be infallible [illegible] highly efficient in quickly restor[illegible] in "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality and melancholia.

By taking it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's run-down condition and expensive fees are avoided.

Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of emba[illegible]rassment even when the public lea[illegible] suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health, and all the happiness accompanying it, let it be stated that the prescription calls only for three-grain Cadomene tablets, in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration. The tablets contain no opiates or habit-forming drugs, so a physician's prescription is not necessary. Well stocked pharmacies supply these tablets which possess the most wonderful tonic, invigorating powers imaginable. The effect of their use is soon apparent in new strength and nerve force.—ADVERTISEMENT.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—ADVERTISEMENT.

CANADIAN GRAVEYARD IN FLANDERS "VERY LARGE;" REVERSES DESCRIBED

Record Officer Tells How Commander, Rallying Wavering Battalion, Was Killed as He Flourished a Cane.

OTTAWA, Ontario, May 1.—The story of what he describes as "a great and glorious feat of arms," the desperate battle fought by the Canadian division to check the recent German advance near Ypres, was told in a cable communiciation from Sir Max Aitken of the Canadian record office, given out by the Militia Department here today.

The account describes how the Canadians, the majority of them raw recruits, met the German rush after the latter had released the asphyxiating gases, and how, although greatly outnumbered, they succeeded with heavy losses, in recovering four British guns, and much ground by a brilliant dash.

"On April 22," the account continues, "the Canadian division held a line of roughly 5000 yards, extending in a northwesterly direction from the Ypres-Roulers Railway to the Ypres-Poelcapelle Road, and connecting at its terminus with the French troops. The division consisted of three infantry brigades in addition to the artillery brigades."

After telling of the release of the gas forcing the French backward, Sir Max reported that this left the Canadian division "with its left in the air," an extremely grave condition. It became imperatively necessary greatly to extend the Canadian lines to the left rear.

Four British Guns Captured.

"In the course of the confusion which followed upon the readjustment of position," the account says, "the enemy, who had advanced rapidly after his initial successes, took four British 4.7 guns in a small wood to the west of the village of St. Julien, two miles in the rear of the original French trenches. The enemy's attack developed with particular intensity upon the apex of the newly formed line running in the direction of St. Julien.

"In the course of the night of the 22d, and under the heaviest machine gun fire, this wood where the four guns had earlier been captured by the enemy, was assaulted by the Canadian-Scottish One Hundred and Sixtieth Battalion of the Third Brigade and the Tenth Battalion of the Second Brigade.

"The battalions, after a very fierce struggle, took the position at the point of the bayonet. At midnight the Second Battalion, under Col. Watson and the Toronto regiment, Queen's Own (Third Battalion) under Lieutenant-Colonel Rennie, both of the First Brigade brought up much-needed reinforcements.

"All through the following day and nights, these battalions shared the fortunes and misfortunes of the Third Brigade. An officer who took part in the attack describes how the men about him fell under the fire of the machine guns, which, he said, played upon them 'like a watering pot.'

"But the line never wavered. When one man fell another took his place, and with a final shout the survivors of the two battalions flung themselves into the wood. The German garrison was completely demoralized and the impetuous advance of the Canadians did not cease until they reached the far side of the wood and entrenched themselves in position so dearly gained.

Attack Developed Rapidly.

"They had, however, the disappointment of finding that the guns had been blown up by the enemy and later in the same night, a most formidable concentration of artillery fire sweeping the wood made it impossible for them to hold the position for which they had sacrificed so much.

"The fighting continued without intermission all through the night. At 6 a. m. on Friday the 23d, it became apparent that the left was becoming more and more involved and a powerful German attempt to outflank it developed rapidly.

"It was therefore decided to try to give relief by a counter attack upon the first line of German trenches, now far advanced from those originally occupied by the French. This was carried out by the Ontario First and Fourth Battalions of the First Brigade, under Brigadier-General Mercer, acting in combination with a British brigade.

"It did not seem that any human being could live in the shower of shot and shell in which began to play on the advancing troops. They suffered terrible casualties. For a short time every other man seemed to fall, but the attack was pressed even closer and closer. The Fourth Canadian Battalion, at one moment came under a particularly withering fire. For a moment it wavered.

Rallies Wavering Men, Is Killed.

"Its most gallant commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Burchall, carrying, after an old fashion, a light cane, cooled and cheerfully rallied his men and at the very moment when his example had infected them, fell dead at the head of his battalion.

"With a cry of anger they sprang forward as if to avenge his death. The astonishing attack, which followed, pushed home in the face of direct frontal fire made in broad daylight by battalions whose names should live forever in the memories of soldiers, was carried to the first line of German trenches. After a hand-to-hand struggle, the last German who resisted was bayonetted and the trench was won.

"This trench represented in the German advance, the apex in the breach which the enemy had made in the original line of the allies and it was two and a half miles south of that line. This charge, made by men who looked death indifferentially in the face, savod the Canadian left. It also secured and maintained during the most critical moment of all, the integrity of the allied line.

"At 4 o'clock on the morning of Friday, the 23d, a fresh emission of gas was made both upon the Second Brigade, which had continued to hold the line up to the pivotal point. The Forty-eighth Highlanders were dismayed and their trench became intolerable. The battalion retired from the trench recovered themselves and reoccupied it.

"It was clear that several German divisions were attempting to crush or drive back the Third Brigade, and in any event to use their enormous numerical superiority to sweep around and overwhelm our left wing. The last attempt partially succeeded. German troops swung past the unsupported left of the brigade and slipping in between the wood and St. Julien, added to the torturing anxieties of the long-drawn-out struggle, by the appearance, and, indeed, for the moment, the reality of isolation from the brigade base.

Major Killed, Captain Wounded.

"In the exertions made by the Third Brigade during this supreme crisis, Maj. Norsworthy, already almost disabled by a bullet wound, was bayonetted and killed. Capt. McQuaig of the same battalion was seriously wounded in a hurriedly constructed trench which he refused to leave.

"On Friday afternoon the left of the Canadian line was strengthened by important reinforcements of British troops amounting to seven battalions." From this time forward the Canadians also continued to receive further assistance on the left from a series of French counter attacks pushed in a northeasterly direction from the canal bank."

"The fire of the artillery of the enemy continually grew in intensity," the account says. "It became evident that the Canadian salient could no longer be maintained against the overwhelming superiority of numbers by which it was assailed. Slowly, stubbornly and contesting every yard the defenders gave ground until the salient gradually receded from the point where it had originally aligned with the French, and fell back upon St. Julien.

"Soon it became evident that even St. Julien, exposed from right and left, was no longer tenable in the face of overwhelming numerical superiority. The third brigade was, therefore, ordered to retreat further south, selling every yard of ground dearly. But it was found impossible without hazarding far larger forces to disentangle the detachment of the Royal Highlanders of Montreal, 13th battalion, and of the Royal Montreal Regiment, 13th battalion. The brigade was ordered not a moment too soon to move back. It left these units with heavy hearts.

"Died Worthily of Canada."

"The German line rolled over the deserted village, but for several hours after the enemy had become master of the village, the sullen and persistent rifle fire which survived showed that they were not yet master of the Canadian rear. They died, they died, worthily of Canada.

"The enforced retirement of the Third Brigade—and to have stayed longer would have been madness—reproduced for the Second Brigade, commanded by ond Oldest Turner Society Will Commemorate 65th Anniversary This Week.

e St. Louis Gymnastic Society will orate its sixty-fifth anniversary with Alpine festival, Friday, Saturday and day, at St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 outeau avenue. The society is the ond oldest Turner association in the ted States. It has won many med- and cups in contests in this country d in Europe.

The setting of the Alpine Festival will the idyllic mountain village of liersee, where a popular turnfest is progress. On Friday the Turners and eir guests will assemble in the mar- t square at Schliersee. The village ill be decorated with flags and lan- rns, and with its background of moun- in, forest and a number of Swiss cot- ges—the cottages serving as booths, hooting galleries and other concessions will give the hall of the St. Louis Turnverein a truly Alpine aspect.

The stage also will present magnificent mountain scenery and there will be gymnastic exercises, acrobatic and circus acts and Schliersee peasant comedians, Schuhplattler (Alpine dances) and folk songs.

At the entrance to the hall every visitor will be provided with a Tyrolese hat, or cap and belt to make uniformity of appearance a characteristic feature of the occasion, but all the Turners, especially members of the St. Louis Turnverein, are to appear in complete Tyrolean costume.

The introduction of the festivities will be a procession of the Turners with their flags and standards entering the market place of Schliersee, accompanied by the villagers.

Paul Sommer, president of the St. Louis Turnverein, will welcome the Turners and their guests.

The "bears' den" and other subterranean apartments will be transformed into a "Muenchener Kindl's Cave," where women, clad in the characteristic "Muenchener Kindl" costumes, will minister to the thirst of the visitors. Huge beer barrels will serve as tables, and the walls will be tastefully adorned with appropriate mottoes, armorial designs, drinking vessels, humorous sketches, etc., giving the "Muenchener Kindl" the appearance of a real Alpine inn, where Muenchener sausages, radishes and Alpine delicacies will be served by pretty "Muenchener Kindls." The latter also will entertain the visitors with the celebrated dance, the "Muenchener Kindls."

The third day of the anniversary celebration, Sunday, will be given over to a children's festival, joining old and young in an evening song and dance, enriched by a number of classical statuary and living Defregger pictures, posed by the Turners and members of visiting societies. A sociable "Kommers" will form a fitting conclusion of the three days' festivities.

The natives in charge of the various booths will be Mmes. Albert Rubin, "trip to San Francisco;" A. Prag, coffee and ice cream; William Landgrebe, country stores, by Thym, candy; Henry Baumgartner, novelties and stein; O. J. Hippenmeyer, cigars and cigarettes, and Harry Dreibuss, registration. Misses Elsie Baldenweck, trip to San Francisco; Elsa Schamm, flowers, and Wolferth, fancy work.

How Canadians Fought and Died By Ypres Canal

Brigadier-General Curry, the position of the Third Brigade, itself at the moment of the withdrawal of the French. Gen. Curry flung his left flank around, and in the crisis of this immense struggle, held his line of trenches from Thursday afternoon until Sunday afternoon. He did not abandon them. There were none left. They had been obliterated by artillery. He withdrew his undefeated troops from the fragments of his field fortified and the hearts of his men were as completely unbroken as the parapets of his trenches were completely broken.

"After a very formidable setback the enemy captured St. Julien, opening up a new line of advance, but by this time further reinforcements had arrived. Again it became evident that the situation dictated an offensive movement, as the surest method of arresting farther progress. Gen. Alderson, commanding the reinforcements, directed an advance by a British brigade which had been brought up in support As the troops making it crept through the Canadian left and center, many of them going to certain death, they paused for an instant with deep throated cheers for Canada, indicating the warm admiration which the Canadian exertions had excited in the British army.

"The advance was costly, but could not be gainsaid, and the German advance along the line was arrested."

Driven South of St. Julien.

Despite this check, the account says, the Second and Third Brigades were gradually driven, fighting every yard, upon a line from Fortuin, south of St. Julien, in a northeasterly direction towards Passchandaele. There the two brigades were relieved by two British brigades "after exertions as gloriously fruitful, and, alas as costly as soldiers have ever been called upon to make."

On Monday morning Gen. Barry was again called upon to lead his shrunken Second Brigade, reduced to a quarter of its original strength, into action at the apex of the line which position the brigade held all that day. On Wednesday it was relieved and retired to the rear. "Not a Canadian gun was lost in the long battle of retreat."

Concluding his account, Sir Max wrote: "The empire is engaged in a struggle without quarter and without compromise against an enemy still superbly organized, still immensely powerful, still confident that its strength is the mate of its necessity. To arms then, and still to arms. The graveyard of Canada in Flanders is very large."

DANVILLE (ILL.) COUNCIL PUTS TOWN OFF THE LIST OF OASES

Fact That Township and Newly-Elected Mayor Are "Wet" Is Ignored.

DANVILLE, Ill., May 1.—Seventy-six saloons were voted out of Danville at a special meeting of the new City Council today, by a vote of 8 to 6. The eight dry Aldermen, under the leadership of Capt. Edwin Winter, late Progressive candidate for State Treasurer, stood together in refusing new licenses. Despite the fact that Danville Township went "wet" three weeks ago by 1515 and the city of Danville elected a wet Mayor two weeks later by a plurality of 2502, the City Council is dry, four of the seven new Aldermen being of that way of thinking.

There is now no place along the Wabash Railway between Lafayette, Ind., and East St. Louis, 224 miles, where one may obtain a drink. On the Big Four between Indianapolis and Peoria there are no wet towns, and on the New York Central and the Cairo division of the Big Four between Chicago and Cairo there is only one saloon town.

The dry Councilmen propose to hold up a number of Mayor Lewman's appointments and have agreed upon a slash of all appropriations except the police and firemen's budget.

OUSTED PASTOR IN NEW CHURCH

ABILENE, Kan., April 30—Last fall a church case of unusual interest was tried in District Court here, and the Rev. L. Brauer was declared to have been legally ousted from the pastorate of the German Evangelical Church at Shady Brook.

Some members of the congregation, lifelong friends of the ousted minister, said that they would not worship with another pastor, and they soon raised enough money to build a handsome church near the one of which Mr. Brauer was formerly pastor. This church has just been dedicated.

WAR INCREASES BRITISH WAGES; FEWER ARE IDLE

Laboring Classes Are Receiving Some Compensation for Higher Cost of Living.

VACANT JOBS NUMEROUS

Apparent Decreases in Number of Charity Wards Admitted to Be Deceptive.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 20.—War as a wage raiser has brought to a considerable proportion of the laboring classes in England some compensation for the increased cost of living. Social workers estimate that the increased cost of living average is at least 10 per cent, while the average increase in wages is not over 5. The plentiful supply of overtime work, available in most trades, makes it easy for most workmen to more than even matters.

The upward tendency of the English workingman's wages was very marked in March. According to the official Board of Trade reports, the increases granted during the month reached a total of nearly $365,000. The number of people who shared in the increase was 440,000

Increased wages in some of the leading branches of industry are summed up briefly as follows:

Some Leading Increases.

Railway men—All-round increase of 75 cents a week.

Longshoremen—Increases varying from 25 cents to $2 a week.

Policemen—War bonus of 75 cents a week upwards.

Carpenters—War bonus of $1 to $1.50 a week.

General Laborers—Increase of 75 cents to $1.50 a week.

Miners—Employers generally offer 10 per cent advance in pay; miners demand 20.

Postal employes, including telephone and telegraph workers—Increase of $1 a week has been demanded.

Gas Workers—Increases averaging $1 a week.

Bakers—Increase of $1.25 a week asked, but employers' offer of 75 cents accepted pending negotiations.

Textile Workers—Bonus for overtime work in factories doing work on army clothing.

Boot and Shoe Workers—War bonus of 5 to 10 per cent granted in some places.

Coopersmiths—Average wage before war, $9; now, $12.50.

Clerks—Some increases; 180,000 grocers' assistants have asked readjustment wages; similar movements pending in other branches.

Engineering and Building Trades Workers—Some sections have secured substantial increases.

The number of unemployed in Great Britain shows a large falling off the past February and March as compared with the corresponding months of last year. The Board of Trade's Labor Gazette prints statistics from the Government's 403 labor exchanges, according to which there were 87,004 names on the register last month as against 100,616 for February and 123,714 for March of last year.

Vacant Jobs More Numerous.

The number of vacancies in employment reported to the exchanges also show an increase over the late winter of 1914, having a daily average of 5746, or 100 more than the average for February and 1600 more than the average for March of last year.

London passed through the winter with fewer cases of destitution demanding relief from the poor funds than any winter within the memory of the present Poor Law officials.

The war, in fact, has enabled many thousands of people belonging to the classes which usually must be helped, to dispense with this kind of relief, and has even put them in possession of funds more than sufficient to meet their demands. London's pauper population has decreased steadily during the past three months.

The London Guardians, at the beginning of 1915, were providing for 100,000 paupers. This was a decrease of 2500 from the corresponding date a year before. April 1 showed the total decreased by a further 3000.

It is evident, however, that these decreases are, in part at least, deceptive, being accounted for, not by improved conditions, but by the fact that a great deal of relief is being administered by new agencies, such as the special war relief funds and the old age pensions.

AGED AUSTRIAN RULER IN GOOD HEALTH, WORKING HARD

Monarch, in Eighty-Fifth Year, Rises Soon After Four, and Is Active All Day.

VIENNA, May 1.—Notwithstanding the labor and ceaseless anxieties caused by the war, Emperor Francis Joseph is said to be in better health and physical condition than for years. He has gone through a trying winter without the least trace of a cough or cold, and his activity and enormous capacity for work astonish his ministers and others brought in contact with him.

Rising every morning very soon after 4 o'clock, the monarch, now in his eighty-fifth year, devotes practically the entire day to the affairs of state. The intervals for rest are very short. Only meals and a walk in the private garden adjoining his apartments in the castle of Schoenbrunn draw the Emperor from his desk. His appetite is excellent.

Much to his disappointment, the court physician has ordered him to stop his visits to the wounded soldiers in the Vienna hospitals. There was the danger of the venerable ruler getting into a draught or being overtaken by a shower, and so it was deemed best to confine his outdoor trips to walking in the Kammergarten.

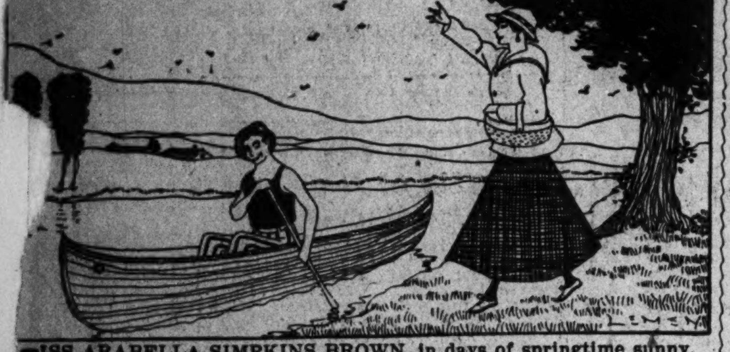
Jests and Jingles
By
W. H. JAMES

ARABELLA CLOSE TO NATURE.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, in days of springtime sunny,
Delights to wander far from town, and says it's really funny
How some prefer the city parks to nature's wilder glories ere there are thrushes, jays and larks and trees grow seven stories.
weater and a canvas skirt, a sun hat wide and slouchy, pair of shoes that do not hurt or make the wearer grouchy, basket full of home-made lunch, a ticket on the "plugger," box of chocolate fudge to munch; no comfort could be snugger, ile speeding through the country side the rails they're gaily pounding, d by them fields and fences glide, and joy of life's abounding.
e glory of the pathless wood, a dabble in the river,
e purling water feels so good, although it makes one shiver.
ride in Willie's red canoe, and then a little fishing;
e fish would be a lonesome crew without those lines a-swishing.
d though she never catches one through hours of patient waiting, e'll tell you it is lots of fun, with Will to do the baiting.
d when the sun is going down you'll see a happy maiden me riding back into the town, her arms with blossoms laden.
e good that comes from such a day cannot be told in figures,
Tuesday you will hear her say: "My! What is good for chiggers?"

THE SOLE SURVIVOR.

You can't catch me," said the rm.

'Why not?" asked the early bird.

'Probably you didn't notice the n on the gate. I'm not to be ught."

How's that?"

Because I'm the St. Louis zoo."

Are you all of it?"

Yes. The rest of it froze to death winter quarters."

IOVING DAY IN TURKEY.

Hello, is this Bosphorus 2328?"

Yes, ma'am."

Vell, we just wanted to tell you to deliver those new veils we red. We are about to move, but don't know the new address."

Who is this talking, please?"

The harem."

THE LAW'S DELAY.

Binks: I've been here two hours and they haven't done anything yet.

Jinks: O, yes they have. They have cleared up some very knotty law points that all the lawyers and the Judge knew about before.

Binks: Then why don't they get along faster?

Jinks: Because they can get a brief slower.

Binks: Is a brief so necessary?

Jinks: O, yes. They couldn't get along without a brief.

Binks: Then a brief isn't really brief?

Jinks: That seems to be the long and the short of it.

Binks: Do the lawyers always talk?

Jinks: No. Sometimes they make motions.

The Mole Race
BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

OGTOWN DOWNS were never lovelier in the warm light of Spring. The sward was of that texture in which moles de- t, and no greater Saturday after- n crowd had ever come into town. k of Dogtown were the greening Illinois hills and before it swept the Mississippi — beautiful under the noonday sun.

"Great day for the race!" said everyone.

It was a great day, and with wheat at war prices the betting was brisk.

Brant Dabbs was showing a mole-colored mole at the general store.

"You ain't enterin' that muskrat, be you?" asked one of the men from downriver.

"Muskrat nuthin'!" Brant retorted. "That's a thoroughbred revolvin' mole bred on bluegrass an' sassafras roots. I've got $50 on that mole, an' I feel the same as if I had it in Gover'mint bonds."

The Bill Williams moles attracted a good deal of attention. Bill had good moles, and was always a competitor in the annual race on Dogtown Downs. People said his moles had an advantage by reason of being so poor and skinny, but Bill never resented that. He opined—Bill always opined—that the going underground was peculiar and a fat mole could not fan the dirt past him fast enough to do any good in a race.

There was one red mole from the other side of the ridge. None of the Dogtown experts knew much about red moles. This one looked thick in front for headlong work, and he did not seem to have the clearance muscles in his backlegs.

Squire Applegate was up from Coon Creek with a mauve mole which had supporters. A $10 bill which the Squire had brought up with him was especially enthusiastic about the mauve mole.

"I've had that mole out ev'ry mornin' since the frost got out of the ground" said the Squire. "He's goin' like a submarine."

"Moles is moles," ventured the Ferryman. "They ain' nuthin' whichever like gophers an' woodchucks. This gray mole in the tin box I calls Cemetery Tom because he ain' happy outside 'n a graveyard. He'd ruther work the grass up into little ridges in a country graveyard than eat asparagus roots. Moles is got personality, same as folks, an' he's a lugubrious mole. Look at the expression in his face. If that ain' mournful I never heerd no dog howl at night."

AT 2 o'clock they repaired to the Downs. The Woodchopper from Deep Lake acted as master of ceremonies. He had a quartet of wood moles in the race. They apparently carried his all, for he talked to them quietly on the way to the Downs, and patted each of them affectionately as he turned them over to his sons, who were to "set them down" in the race.

"Friends," the Woodchopper announced, "we are about to witness the great annual mole race on Dogtown Downs. The entrance fee is $1 per mole, an' the winner takes all. The conditions of the race are as follows: The gentlemen who are to set the moles down will take them to the center of the Downs, where a row of startin' holes has been dug in the ground. At the word 'Go!' each starter will set his moles down, an' the mole that goes the greatest distance in exactly 30 minutes, no matter which way he goes or how many times he crosses his trail, wins the money.

"Is the starters ready?"

"They is," answered the Ferryman.

"Then, go!" shouted the Woodchopper.

There were about 50 moles in the race, each with its starter following it about on the grass. The excitement was tremendous. The Dogtown band played "Get Out and Get Under."

Brant Dabbs dashed about in the crowd flashing his money.

"Five dollars even on the revolvin' mole against the field!" he cried.

"Which is him?" somebody asked.

"That's him runnin' that streak up an' down the field!" he cried.

"I thought moles worked at night," said the shoe drummer from St. Louis.

"These is trained moles" answered the Storekeeper. "Some o' these moles has run in this race regularly fer three years. You notice they had to start some of them two or three times. Them was the young moles learnin' the game. The old ones never do that. The moment they're set down they begin corrugatin' the groun'."

"Fifteen minutes!" shouted the Woodchopper.

"That mole goin' up the hill is Cemetery Tom," said the Ferryman, indicating a rapidly-rising corrugation off on the right. "The graveyard's off that way."

This greatly amused the crowd, and when the wrinkle in the earth disappeared over the ridge the Ferryman was encouraged to bet another $2.

"Where is the red mole?" somebody asked.

"That's him workin' a scroll in the inside of the field, followed by the man in the coonskin cap," a visitor from the red mole country explained. "That red mole'll fool 'em all. He's figgered it out this way: The goin's good in there, an' he ain' givin it up fer sumpin' with wire grass an' gravel in it. It's mileage counts in this race, an' that red mole knows it. He's got brains. All red moles has."

There was suddenly a yelling and running toward a point on the Downs.

Twin Calves Exactly Alike.

COLUMBIA, La., May 1.—A very unusual thing in the history of Jersey cattle occurred here. A cow owned by Dr. S. H. Brown gave birth to twins. Both calves are females of normal size, in good condition and as much alike as it is possible for two things to be.

She Followed Friend's Advice

After trying Fruitola and Traxo, Mrs. L. C. Clark, 840 Melba St., Dallas, Texas, wrote to the Pinus laboratories as follows:

"I have been a sufferer from gall-stones, and Fruitola and Traxo was recommended and I am glad to say I took advantage of your most wonderful medicine, with wonderful results."

Fruitola and Traxo are two remedies that are used in combination. Fruitola acts on the intestinal organs as a powerful lubricant, to the great relief of the patient. Traxo is a compound of splendid tonic properties, of special value in strengthening and restoring the system that has been weakened by constant suffering.

The Pinus laboratories have many letters on file testifying to the merit of Fruitola and Traxo; letters from people who have used the remedy and know from actual experience what it has done for them. For the convenience of the public, arrangements have been made to supply Fruitola and Traxo through leading drug stores. A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained without expense by writing to the Pinus Co., Monticello, Ill.

D. M. PARRY, ILL A YEAR, SUSPECTS HE WAS DOPED

Former National Manufacturers' Association Head Recovering From Strange Sickness.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 1.—D. M. Parry, formerly president of the National Manufacturers' Association, and for many years a leading business man here, is recovering slowly from the effects of a mysterious illness with which he was stricken suddenly about a year ago while on a trip around the world with John Kirby, also a former president of the Manufacturers' Association.

Parry and Kirby, accompanied by the latter's secretary, started on a world tour in behalf of the Manufacturers' Association, with the special object of studying labor conditions in Australia. They were on their way home from China when Parry became ill. When two or three days out at sea Parry's actions attracted the attention of Kirby. Finally Parry was stricken with an acute illness.

Regaining Health Slowly.

It was feared he would die before reaching San Francisco. His family here was notified and Mrs. Parry was at San Francisco when the boat arrived. He was taken to a hospital in San Francisco, where he was kept several weeks before he could be moved to Indianapolis, where he has been regaining his health and strength very slowly.

Parry's mind is said to have been a blank for some time after the attack aboard the boat. His close friends say he does not understand how he became ill and that he has no remembrance of his trip after leaving Australia and until after he began to recover at San Francisco. His mind is clear now on what happened prior to the trip and after he began to recover.

Was in Rundown Condition.

One of Parry's closest friends says Parry told him recently he believed he was "doped" by someone before he took the boat in China. One of his near relatives says Parry told him he believed he was "doped" by someone. This relative, however, says Parry has no definite idea as to how anyone might have doped him or whether he and Kirby were followed by anyone who might have been determined to do them injury.

The physicians at San Francisco who had charge of the case diagnosed Parry's illness as uremic poisoning and treated him for that for several weeks. Parry was in a run-down physical condition before he started around the world and he has not been in business here since his return.

What a Mole Race Lacks in Speed It Has in Surprises

where two of the moles had encountered one another and were having a fight. One of them was the mauve mole from Coon Creek, which in doubling back from the river, where it was getting into soft sand, had collided with the revolving mole entered by Brant Dabbs. The revolving mole revolved around its opponent enough to raise a hillock about the size of a tub.

"He'll never win now unless the judges count them whirls," said Brant, and the rising sod finally indicated such a warmth of conflict that the Squire pulled off the sod and took his mole out.

"My mole ain't natcherly quar'lsome," he explained. "He's a good, law-abidin' mole; but when ye're racin' like that an' suddenly runs plump into another mole, like two Fords collidin', it's hard on a mole's patience. A mole figgers it that the other mole is tryin' to take advantage o' some of his relief work, or is tryin' to get it mixed up, an' that's too much for a mole."

The race was still at its height when the great voice of the Woodchopper rang over the down crying "Time's up!" Every man running a mole at once thrust a peg in the ground and recovered his mole.

"Ye ain' forgettin' that Cemetery Tom o' mine, be you?" asked the Ferryman.

"Where is he?" they asked.

"Last I seed o' him he was makin' for his fav-rit' haunt—the cemetery, with a boy foller'n," the Ferryman said.

The red mole had done 428 feet. One of the Woodchopper's moles turned in 503 feet. The Woodchopper's friends were jubilant.

"Now where's that Cemetery Tom," said one of the judges, and they all set off across the hill.

As they topped the ridge they raised the graveyard. The boy was sitting on an old tomb.

"Where's your mark?" they asked.

"It's here," he answered.

They checked it up—760 feet.

"An' to think how lugubrious that mole looks all the time, too," the Ferryman said.

Seven Miles of Boarding Places

Are listed in today's big REAL ESTATE and WANT DIRECTORY—150 per cent more than the two other St. Louis newspaper combined.

Class in Applied Christianity.

A men's class in social and applied Christianity has been organized at the North Presbyterian Church, St. Louis and Warne avenues, under the leadership of Dr. George B. Mangold, head of the School of Social Economy. The subject now being considered is "Problems of Marriage and Divorce." All men interested in the subject are invited to meet with the class at 10 a. m. today.

GERMAN BOOKS ARE BARRED

Skipper Keeps Promise to British Not to Deliver Them in America.

NEW YORK, Mal 1.—The Italian steamer Dante Alighieri, passing Gibraltar at midnight April 22 on her way from Genoa, Naples and Palermo for New York, was recalled by wireless at 2 a. m. because British officers at the fortress had heard she had aboard some German and Austrian books intended for use in spreading German and Austrian propaganda throughout the United States. The vessel put back to Gibraltar. There were eight cases of books listed. They were deep down in the hold with hundreds of tons of other cargo piled atop.

The boarding officers decided not to delay the steamer if the capttain would promise that the books would not be taken off the steamer on her reaching New York. Capt. Sturlez agreed to this and the books will go back, undisturbed.

Catholic Charities Conference Today.

The tenth conference of Catholic Charities of St. Louis will be held at St. Louis University Auditorium, 3642 Lindell boulevard, at 2:30 p. m. today.

Annual Phi Be Kappa Address.

The second annual Phi De Kappa address before the Beta Chapter of Missouri, Washington University, will be given Wednesday at 11 a. m., at Graham Memorial Chapel. Prof. George Oscar James, dean of the college and president of the chapter, will speak on "The Contingence of the Laws of Nature."

AUSTRALIA GIVING GREAT AID TO ALLIES' ARMIES

Entire Output of Woolen Mills Has Been Requisitioned by Defense Department.

MUTTON FOR FIGHTERS

Melbourne Company Also Contracts to Sell Russia $8,000,000 Worth of Shoes.

By Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 2.—Some idea of the part of Australasia as a component of the British Empire is playing in the war as a purveyor of supplies of a military kind for itself, Great Britain and the allies may be gathered from the following facts and figures:

The Defense Department has requisitioned the entire output of the various woolen mills throughout the Commonwealth for an indefinite time and the mill owners and managers are undertaking to do all in their power to facilitate the manufacture of the cloth and garments required by the department. Besides supplying each Australian soldier on active service with a uniform when he embarks on a troopship, the department engaged to supply him with a fresh uniform every three months while he is at the front.

Strain on the Woolen Mills.

At present the superintendent of army contracts, Capt. J. C. Ormiston, is requiring at once 1,112,000 yards of flannel, to say nothing of 200,000 woolen undershirts and 220,400 pairs of drawers of the same material. Australia being a country which, singularly enough, exports immense quantities of raw wool has few woolen or other textile establishments as yet. The strain upon the existing mills is enormous. Meantime a representative of the Federal Government has placed orders with a single woolen manufacturing firm in New Zealand for 96,000 navy sweaters, 212,000 knitted drawers, 200,000 knitted shirts, 240,000 pairs of socks and more than a million yards of flannel. It is doubtful, however, if all the woolen mills in New Zealand can cope with this order inasmuch as at present they are doing their utmost to keep the Dominion contigent's supplied with clothing of the above description.

300,000 Sheep in Storage.

In Sydney the whole of the mutton in cold storage within the metropolitan area—a supply variously estimated as numbering between 250,000 and 300,000 sheep—has been taken over on behalf of the Imperial authorities at prices already fixed at from 8 to 10½ cents a pound by agreement between the owners and the home and overseas authorities. Although the New South Wales Government is simply acting as the agent of the British Government, this is the biggest transaction of the kind that has ever been carried out in Sydney. The State Government is acting under a direct request from the government in England which was recently translated into an act of Parliament. The first consignment will consist of about 9000 refrigerated sheep, but much heavier consignments will be forwarded before long. The Imperial Government has engaged to provide the transportation.

$8,000,000 Worth of Shoes.

Meantime the state abattoirs at Homebush, near Sydney, will shortly be in full swing and sheep will be slaughtered at the rate of 6000 daily. The New South Wales authorities have been advised that the demand for the British army and navy is practically limitless.

A shoe company in Melbourne is negotiating with the Russian Government to supply it with a million and a half pairs of soldiers' shoes within 12 months at the rate of 120,000 pairs a month. The contract, if entered into, will involve nearly $8,000,000. The matter is not yet settled, however.

AMERICAN SLANG IN ENGLAND

Conductors Say "Step Lively" Instead of "Please 'Urry Up."

LONDON, April 30.—American slang and Yankeeisms are rapidly being incorporated into the speech of the people in England, owing to the vogue of American variety actors, ragtime songs and American books and plays. So one hears born and bred cockneys, who have never taken a four hours' trip from London, says the Globe, tell a person that he will "fix him up," with as much conviction as a Connecticut Yankee. Educated Englishmen and women not only get off Americanisms unconsciously, but seriously.

Newspaperdom has borrowed largely of its slang from the states in "story," "write-up," "thrown down," "cub," "live paper" and the like.

American business men have popularized in England such phrases as "made good" and "back to the woods," and "quick lunch" restaurants have sprung up. Even on the underground railways the conductors say "step lively," instead of the old "phase 'urry up." Other bits of current slang attributable to American influence, ragtime and otherwise, are: "The glad hand," "I don't think," "freeze on to," "makes one tired," "surest thing you know," and kindred expressions.

Flag Presented to Kindergarten.

Ransom Relief Corps No. 6 presented a flag to the Douglas School Kindergarten Thursday. Mrs. Ida Faskett, president of the corps, made the presentation speech. Miss Hazel Grimes responded. Mrs. Sallie McClure, patriotic instructor of the corps, gave a reading: "Old Glory." The small children gave a program.

Ethical Society Address.

Percival Chubb, leader of the Ethical Society, will deliver an address at Sheldon Memorial this morning on "John Huss, the Slavic Martyr," in celebration of the 500th anniversary of his martyrdom at Constance. The address is to be delivered at the invitation of a number of Bohemians of this city. The music will be by Bohemian composers.

Samuel Evans, Wool Broker, Buried.

The funeral of Samuel Evans, wool broker, took place yesterday afternoon, under Masonic auspices, from the Ellis parlors to Valhalla. He was 72 years old and had been in the wool business 48 years. The Raw Fur and Wool Association adopted resolutions Friday on the death of Evans and sent a floral tribute.

"TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET

Tiz For Swollen, Tender, Aching, Calloused Feet and Corns—Instant Relief!

A year's foot comfort for 25 cents.

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, bad-smelling, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "TIZ." "TIZ" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "TIZ" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "TIZ." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think of it.—ADV.

RUBBISH WILL BE TAKEN MONDAY BY CITY WAGONS

To Be Collected Free of Charge, but No Ashes or Garbage Will Be Hauled.

City wagons will start out tomorrow morning collecting tin cans and rubbish and will cart it away free of charge. Citizens are requested to put all rubbish and tin cans in receptacles to facilitate handling and save time. No ashes or garbage will be hauled.

All day yesterday Boy Scouts waged war on the tin cans and put them to rout from their strongholds, the vacant lots. These they will transform into playgrounds and flower and vegetable gardens, if Mrs. J. V. Cohick, Chief of the Red Cross Garden Staff, can induce owners and real estate agents to co-operate with her and her committee by permitting such use. Many owners have signified their willingness to co-operate in the garden and playground idea.

The Eugene Field School, under the direction of W. J. Stevens, who instituted the garden movement in St. Louis, has transformed the vacant lot at the southeast corner of Olive street and Taylor avenue, adjacent to the Eugene Field school, into a flower garden.

The Clean-up and Paint-up idea originated with Allen W. Clark, and has become a national movement.

The following wagon schedule will be caried out during the week:

Tuesday: Grand to River, Russell to Pine.

Wednesday—Grand to River, Pine to St. Louis avenue.

Thursday—Easton to North Market, Cora to Grand; North Market to Natural Bridge, Cora to Glasgow; Natural Bridge to Florissant, Newstead to Glasgow; College and Withers to St. Louis avenue, Glasgow and Florissant to River.

Friday—Cora to City Limits, Easton to St. Louis avenues; Grand to City Limits, Easton to Delmar.

Saturday: King's highway to City Limits, Delmar to Lindell; Grand to King's highway, Delmar to Meramec.

Monday, May 3.—Grand to Minnesota, Loughborough to City Limits.

Tuesday: Minnesota to River. Loughborough to City Limits.

Wednesday: Grand to Virginia, Eichelberger to Loughborough.

Thursday: Virginia to River, Eichelberger to Loughborough.

Friday: Grand to Compton, Meramec to Eichelberger.

Saturday.: Compton to River, Meramec to Eichelberger.

YOUNG MEN OUT OF ARMY ARE BERATED IN FRANCE

Actor Hissed on Stage at Lyons and Forced to Explain That Enlistment Was Refused.

PARIS, May 1.—Few young or middle-aged men are to be seen in the provinces of France now, but there are enough of them promenading the Paris boulevards to exasperate mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts of soldiers.

"Why isn't he at the front?" has been a constantly growing question, generally followed by a denunciation, and sometimes resulting in deplorable incidents.

A young actor was hissed at Lyons when someone in the audience put that question. He asked for a hearing, and in a choked voice said that he was obliged to speak of something that he had tried for a long time to ignore himself.

"It makes no difference, now, though," he said. "The doctors give me only six months more to suffer. It would be a great consolation if I could spend that time fighting for France, but in spite of my supplications, they won't have me."

Many incurables have ben obliged in this way to disclose their secret sufferings. Many foreigners also who passed for French on the boulevards have declared they were Russian, English or Belgian. Deptuy Henri Gall! of Paris asked why they were not serving their respective countries. The reply was that the Russians were mostly political refugees who would be put into prison instead of the army if they returned, while England has no obligatory service, and many Belgians benefited from the old law under which circumscription was by lot.

NEW PARISH TO GIVE BAZAR

Entertainment to Be Provided on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The new parish of St. Luke the Evangelist will be given a formal welcome by the other parishes of the city at a grand bazar on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, at Knights of Columbus Building, 3549 Olive street.

The women will entertain in the afternoon of each day. In the evening there will be high class singing and theatrical numbers.

Dering Reorganization.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Firststeps toward the reorganization of the Dering Coal Co., a $10,000,000 corporation, said to own the largest coal tract in the country, were taken today, when Attorney Levy Mayer, on behalf of the Continental and Commercial National Banak of Chicago, and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York, bought stocks and bonds of the face value of $7,000,000, at auction for $681,500.

Academy of Science to Meet.

The Academy of Science of St. Louis ill meet at the Academy Building, 3817 live street, tomorrow night. Dr. H. Whelpley will give an address on American Indian Pottery," which will e illustrated with lantern slides and pecimens.

An Easy Way to Get at and Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its regenerative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Judge & Dolph Drug Co.'s 3 stores, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Welpert Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co.'s 5 stores and other leading druggists of St. Louis and vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.—ADV.

EADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer om headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week and till others have headaches occasionally, ut not at regular intervals. The best doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and in most other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what will remove it, so as to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take Anti-kamnia Tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the highest degree. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, 10c worth, 25c worth or more. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Sick headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terrors when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on, take two tablets, and in many cases the attack will be warded off. During an attack take one Tablet every two hours. The rest comfort which follow can be ob- in no other way. ine A-K Tablets bear the K gram. At all Drugists.—ADV.

UNDERSEA PERIL GIVES ENGLISH MOST CONCERN

Not of Serious Import, Heretofore, Nothing to Meet It Had Been Devised.

THE SUBMARINE TRAP

Next to Torpedo Boat Destroyers, New Iron Net Is Most Effective Against Enemy.

8 German Submarines That Have Been Sunk

THE German Government officially admits the loss of six submarines in the waters surrounding the British Isles; the British Government officially reports the destruction of eight; unofficial reports mention the destruction of no less than 19 German submarines since the beginning of the war. The list of the officially reported:

U8, sunk in the Straits of Dover by British destroyers Gurkha and Maori.

U9 sunk in North Sea, after fouling fishing nets, Feb. 28.

U12, rammed and sunk in North Sea by British destroyer Ariel, March 20.

U15, sunk by British cruiser Birmingham, North Sea, Aug. 9.

U18, sunk by British destroyer Badger in the North Sea, Nov. 23.

U29, sunk in the North Sea, March 25.

Submarine of U2 type sunk by French squadron in English Channel, March 4.

Submarine reported rammed and sunk by steamer Thoradis off Beachy Head, Feb. 26. German Government issued denial, but rewards were ordered paid by the English.

Special Correspondence to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, April 20.—It is scarcely possible to overestimate the importance the British Government attaches to the part of the submarine in the present war.

While Government officials discourage discussion of the "submarine menace" in the press, and toward the public assume the attitude that England has nothing greatly to fear from this kind of warfare, there can be no doubt that more time has been devoted to the solution of this than of any of the other great problems the war has yet presented; more zeal and energy are being expended in working out an adequate defense against the underwater boat "peril."

While the British Admiralty has followed the development of this type of sea fighter with the most watchful care and anxiety, there can be no question that the achievements of Germany's submarine fleet have opened the eyes of the British naval officials; so far they have surpassed the worst fears of those officials, and the proof of this statement is manifest in the energetic and cost-ignoring efforts to destroy Germany's submarine.

Outstanding Facts.

The outstanding facts of the submarine warfare to date are these:

That no part of the coast lines of England, Ireland and Scotland is exempt from the operations of submarines of the U29 and larger types.

That the larger and improved German submarine can operate efficiently within a radius of at least 1500 miles from their home base, and for cruises varying in length from two to three and possibly four weeks.

That their speed is sufficient to make them deadly against all but the fastest merchantmen and liners.

That submarines form no defense against submarines.

That the greatest foe to the submarine is the speedy torpedo boat destroyer.

That destruction is the almost inevitable end of every submarine engaged in constant active operations.

As the English people view the situation—and probably the same view is the Government's as well—this submarine warfare with Germany, which has already cost England scores of ships and many hundreds of lives, resolves itself into the question of whether Germany's submarine output can equal Britain's submarine destruction. And that question remains to be settled.

From the very best available information Germany had from 22 to 27 submarines of various types ready for actual service when the war began. No one knows just how many more were in process of construction. She is generally credited with being in a position to place at least 10 more of the U29 (or even improved) type in commission within a few months. It was also generally believed that several times that number had been "laid down."

Eight Have Been Destroyed.

The British Government has officially reported the destruction of eight German submarines, six of them since the official proclamation of the war zone. At least 10 other German submarines have at one time or another been reported destroyed by aircraft, merchantmen or the fire of French and Russian ships.

English airships have raided repeatedly German bases and yards where submarines are reported under construction. They have reported inflicting more or less serious damage, but there is no means of determining just how much.

The submarine's most effective enemy has proved to be the swift-steaming torpedo boat destroyer, and every torpedo boat destroyer the navy can possibly spare for this service is now engaged in incessantly patrolling the waters around the British Isles. These craft are augmented by large numbers of swift patrol and guard boats, always on duty, and supplemented by converted yachts.

But England has developed and used with some success another defensive weapon—"the submarine trap." This is a huge iron net that entangles the propeller of the underwater ship, closes around it, and holds the submarine helpless. These traps are buoyed in large numbers all along the coastlines of the British Isles, and when a submarine becomes entangled in one of them it means death to all her crew, unless they disentangle her before her supply of oxygen is exhausted.

HERPICIDE CO.

His Sweetheart

In the Spring a Young Man's Fancy Lightly Turns to Thoughts of Love.

To him she is always the same—the dearest, the sweetest, the prettiest girl in the world. In his heart she reigns supreme—his ideal of all that is best in womanhood.

His eyes reveal her to him as the possessor of a fascination and attractiveness of which nothing can deprive her. She may not wear elaborate and expensive dresses, she may not even have a pretty face, according to worldly standards. Her chiefest claim to beauty may even lie in a mass of glitering, fluffy, natural hair, growing on her own head. But certainly no hair can be charming or even attractive if it is not properly dressed and intelligently cared for. There is a subtle charm about beautiful hair that lends more to personal adornment than the combined skill of the beauty doctor and modiste.

To the girl or woman desiring always to be at her best and to make the most of Nature's richest gift, we recommend

Newbro's
Herpicide

A true test of efficiency for this well-known scalp prophylactic and hair beautifier is to begin its use in secret and see how quickly your friends will remark the improvement in your hair. They will tell you of an increased luster and brilliancy, they will marvel at the lightness and fluffiness of your hair and its freedom from traces of dandruff.

Herpicide is recognized everywhere as the rational remedy to eradicate dandruff contagion and to stop falling hair. A delightful hair dressing, with a dainty exquisite odor commends Newbro's Herpicide to the most fastidious tastes. There is no oil or grease in Herpicide and it does not stain or dye the hair. Stops itching due to dandruff almost instantly.

Send 10 cents in postage or silver for sample bottle to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 124-B, Detroit, Mich. Applications at prominent barber shops. Sold and Guaranteed at All Toilet Goods Counters.

Joplin Woman Is Restored by Remedy

Mrs. Hillman Took Treatment Two Years Ago—Has Been Well Ever Since.

Mrs. Ida Hillman of Joplin suffered from stomach ailments for twelve years. She followed the advice of several expert physicians and took a great deal of medicine. Two years ago she discovered Mayr's Wonderful Remedy—and she has been well since. Mrs. Hillman took but a few doses. She writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble almost twelve years. I tried many doctors but received no help until, while in Cleveland, Ohio, I read your notice in a paper and concluded to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. Since then I have felt like a new woman.

"I took only four bottles, but that was all that was needed to make me well. It has been almost two years and I have had no return of my trouble."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and around the heart. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.—ADV.

All Germs Ordered To Beat it—Git!

Searching Influence of a Remedy That Works Wonders.

The introduction of S. S. S. is at once a command to blood impurities to find a way out.

And what are blood impurities? They may be hypersecretions found in the mucous linings of the body; they may be acid accumulations known as rheumatism; they may be boils, pimples, eczema, acne and stubborn, indolent sores.

But examined closely, they are all germs that have gotten the upper hand, and it requires the flushing influence of S. S. S. to drive them out. And out they go when S. S. S. begins to circulate in the blood. It only requires five minutes to begin this influence, for it is a fact that in this limited time S. S. S. may be traced, in the perspiration, in the efflorescence from the lungs to show that it is at work. Germs, mind you, are of various kinds, but all are foreign to health, and S. S. S. is no respecter of destructive germs; it drives them all out, of whatsoever name they go by. Just get a bottle of S. S. S. of any druggist and soon you will observe a decided change. And if yours is a stubborn case, write to the Medical Adviser, care of The Swift Specific Co., 107 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. He is a regular physician, proud of his name by virtue of his distinguished family and is recognized as a foremost physician on his own merit.—ADV.

FRENCH ARMY NOW EXCELS GERMANY'S, WAR WRITER'S VIEW

Republic's Force Hammered Into Potent Machine, Says Post-Dispatch Correspondent.

SEES "WALL OF STEEL"

Fighters Taught to Use Their Brains; Peasants Rebuild Homes in Ear-Shot of Guns.

By E. ALEXANDER POWELL.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1915, by Press Pub. Co.)

HEADQUARTERS IN FIELD WITH FRENCH ARMY, April 29.—(Delayed in transmission.)—Before coming to France I was told that the French were very stingy with their war. I was told that the only fighting I would be permitted to see would be on the moving picture screens. But I found that I had been misinformed. They have been as generous with their war as a Kentucky Colonel with mint juleps.

Within 48 hours after my arrival at Gre du Nord I had been presented to the President of France on the field of battle, had seen a French division reviewed within sound of the German guns, had been taken into a bombarded city and a French priest had shown me the ruined beauties of his cathedral, while German shells were bursting in adjacent streets. A battery of the famous 75's was turned loose on the German trenches for my special benefit, and during the storm of German shrapnel which this interesting exhibition provoked the Post-Dispatch came within 20 yards of losing the services of its war correspondent.

I do not wish to give the impression, however, that these facilities for flirting with sudden death are handed out promiscuously to all who apply. To obtain me this opportunity to see the French fighting machine in action required the united influence of a Cabinet Minister, a British peer, two Ambassadors and a score of newspapers.

Trenches Inaccessible to Public.

I wonder if you who will read this over your coffee cups realize that, though the French trenches can be reached by motor car in 90 minutes from Rue de la Paix, it is as impossible for an unauthorized person to get within sound, much less within sight, of them as it would be for a tourist to stroll into Buckingham Palace and have a chat with King George. But when the Ministry of War has finally issued to you the magic yellow card, which, so far as this war is concerned, is the equivalent of Aladdin's lamp and the magic carpet put together and you have become for the time being a guest of the nation, your path is everywhere made smooth before you. I was escorted by a staff Captain in beautiful sky blue uniform, and other officers were waiting to explain things in the various divisions through which we passed. We traveled by automobile with a pilot car ahead and the baggage car behind, and we went so fast it needed, to tell about it, one to shout "Here they come," and another "There they go."

So complete were the arrangements that in the little inn of the Golden Apple at Villers Cottrets, where we stopped for lunch, we found the table decorated with flowers as if for a banquet, and a menu which began with lobster and ended with liquers. As we ate, the window panes rattled to the detonation of the German cannon.

Leaving Paris, white and beautiful in the spring sunshine, behind us, we tore down the historic highway which still bears the name of Route de Flandre. The houses of the city had thinned and disappeared, and we came to an open field, across which writher like monstrous yellow serpents, the zigzag lines of trenches. The whole countryside, from the Aisne straightway to the walls of Paris, is one vast network of trenches and barbed wire entanglements, and even in the improbable events of an enemy breaking through the present line he would be no better off than before.

I am something of a connoisseur when it comes to trenches, and if there are any more ingeniously designed ones than those which the French have built, I would like to see them. The fields between the trenches were being plowed by women driving sleek white oxen, but furrows were scarcely ever straight, for every few yards they would turn aside to avoid a turf-covered mound, surmounted by a rude cross, as for nearly fifty miles this portion of France is a vast cemetery.

We whirled through villages whose main streets are lined with blackened and broken shells of buildings. At once I felt at home. With this sort of thing I had grown only too familiar in Belgium. But here the Germans were careless or in a hurry, for they had left many houses standing. In Belgium they made a more finished job of it.

French Confidence in Army.

Nothing better illustrated the implicit confidence which the French people have in their army and in its ultimate success than the fact that in all of the towns through which we passed, the people are hard at work rebuilding their shattered homes, though the strokes of their hammers are echoed by the boom of German guns. They would not do this if they apprehended that there was a chance, even a slight chance, of the Germans coming back again.

To me there is something approaching the sublime in these impoverished peasants turning with stout hearts and smiling faces to the rebuilding of these homes and the retilling of their fields. To these toil-worn, patient men and women I lift my hat in respect and admiration. They, no less than their sons and husbands and brothers in the trenches, are fighting the battles of France.

As we drew nearer to the firing line the traditional scarlet trousers and kepies, still worn by the second line men, gave way to the new service uniforms of a peculiar bluish gray. There were soldiers everywhere. Every town and hamlet through which we passed was alive with them. The highways were choked with troops of all arms, dragoons with their steel helmets, linen-covered; zouaves in baggy red breeches; spahis in turbans, and Senagalese in tarbooches; chasseurs d'Afrique in sky-blue and scarlet; infantry of the line in all the shades of blue that can be produced by dyes or by the weather; mile-long strings of motor transports, field batteries, ambulances, with staring red crosses painted on their canvas hoods; pontoon trains, balloon corps, all the nuts and bolts and springs and screws which go to compose what has become perhaps the most efficient fighting machine the world has ever seen.

From what I have seen of the French army, I am convinced that it has been hammered and tempered into a more potent weapon than was the German army last September. Moreover, the human element is not lacking. Instead of being mere cogs, the French soldiers are encouraged to exert their ingenuity and to use their brains, and it is the men whith brains who are going to win this war.

When only a short distance in the rear of the firing line, at a place which, for obvious reasons, shall be nameless, we left the cars and proceeded on foot down a winding country road, which suddenly debouched in a great saucer-shaped valley. The gentle slopes were checkered with brown squares of fresh plowed fields and the green ones of sprouting ones of grain. From beyond the nearby ridge came the sullen mutter of artillery, and every now and then there appeared against the tourquoise sky what looked like a patch of cottonwood, but which was really bursting shrapnel.

The far end of the valley was filled with what appeared at first glance to be a low-hanging cloud of gray-blue mist, but which resolved itself as we drew near into dense masses of troops drawn up in review formation—infantry at the left, cavalry at the right, guns in the center. I heard much of the invisible qualities of the new field uniform of the French army, but had heretofore believed it inferior to the German green-gray. But I have changed my mind. At 300 yards 12,000 men could scarcely be distinguished from the landscape. The only colorful note was struck by the dragoons, who still retain their scarlet breeches, blue tunics and horse-tailed helmets, though the latter are now covered with gray linen.

At 3 o'clock a rolling cloud of dust suddenly appeared on the road from Compiegne, and out of it tore a long line of military cars, all save one in war coats of elephant gray. The exception was a low-slung racer, painted canary yellow. Tearing at top speed up the valley, it came to a sudden stop before the center of a mile-long line of soldiery.

Mile of Steel Formed.

A mile of fighting men stiffened to attention, a mile of rifle barrels formed a hedge of burnished steel, the drums gave the long roll and the 13 ruffles, the colors swept the ground, the bands burst into the splendid strains of the Marseillaise and the little man, gray-mustached, gray-bearded and inclined to stoutness, but with the unmistakable carriage of the soldier, walked briskly down the motionless lines.

I was having the privilege of seeing a President of France reviewing a French army almost within sight of the invader. It was under almost parallel circumstances that another President of another mighty republic might have reviewed another army, which was also fighting the battles of civilization upward of half a century ago.

President Poincare is hard to describe. He is the only French President within my memory who looks the part of a ruler. In his person is centered, as it were, the aspirations of France, for he is a native of Lorraine. He was Captain of the Alpine Chasseurs in his younger days, and shows the result of his military training in his bearing. In France they will tell you that the President is but the figurehead of the ship of state and that he does not count, but this President looks to me more like the helmsman, and there is no doubt but that he counts very much, indeed.

Were you to see him apart from official surroundings you might take him, with his air of energy and authority, for a great employer. Take 20 years from Andrew Carnegie and give him a military bearing, and you will have as good an idea as I can give you of the appearance of the war-time President of France. He wore a most curious dark blue uniform which was neither naval nor military, flat yachting cap and coat, buttoned to the neck, riding breeches and polished leggins.

At his right walked Minister of War Millerand and at his left Gen. ——, commanding the —— army, while behind trailed the brilliant troops in uniforms of blue and green and gray and khaki and scarlet.

After passing down the lines the President took his stand in front of a row of grouped standards and a dozen officers and men, who were to be decorated for gallantry in action. They ranged themselves before him. Stepping forward, he pinned to the breast of each man the coveted bit of ribbon and enamel and kissed him on either cheek, while the troops presented arms and the massed bands played the anthem. On general principles I should think that the President would rebel at having to kiss so many men, even though they are heroes and have been freshly shaved for the occasion.

As the picturesque ceremony was completed the aide-de-camp came running toward a group of staff officers with whom I was standing. "The President desires to meet Mon. Powell," he called. A moment later I found myself grasping a firm hand and looking into a pair of kindly but wonderfully penetrating steel gray eyes.

"These men who are about to pass before us, Mon. Powell," he said, "are not of our first line. They are all territorials, that is, men above 38 years of age. But they are fresh from the trenches. They have seen much fighting. They are all veterans. You will find no finer soldiers anywhere. See and judge them for yourself. And bear in mind that they are all citizen soldiers."

Topping a rise, they swept down upon us in line, column or a moving cloud of bluish gray, under sifting, simmering and slanting lines of steel.

Company after company, regiment after regiment and brigade after brigade swept past, business-like as a trip hammer and as resistless as a steam roller, moving with mechanical precision to the exultant strains of the march of the Sambre at Meuse.

These were the famous Poilus, the bearded ones, the men with hair on their chests. Their uniforms were not immaculate. They were faded by wind and rain and sometimes stained with blood. On their boots was the mud of the battlefields along the Aisne. Fresh from the trenches, they were as pink-cheeked as athletes and they marched with the buoyancy of men in high spirits and in perfect health. Here before me was a section of that wall of steel which is slowly, but oh, so surely, pushing back the spiked helmets toward the Rhine.

Hard on the heels of the infantry came the guns, the famous Seventy-fives, half a dozen batteries of them, at a spanking trot, beyond all question the finest field artillery in the world. A little space to let the foot and guns get out of the way and then we heard the wild and shrill clangor of the cavalry trumpets pealing the charge. Over the rise they came, helmeted giants on gigantic horses. The earth shook beneath their gallop. The scarlet breeches of the riders gleamed fiery in the sunlight, horsehair plumes of helmets floated out behind. Sword blades, held on high, formed a forest of glistening steel.

As they went thundering past us they rose in their stirrups and, high above the clank, clank of steel and the trumple of hoofs rose the deep-mouthed roar which has come from the throats of the French cavalrymen all down the ages: "Vive La France! Vive La France!"

Information for Lung Sufferers

The makers of Eckman's Alterative will be pleased to send reports of recoveries from tuberculosis and a booklet of interest to sufferers, with information about diet and fresh air. Investigate this case:

2141 Susquehanna Av., Phila., Pa.

"My Dear Sir—For two years I was afflicted with hemorrhages of the lungs, and later I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house I was left with a frightful hacking cough, which no medicine I had taken could alleviate. It was at this time, March, 1902, that I started taking Eckman's Alterative. In a short time my cough was gone and I was pronounced well. I cannot speak too highly for the good it has done." (Abbreviated.)

(Signed) HOWARD L. KLOTZ.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Small size, $1; regular size, $2. Sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet of recoveries.

Have Color in Your Cheeks

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after-effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

LINDELL Washington Av. and Eighth St. LINDELL

"YOU CAN'T IMPROVISE IN WAR; BE PREPARED," MOTTO BY WHICH JOFFRE CLIMBED

Biographer, in "Makers of New France" Tells How He Carried This Idea to the Point of Retiring Even His Close Friends When Raised to Command.

THOUGH he is commander-in-chief of one of the greatest, if not the greatest, armies ever put in the field—the combined French, English and Belgian forces in France and Flanders—Gen. Joffre is one of the least-known leaders in the present great war. Charles Dawbarn of Paris, author of ''France and the French,'' undertakes in his latest book, ''Makers of New France'' (James Pott & Co., New York), to present the famous General in more familiar aspects than we have been permitted to see him heretofore. Following are excerpts from this highly interesting volume, which contains intimate studies of notable Frenchmen of today, including President Poincare, Declasse, Briand, Jauns, Bergson, Clemenceau, Brieux, Bleriot, Mme. Paquin and many others:

"There is a great deal in names. Balzac believed in their predestination. Certain men triumph in spite of their names; others are helped by them. Kitchener had no reason to thank his cognomen, which is harsh and unmusical, for his success, but Joffre is of those who have majesty in their names; his is as solemn and impressive as Jove, as suggestive as Rodin or Rejane. Joffre well suits the man, for he is Olympian in his silence and gravity, Olympian also in his strange calm. He is of the race of supermen, yet he would be the last to attribute his success to genius. He does not believe in flashes of inspiration, but in method and hard work. He is the architect of his own fortunes, and owes nothing to political influence.

"To him the secret of success has not been revealed in a night; it has come as the result of infinite pains. In a memorable speech a year before the war broke out, he said: "You can improvise nothing in war," and he is undoubtedly right, for war, especially modern war, is of the essence of preparation. It is hardly necessary to insist on the superiority of the German preparedness—that was only too apparent in the opening phases of the campaign—but this was not Joffre's fault. He had been appointed only three years to his supreme office when the Germans crossed the frontier in August, 1914. Since that day he did not forget for one single instant his vast responsibilities; but you cannot, even in three years of intense work, supply the place of 40 years of implacable preparation.

Gen. Pau Urged His Appointment.

"Joffre's appointment, at the instance of Gen. Pau, was the result of an outcry against divided authority. Up to that moment, the moment of Agadir, poignant in its menace to France, one man prepared for war and the other was destined to be the leader of the forces at the outbreak of hostilities. Obviously, this was a bad arrangement. The man who prepared for war should be the man who made it, and a Ministry fell as soon as Parliament realized the weakness of the scheme. Then Joffre came suddenly to the front. He had had always a great reputation amongst military men, but, to the general public, he was unknown. When Pau recommended him to the Superior Council of War, he interpreted the wish and confidence of all his colleagues, and so Joffre became Chief of the General Staff and Generalissimo in time of war.

"For a period we heard little of him; he was content to work quietly in the seclusion of his office. Then he set the world to chattering with excitement; the garrison towns knew no sleep for a week. Joffre had broken the careers of five Generals, who had given proof of weakness in the Southern maneuvers of 1913. "Here is a man at last," said the cafe strategist before beginning his game of manille; "this is the chief we need in France." Others attacked him violently. A disingenious mind discovered that the cashiered Generals belonged to one particular school of politics, and that school, oddly enough, had always claimed Joffre. Then the further fact, more astounding than the first, became known; that Joffre was above politics; it seemed incredible. Being a Republican and a Freemason, he had yet dared to discipline other Republicans and Freemasons! It was stupendous.

Ridded the Armies of Cliques.

"Yes, Joffre had proven superior to personal and political considerations when he came to supreme office; one heard no more of cliques and divisions in the army. There were no more secret cliques of officers who went to mass and had their children baptized; there were no more confidential reports to Freemasions' lodges of impulsive speeches by Colonels suspected of reactionary tendencies. The influence of Joffre stopped all that, and stopped the intrigues that had been rife more or less in the army since the Dreyfus case. The parliamentary soldier of the Gen. Andre type was invited to carry his politics to the corriders of the chamber and leave the army free to pursue its work. That was the spirit dominating the great organization after Joffre had taken hold of it, and he showed his utter indifference to mere politics by taking into his closest confidence Gens. Pau and De Castelnau, both of whom are clerical, if not anti-Republican, in their sympathies. And Joffre advanced both men in the Legion of Honor for their services in the field. * * *

"Joffre has immense capacity for silence. He is as silent as William of Orange, without his gloom. His taciturnity suggests confidence in himself, which is the best method of imparting it to others. Instinctively his staff looks to him for great decisions, instinctively it feels that each crisis will find him ready to meet it. He rejoices in responsibility. Someone who watched him closely at work when the great task of repelling the invader from the soil of France was first begun declared that his calm was staggering. The greatest difficulties cannot upset it, and the greater the danger the clearer his faculties seem to become. He is as unaffected by the roar of cannon and the complexities of everchanging problems as if he were working out a war game in time of peace in the seclusion of his office at the Invalides.

Guards His Health Closely.

"A great deal of this mental poise is due to the care he takes of his physical state. He believes in the mens sana in corpore sano. For years he has deliberately prepared himself for the hardships of an exhausting campaign. He rises early; at 6 o'clock he arouses his household. An hour later, he and his two young daughters are galloping in the alleys of the Bois. This morning exercise keeps him fit and counteracts the long hours passed in office work. He retires to bed early, save when he is absorbed in a book, and then a quiet and discreet hand—the hand of his beloved wife, who is an extraordinary help to him and even, they say, an authority on tactics—extinguishes the lamp at midnight that he may have at least six hours' sleep. He does not care for the theater and prefers his books. His pleasure is in the society of his wife and daughters; the young people's gaiety fills the house. This man of war is a family man, living a retired life. On campaign he resists the temptation to overwork, and refuses to depart from his simple and wholesome habits. He still retires to bed at 10 o'clock, to a lullaby of cannon. At dawn he is afoot again and has begun his day's work. Not even the Grand Conde, on the eve of Rocroy, sleeps more soundly than he; this is one of the screts of his success. * * *

"Though he has a temperament of steel, as becomes the silent man, the Generalissimo is extraordinarily humanitarian. This again seems a contradiction. He wishes to save lives. This characteristic distinguishes him from German commanders, who throw their men mercilessly against exposed positions, with no thought of the cost. Joffre will not throw away a man if he can avoid it—he has the true French sense of economy—and thus we have a long-drawn-out and painfully persistent scheme of fighting, resembling a chess match, in which the players move from square to square, sacrificing pawns, capturing this piece and that, until, by some clever final move, the king is cornered and a checkmate declared. Joffre's way is not to hurl masses against strong entrenchments, but to wear out the enemy by a constant series of attacks, clinging to him, engaging him, holding him. When the proper moment comes he attacks with force and fierceness. One must not forget that he is a Frenchman, and therefore naturally given to the offensive. He realizes that his countrymen are adapted by temperament to attack and pursuit rather than to fighting a dogged, sullen battle of resistance. But he has mastered his natural inclination for vigorous tactics in favor of those wearing processes whereby an enemy is slowly and relentlessly reduced.

Sent Reinforcements in Taxicabs.

"His tactics at the battle of the Marne were of this order and are very interesting. The Franco-English armies had been in retreat from the Belgian frontier. They had marched away at great speed and continued to refuse battle up to a point perilously near Paris. Then when the enemy swept across the northern suburbs of the capital to the southeast, thanks mainly to the presence of large reserves in front of them, Joffre suddenly changed his attitude. He caught hold of Von Kluck's army corps, and pressed it so firmly that it was forced to retreat to save itself from envelopment. Joffre had bided his time, he had remarked the fatigue of the enemy, and this movement from the north of Paris gave him just the opportunity he sought for making good the advantage he then possessed of fighting at home and of being supported by a new

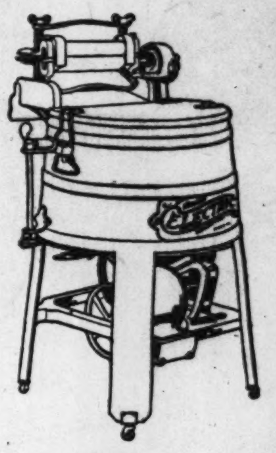
Frantz Premier Electric Vacuum Cleaner In Your Home for $1.00

The Frantz Premier Electric Vacuum Cleaner is nationally known as the finest Vacuum Cleaner for home use. A single payment of $1 will put it in your home. The balance can be paid in small weekly or monthly payments.

Only $1 a Week Buys This Electric Washing Machine

Are you going to continue to slave your life away over a back-breaking washtub? A turn of the switch will change washday into a day of play. Read all about this White Lily Electric Washing Machine that you can put in your own home for as little as a dollar a week.



Saves Time and Energy
Not only does the White Lily cut out all drudgery, but it saves a world of time. A usual five-hour wash can be turned out complete in two hours in the White Lily.

1c an Hour to Operate
The White Lily consumes only about a cent's worth of electricity an hour. Just think of having to pay only a dime a month to save the drudgery of a once-a-week wash day!

Washes and Wrings
You don't even have to turn the wringer if you have a White Lily—electricity will do it for you. The wringer can be operated at the same time as the washing machine. A big improvement over other electric machines. You waste no time. You can wring out one tub of clothes while another lot is being washed.

Safe to Operate
The motor on the White Lily is underneath the washing machine and all gears are covered, making injury to the operator impossible. Its operation is as easy as turning on an electric light.

Low in Price
The White Lily is just about half the price of other washing machines that are not one bit better. The White Lily costs so little that every family can afford one.

Guaranteed Five Years
The finest material and the best workmanship make the White Lily almost everlasting. It is absolutely guaranteed for five years.

One Dollar a Week
Can you afford to do without an electric washing machine when you can buy the White Lily for only $1.00 a week and pay for it this way in only a few months' time?

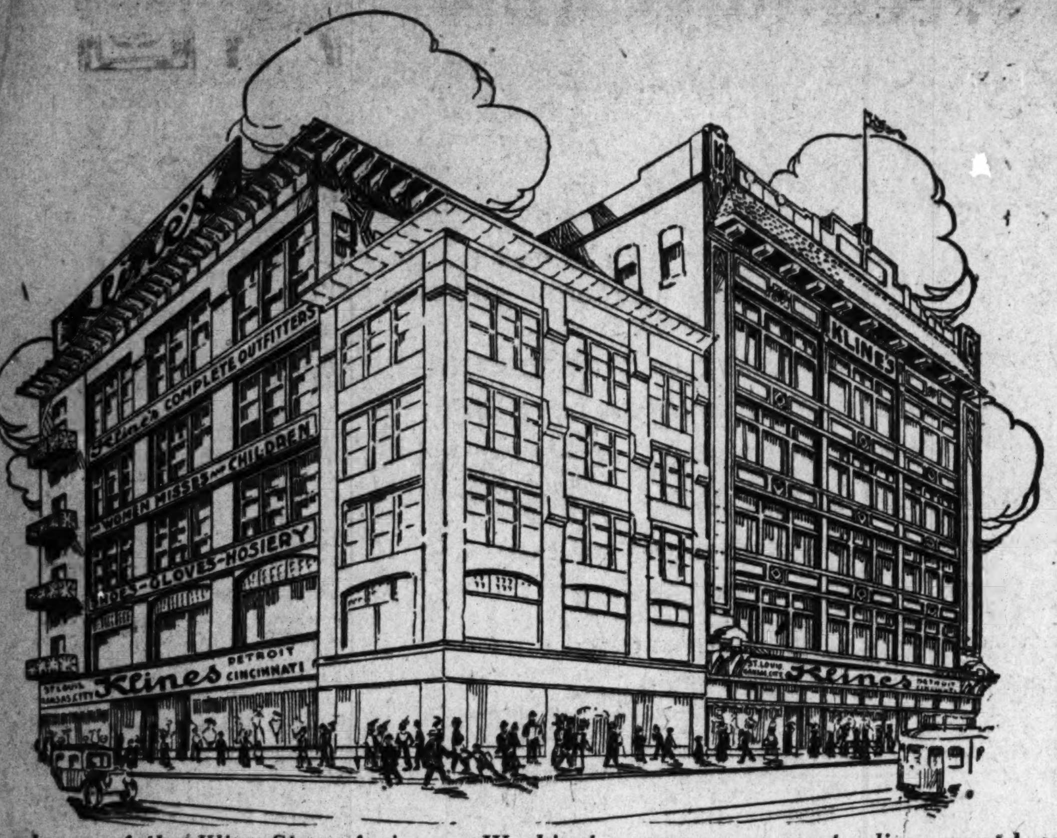
Kline's New Washington Avenue Store an Added Interest to St. Louis Shoppers



New home of the Kline Store, facing on Washington avenue and extending around on Sixth street.

The Building to Which the Firm Has Removed Occupies Five Floors and Has an Extra Entrance on Sixth Street and Several New Departments.

WITH the opening of the big Kline store at 606 and 608 Washington avenue tomorrow there will be a new incentive for women shoppers who frequent the downtown business district for the best garments at the lowest possible prices. The opening of the new store will mark another step in the progress of St. Louis department stores and specialty shops for women, misses and children.

Experienced merchants say that whenever there is any material change made in the stores, the store names or the removal of stores from one location to a nearby site, the change is beneficial, not only to the shoppers, but to all the merchants in the same locality. In other words—anything new stimulates business and brings everybody out of a rut.

New Store to Be Attractive.

Every effort will be made to have the new Kline store the most attractive place in the city for women shoppers. Members of the firm declare that nothing will be left undone toward this end. And they bank upon their past reputation to carry out this end.

It was about 20 years ago that the Kline brothers started out in an extremely small way to give full values for the lowest possible cost and at the same time not to be classed as "cheap." In fact, the firm has tried to avoid any unreasonable application of the word "cheap" in connection with the merchandise it handles. One of its mottoes has been "expensive goods at cheap prices—the price cheap, but not the goods."

AS a result of this and other commercial matters of the Kline brothers, the firm has been able to keep steady progress with the times, and today it owns a chain of stores and is the second largest of its kind in the United States, the foremost one being in New York City.

Firm Owns Six Stores.

Altogether, the Klines own and operate six ready-to-wear specialty stores for women, misses and children. These stores are located in St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit and Kansas City.

The executive offices of the firm are in Chicago. It is from here that all the supplies, boxes, stationery, etc., are purchased at the lowest possible price, in large amounts, for all of the six stores, thus reducing the overhead expenses of each The organization has 2000 employes. Everything is bought for cash, and just as soon as the goods are checked up it is the firm's boast that the bills are paid.

This, of course, makes it possible, the Kline management points out, for a big discount that is of great value to the purchasing public visiting its various stores daily.

Aim for $10,000,000 Mark.

It is the hope of the Klines in opening the new store in St. Louis that the concern's six stores combined will in April, 1916, reach the $10,000,000 mark in business. Admittedly, members of the Kline family and other important factors in the management of the organization say, this can only be done by the closest kind of buying and the closest kind of underselling to attract public confidence and the heavy consequent patronage.

HOWEVER, there is more to be said about the Kline's new home at 606 Washington avenue before going into details of how this organization plans to give expensive garments, etc., to milady, her daughter and her child at inexpensive cost. This removal would, by the way, have been made long ago but for the fact that the firm was waiting to decide upon a Washington avenue site.

The new home occupies five stories, fronting on Washington avenue, running clear back to St. Charles street, and has a large entrance on Sixth street.

The first floor has one of the most attractive entrances of any store in the West. The windows are all wide and high, so as to give a full sweep in displaying the art of the window dresser. This same elaborate arrangement has been carried out by the architect on the Sixth street side of the building, as well as at the Washington avenue entrance. The flooring in all of the windows is of teak wood, especially selected. The flooring of the ground floor is of artistic tiling. There are high pillars encased in American walnut, the same kind of wood that is used throughout the building.

Ground Floor Attractions.

Here on the first floor will be found shirt waists, gloves, hosiery, muslin underwear, knit underwear and handkerchiefs. There is a separate department on this floor for black waists and for waists needed that are out of the ordinary sizes.

ALL of the fixtures on this floor, as in all of the other departments, are of the latest reflected light style and give a soft tone to the entire establishment. There are four elevators to take the customers to the upper stories. These elevators, like everything else in the building, are of the most modern type for safety. Here it might be said that in the rear of the elevators are huge retorts for ice, in which are coils of pipe that feed water to sanitary bubbling fountains for drinking purposes. From the floor of the entrance to the ceiling is a space of 21 feet. Between the ground floor and this ceiling is the mezzanine floor.

The mezzanine floor is fringed with rounded glass display cases that add tone to the general delicate and artistic effect of the whole atmosphere.

Mezzanine Floor.

On the mezzanine floor will be found corsets, tea gowns, kimonos, bathing costumes, shoes and silk petticoats. A large part of the space in this part of the store is devoted to shoes, which is a new departure in the St. Louis branch of the Kline firm. The mezzanine floor, like all of the upper floors, is carpeted in Delph blue of soft, thick quality.

Departing from the mezzanine floor the women shoppers will go to the second floor and there find millinery from the latest models of the Paris boulevards and New York's exclusive shops. Here, too, will be found not only spring and summer hats for old and young, but also children's, juniors' and intermediate coats, suits, dresses and graduating dresses.

The entire third floor is devoted to ladies' and misses' suits and costumes. A feature of this floor is that it is considered by the management to be the most artistically decorated of any floor in the new establishment. Its unique feature is the series of individual fitting rooms, each one different in its coloring. The mirrors in each of these rooms are so arranged as to reflect a person's entire form from all sides at the same time. The decorations are in delicate tints of white, gray, gold, etc.. Each room is also fitted with glass disappearing doors.

THE skirt department is on the fourth floor. There, too, the Klines have installed an innovation. This is a department of machine-made wash dresses to cost from $1 to $5. Here also are the waiting room, the retiring room, the emergency Red Cross section and the fitting and alteration sections. The fifth floor is devoted to the firm's offices.

Corps in the East.

There is a complete system of daily communication between the St. Louis store and all of the other Kline establishments by telegraph, night letter, and even by long-distance telephone. In New York the firm keeps between 30 and 40 buyers and style selectors who are in constant communication by cablegrams from representatives abroad as to new shipments of samples, etc.

As soon as shipments arrive in New York, samples are selected and the garments made up at a big saving to the Kline customers.

2,691,060 SUBSCRIBE TO NEWEST LOAN FOR GERMANY

Total of $2,157,000,000 Is Raised Through Astonishing Response by the People.

BERLIN, May 1.—The great loan just brought out by the German Government called out the small capitalist in numbers never heretofore heard of in the flotation of a public loan.

When more than 926,000 Germans offered subscriptions of 2000 marks ($476) and less for the September loan, this was regarded as specially eloquent testimony to the patriotic enthusiasm of the great masses of the German people. But the March loan has a far more remarkable participation of the small capitalists. Not less that 2,113,320 subscribers to it are taking amounts of $476 and less, and 452,000 of these made subscriptions of $48 or under.

The total number of subscribers to the loan was 2,691,060; and as the total amount of money subscribed was $2,157,000,000, the average subscription was $801.

Women in Play and Military Drill.

The young women of the South St. Louis Turnverein, Tenth and Carroll streets, will give an entertainment tonight at 8:15. "The Troubles of the Satterlees" will be produced, followed by a military drill. The Misses Tillie Eschenberg, Edna Baker, Marie Deppelhauer, Minnette Hempen, Martha Blume and Tillie Demert are in charge.

VACUUM CUP TIRES

—we have largely increased the mileage assurance indicated by building into 1915 Vacuum Cup Tires, by a new toughening process developed by us, 50% additional wear-resisting quality.

This process also means far greater wear in the heavy Vacuum Cups, thus greatly prolonging their guaranteed ability to eliminate skidding on wet or greasy pavements.

Under our new price schedule, Vacuum Cup Tires are the lowest priced tires on the market of those having any sort of anti-skid feature added to the regular thickness of tread.

WOMEN'S SPEECHES FEATURE 'WOMAN'S INDEPENDENCE DAY'

Suffragists Spoke Yesterday at the Court House and Jefferson Memorial.

"Women's Independence day," as yesterday was styled by the suffragists of America, was celebrated in St. Louis by speech making on the courthouse steps and at Jefferson Memorial, Forest Park. Shortly after noon several automobiles filled with women, and bearing suffrage banners, drew up at the courthouse, and within five minutes a small crowd had gathered both at the Broadway entrance and the Broadway and Pine street corner, where speakers held forth.

Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing, Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare and Miss Jane Thomson, well-known suffrage workers, addressed the crowds, and answered many questions. Miss Thomson, the last speaker, generally won her points by sharp, witty answers. Just as she finished an old man, with a handful of shoestrings, leaned over her car and asked several questions. When these were answered to his satisfaction he held up the shoestrings and said:

"Well, then, lady, won't you help me out and buy some shoestrings?" Miss Thomson did.

Ortille Preetorius, the classic dancer, and others spoke at Jefferson Memorial.

GERMAN INDUSTRIES REAPING BIG DIVIDENDS THROUGH WAR

Ammunition Factories Make Forty Per Cent; Rubber Factory Saved From Going Into Bankruptcy.

AMSTERDAM, May 1.—The German arms and ammunition factories, most of which doubled their capital last year, are declaring a dividend of 20 per cent, as compared with 32 per cent for the year 1913. This is equivalent to a dividend of 40 per cent on the old capitalization.

Many other German concerns working for the army and navy have either raised their dividends or set aside a large sum into undivided profits. A large rubber factory which has for several years been in financial straits, shows a net profit for the last 12 months, amounting to more than half its total capital.

A new half-million dollar corporation organized in Berlin by clothing men, will devote all its energies to utilizing scraps of cloth for making army and navy uniforms.

FLIRTING AIDS IN RECRUITING

English Girl Sends Six Young Men to War; Example Is Commended.

LONDON, May 1.—Flirting can be made an effective recruiting expedient. At a recent recruiting rally a girl held up her hand and announced that she had sent five young men to the front. At the end of the meeting she indicated the young man at her side, and declared, "Here's the sixth."

This caused the speaker to say, "Flirting of that kind is the right sort of patriotism." And he advised the young girls of the audience to use their wiles in behalf of King and country.

Joffre Calm in Face of Danger Called "Supreme"

and fresh army based upon Paris itself.

"When the full history of the battle of the Marne comes to be written, one will give a large amount of credit to Joffre's able lieutenant, Gen. Manoury, who was in charge of the Paris army and moved it out at the psychological moment to turn the foe. His transportation scheme was the happiest in the war, for he employed 1100 taxicabs, which carried the army to the front, and in those taxicabs the soldiers ate and slept until the moment came to begin the battle. Picture the amazement of the Germans, who had believed that the French were completely demoralized and were lacking in resources, moral and material. Joffre's plan is always to have plenty of force in reserve; it is one of the signs of his superiority. * * *

"Joffre suggests the comfortable farmer type rather than the traditional soldier. There is nothing about his appearance or methods to excite the enthusiasm of the crowd. In civil or military dress he is not smart, but merely neat. His figure is solid and robust and not built on sculptural lines; the neck is immensely strong; the nose broad, with wide nostrils; the mouth firm and hidden by a white moustache; the teeth somewhat prominent in speech. The chin is quare, with sense of power; the eyes, beneath the bushy eyebrows, are blue, limpid and sincere, and singularly penetrating at times. They are twinkling eyes, too, as if their owner saw, readily, the humorous side of things and found a quiet enjoyment in the ridiculous, though his laugh is rare. The whole attitude of the man betokens physical and mental power. In conversation he seizes readily upon a point, and asks questions with a directness that shows his grasp of mind. * * *

Sketch of His Military Career.

"Joffre's early training was in science; at 16 he had already obtained his baccalaureate in that faculty; thereafter he entered the Polytechnique, the celebrated school of engineers under the Ministry of War. The first great struggle with Germany interrupted his studies and he was given a commission in a battery in the defense of Paris. He fought valiantly and well as a lad of 18—and he returned to college after the invaders had left the soil. Emerging with high honors, he was given fortification work to do, especially around Paris. MacMahon, then President of the Republic, passed one day, and calling the young subaltern to him, said: "I compliment you, Captain." Joffre thus got his captaincy at 24. There followed other fortification works at Pontarlier, at Duego-Suez in Madagascar, reputed to be models of their kind, until Joffre feared that his life would be passed in moving earth instead of leading troops. But Admiral Courbet in Formosa took the trowel from his hand and put a sword in it. Joffre won all the battles that were given to him, and, later, in the Sudan, he rallied the flying troops and led them victoriously to Timbuctoo the Mysterious. Thus was avenged the death of Bonnier, slain by the Tuaregs, and Joffre became known as a successful commander. There was other colonial experience, such as building a railway, and then the young officer came home to France, to command an army corps at Amiens, to head engineering branch of the army, to the fortifications at Fontainbleau, to the War Board, and, finally, to become the real head of the army.

Beautiful and Exclusive ROTOGRAVURES

STRIKINGLY novel and artistic color handling of night effects portraying the brilliant electric lighting at the "Panama Fair," which has been justly termed "Modern Fairyland." Great beauty of the Exposition revealed by vari-colored lights, requiring a light estimated at 13,000,000 candle power, greatest ever known in one installation If you can't attend the Fair, you can see these pictures. They are simply marvelous.

¶Beautiful young ladies in artistic, statuesque poses. They are sans shoes, sans stockings, withal most modest and by this new Rotogravure production appear as if carved from the finest Italian marble.

¶Fourth run of the favorite "Movie" Stars series. Viola Dana, Mary Fuller and Marguerite Courtot. These and many other equally interesting ROTOGRAVURES form a feast of good things for next Sunday.

KREISLER'S EAR RANGE FINDER FOR AUSTRIAN GUNS

Famous Violinist Located Russian Batteries by Shriek of Their Shells.

How Fritz Kreisler's finely attuned ear was used as a range finder by an Austrian General to determine the location of Russian guns is graphically described by the celebrated violinist in a highly entertaining little book, "Four Weeks in the Trenches," of which he is the author and of which the Houghton-Mifflin Co. of Boston is the publisher. After a month at the front, he was wounded in the right thigh by a Russian lance. Being permanently disabled, he was permitted to come to America for his concert tour.

A great part of the little volume is an elaboration of the incidents recorded in the letters he wrote for a Vienna paper and which were reproduced in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine of Nov. 1 last. But the story of how accurately his ear, trained to respond to the delicate vibration of violin strings, was able to judge by their shrieking and tearing sounds the distance and the location from which the shells of the Russian heavy guns had come is new. He discovered this faculty shortly after he went into action the first time. He writes:

"By this time, however, shrapnel had almost ceased to be a source of concern to us and we scarcely paid any attention to it. Human nerves quickly get accustomed to the most unusual conditions and circumstances and I noticed that quite a number of men actually fall asleep from sheer exhaustion in the trenches, in spite of the roaring of the cannon about us and the whizzing of shrapnel over our heads.

Whine Key to Shell's Origin.

"I, too, soon got accustomed to the deadly missiles—in fact, I had already started to make observations of their peculiarities. My ear, accustomed to differentiate sounds of all kinds, had some time ago, while we still advanced, noted a remarkable discrepancy in the peculiar whine produced by the different shells in their rapid flight through the air as they passed over our heads, some sounding shrill, with a rising tendency, and others rather dull, with a falling cadence.

"A short observation revealed the fact that the passing of a dull-sounding shell was invariably preceded by a flash from one of our own cannons in the rear of the hill, which conclusively proved it to be an Austrian shell. It must be understood that as we were advancing between the positions of the Austrian and Russian artillery, both kinds of shell were passing over our heads. As we advanced the differences between shrill and dull shell grew less and less perceptible, until I could hardly tell them apart.

"Upon nearing the hill the difference increased again more and more until on the hill itself it was very marked.

"After our trench was finished I crawled to the top of the hill until I could make out the flash of the Russian guns on the opposite heights and by timing flash and actual passing of the shell, found to my astonishment that now the Russian missiles had become dull, while on the other hand, the shrill shell was invariably heralded by a flash from one of our guns, now far in the rear. What had happened was this:

His Ear Used as Range Finder.

"Every shell describes in its course a parabolic line, with the first half of the curve being ascending and the second one descending. Apparently in the first half of its curve, that is, its course while ascending, the shell produced a dull whine, accompanied by a dull cadence, which changes to a rising shrill as soon as the acme has been reached and the curve points downward again. The acme for both kinds of shell naturally was exactly half the distance between the Russian and Austrian artillery, and this was the point where I had noticed that the difference was the least marked.

"A few days later in talking over my observation with an artillery officer, I was told the fact was known that the shells sounded different going up than when coming down, but this knowledge was not used for practical purposes. When I told him that I could actually determine by the sound the exact place where a shell coming from the opposing batteries was reaching its acme, he thought that this would be of great value in a case where the position of the opposing battery was hidden and thus could be located. He apparently spoke to his commander about me, for a few days later I was sent on a reconnoitering tour, with the object of marking on the map the exact spot where I thought the hostile shells were reaching their acme, and it was later on reported to me that I had succeeded in giving our batteries the almost exact range of the Russian guns. I have gone into this matter at some length, because it is the only instance where my musical ear was of value during my service."

Kreisler was greatly impressed with the utter lack of hatred between the Russians and the Austrians, though they were exerting every effort to kill each other because it was war to do so. On this point he says:

No Hatred Among the Troops.

"It was there and then (in his first trench) that I made a curious observation. After the second day we had almost grown to know each other. The Russians would laughingly call over to us, and the Austrians would answer. The salient feature of these three days' fighting was the extraordinary lack of hatred. In fact, it is astonishing how little actual hatred exists between fighting men. One fights fiercely and passionately, mass against mass, but as soon as the mass crystallizes itself into human individuals whose features one can recognize, hatred almost ceases. Of course, fighting continues, but somehow it loses its fierceness and takes on a form of sport, each side being eager to get the best of the other. One still shoots at his opponent, but almost regrets when he sees him drop.

"By the morning of the third day we knew every member of the opposing trench, the favorite of my men being a giant red-bearded Russian whose constant pastime consisted in jumping like a jack-in-the-box from the trench, crying over to us as he did so. He was frequently shot at, but never hit. Then he grew bolder, showing himself longer and longer, until finally he jumped out of the trench altogether, shouting to us wildly and waving his cap. His good-humored jollity and bravado appealed to our boys and none of them attempted to shoot at him while he presented such a splendid target. Finally one of our men, who did not want to be second in bravery, jumped out of the trench and presented himself in full sunlight.

No attempt was made to shoot at him, either, and these two men began to gesticulate at each other, inviting each other to come nearer. All fighting had suddenly ceased, and both opposing parties were looking on, laughing like boys at play. Finally the Russian would draw a step nearer, and our man boldly advanced, too. Then the Russians urged on their man with shouts and laughter, and he made a big leap forward, standing still, whereupon the Austrian also jumped forward, and so, step by step, they advanced until they nearly touched each other. They had left their rifles behind, and we thought they were going to indulge in a fist fight, all of us being sorry for our champion, for he was a small and insignificant looking man, who looked as if he could be crushed with one blow of his gigantic opponent. But lo, and behold! The big Russian held out his hand, which held a package of tobacco, and our Austrian, seizing the tobacco, grasped the hand of the Russian, and then, reaching in his pocket, produced a long Austrian cigar, which he ceremoniously presented to the Russian. It was indeed a funny sight to see the small, wiry, lean Austrian talking in exaggerated terms of politeness to the blond Russian giant, who listened gravely and attentively, as if he understood every word.

"By this time all precautions and even ideas of fighting had been forgotten, and we were surprised to find ourselves out of the shelter of our trenches, and fully exposed to the Russians, who, in turn, leaned out of their own trenches and showed their heads in full. This unofficial truce had lasted about twenty minutes and succeeded more in restoring good humor and joy of life among our soldiers than a train load of provisions would have done. It was one of the incidents that helped to relieve the monotony of trench life and was heartily welcomed by all of us.

Kreisler was a Lieutenant of reserves. He admits that his wing of the Austrian army found the enemy many days before they had expected to encounter them."

Help the Stomach in Digesting Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at 50 cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington street, Monticello, Ills.

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

Corn-Mad? Use "GETS-IT," It's Sure

Makes Corns Vanish Like Magic

A hard cap of skin makes up every corn. When you put 2 drops of "GETS-IT" on it, it shrivels up and comes right off—and there's your corn—gone by thunder! Simple as taking off your hat!

Don't Waste Time "Hollering." "GETS-IT," World's Simplest Corn-Cure. Never Fails.

That's why corn-millions have gone wild over "GETS-IT"—nothing like it ever known. Some folks, to this day, putter around with bandages, sticky tape, thick plasters, corn "pulling" salves, gouge corns out with knives, snip them with scissors, make them bleed and then howl because they can't get rid of sore corns. Use "GETS-IT." There's nothing to do but apply 2 drops. The work is done. "GETS-IT" does the rest. No pain, no fussing, no changing shoes, no limping. It never fails. Try it tonight for any corn, callus, wart or bunion. Be sure that you get "GETS-IT" and nothing else.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

This Business Is Being Rebuilt and placed on a firm foundation—every day new progress is made—more customers convinced of the high ideals and aims of the new organization—we will soon announce a very important step that will mean a long stride in the path of progress—and in the meantime we are devoting ourselves to furniture selling that must win your approval and confidence. New goods that are arriving are priced very close and all remaining goods from the previous concern are being disposed of at price sacrifices that open the way for rare economies. In any event, this is a good place to buy, especially during this reconstruction period.

SUBMARINES SINK TWO STEAMERS ON MAIN TRADE PATHS

British Public Looks for Renewal of Raids With Larger Force—Admiralty Finds "Way to Deal With Submarines."

Fighting Resumed in Poland and on East Prussian Border While Russians Attack Austrians Near Stry.

Dispatches Say Fleet Is Making Progress in Dardanelles—"Quick Results" Predicted by French Chief.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, May 1.—German submarines, which recently had been confining themselves to the North Sea, where they sank a number of trawlers, again have appeared on the trade routes off the west coasts of Ireland and England and caught two victims. They were the British steamer Edale, which was sunk off the Scilly Islands, and the Russian steamer Svodono, which was attacked off the Blasket Islands. In both cases the crews were saved.

This, taken in connection with the warning issued to American travelers on transatlantic liners, doubtless means another attempt with a greater number of submarines to combat the blockade by England. It is only just announced by the English papers that the Admiralty has found means of dealing with submarines and the people, in view of the latest attacks upon steamers, are awaiting the result with considerable interest.

England Remains Calm.

In the face of these submarine attacks, Zeppelin raids and the bombardment of Dunkirk, which brings the war closer home, England remains calm as ever. There are some, of course, who feel anxiety over the eastern battle line, but generally the feeling is one of optimism based on success with which the allies have withstood former attempts of the Germans to get to the coast ports. The bombardment of Dunkirk, which was repeated yesterday and which resulted in considerable loss of life, has caused many women and children to leave the town. The Germans can repeat this bombardment whenever they desire with the big guns which formerly were posted on the coast to ward off attacks from the allied fleet and which have been moved up in the direction of Nieuport.

"On the rest of the Western front, things are comparatively quiet, although the French appear to be still on the offensive between the Meuse and the Moselle Rivers, the Germans claiming to have repulsed attacks there.

The extent of the German raid on the Russian Baltic provinces has not been disclosed. Although the German announces that the Russians evacuated and burned Szawle and retired toward Mitau, there is no evidence of any big battle being fought and the Russians express confidence in their ability to deal with this new diversion.

Fighting in Poland Resumed.

Along the East Prussian frontier and in Central Poland, there has been a renewal of the fighting which the spring floods interrupted, while in the Carpathians, where the ground is drying, the Russians and Austrians again are contending for Uzsok Pass. For the moment the Russians have turned from their offensive against that pass to attack the Austrians who were threatening their communications in the direction of Stry and have won considerable success, capturing two heights and a number of prisoners. They also claim to have repulsed an attack by the Germans who hold a line near Wyszkow farther to the eastward.

It is expected that a big offensive will be undertaken on the Eastern front, probably by the Germans, who have been feeling their way toward the Russian positions around the East Prussian frontier, although this may be a feint to hide a movement on some other part of the line.

There is evidence in dispatches from Athens that the allied fleet has recommenced the bombardment of the Dardanelles, but there is no official confirmation available.

The French Minister of Marine, however, in an interview, expressed the opinion that decisive and definite results would come quickly.

The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. sends the following regarding operations at the Dardanelles:

"The fleet violently bombarded Nagara, but the forts did not reply. The troops are unable to pass over to the Asiatic shore on account of indirect fire of the allies. The Turkish troops at present are concentrated around [illegible]."

ICE FAMINE IN TRI-CITIES WHEN TEAMSTERS STRIKE

Women and Boys Cart Supplies Home in Baby Carriages and Baskets—Difference Over Wages.

There was an ice famine in the Tri-Cities yesterday, and throughout Granite City, Venice and Madison, with their population of 35,000, not a pound of ice was delivered. This was due to a strike called at 8 a. m. by the teamsters' union, Local 61.

All day long the offices of the ice concerns were besieged by customers in automobiles, carriages and wagons. Women went with perambulators to take a few pounds to their homes, and boys went with baskets. One milk dealer prepared notices to his customers, warning them that as he had to cover all his routes himself, their deliveries would probably be late. A number of buildings under construction were held up by the strike, which affects about 100 teamsters.

The teamsters struck because their employers refused to provide a helper on every wagon, and asked the drivers to consent to a reduction in pay of 5 cents an hour.

DOG WITH BROKEN LEG HOBBLES TO CITY HOSPITAL

Attendants Carefully Treat Terrier, Which Then Curls Up on Rug and Goes to Sleep.

A fox terrier hobbled up the steps to the front entrance of the city hospital last night, holding his left front leg in the air and saying plainly with his eyes that he wished admittance as a patient.

Nurses and doctors examined the leg in the reception room and found it was broken. They bound it in splints as carefully as if the dog had been human. Then the terrier, after effusive displays of gratitude, curled up contentedly on a rug and went to sleep. There was speculation among the doctors as to whether the dog was clever enough to know the proper place to apply for treatment or just happened to find it.

WOMAN MAYOR HAS COUNCIL SESSION OPENED WITH PRAYER

New Executive at Warren, Ill., to Continue Plan—All of Appointments Save Two Rejected.

FREEPORT, Ill., May 1.—Mrs. A. R. Canfield, Mayor of Warren, presided today for the time at a session of the village Council. The session was opened with prayer by a minister and the Mayor announced this would be a feature of every meeting of the board.

The Council rejected all of Mrs. Canfield's appointments except two. The applications of owners of the pool halls and shooting galleries for a renewal of licenses were denied.

BOYS STRIKE TO PLAY BALL

1200 Thrown Out of Work in Pennsylvania Coal Mine.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 1.—Twelve hundred men and boys were thrown out of work at the Maxwell colliery of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Co., at Ashley, near here, today, when a hundred door boys and patchers decided to strike in order to play baseball this afternoon.

The action was taken when Burgess J. K. E. Fenner of the borough notified the boys that Sunday baseball would be prohibited in the future. The boys replied that they will keep the colliery idle every Saturday to play ball if the order is enforced.

ALLIES' HORSES RAISE A DUST

Residents of East Alton and Wood River Make Complaints.

Residents of East Alton and Wood River are complaining about dust raised by the exercising of the horses in corrals in East Alton, where they are kept for the French and English governments.

The horses are given exercise for several hours every morning.

Several property owners recently presented a petition to the proprietors of the corral asking them to do away with the dust nuisance.

Hen's Mite to Church Is Egg.

FREMONT, Neb., May 1.—A hen that flew into the Baptist Church last Sunday sought out the collection basket, which stood back of the pulpit, and laid an egg in it.

The Rev. J. George Batzle, the pastor, found the hen in the church, and, after driving her out, came upon the egg.

PRESIDENT SEES 'BABY' TREE FOR GRANDSON PLANTED

Takes Baseball and Bat From Washington to Williamstown for Francis Sayre.

CHRISTENING TO BE TODAY

Executive to Be One of Godfathers—Will Reach Capital Tomorrow.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 1.—Woodrow Wilson laid aside the cares of President of the United States here today and became merely the grandfather of Francis Sayre, the small son of his daughter, Jessie, and of Francis B. Sayre, assistant to the president of Williams' College.

The President came to Williamstown, despite pressing public business, to take part in planting a "baby" tree for his grandson, late this afternoon and to act as one of his godfathers at the christening ceremonies tomorrow.

Mr. Wilson will leave for Washington tomorrow afternoon, ariving there Monday morning. Virtually the entire college population of Williamstown was at the station to welcome the President, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, his cousin, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones and his naval aide and physician, Dr. Grayson.

Soon after the arrival at Williamstown the entire family party, with President Harry A. Garfield of Williams College, and Mrs. Garfield and the Rev. J. F. Carter, gathered on the lawn of the Sayre home and planted a small walnut tree presented to Baby Sayre by Mr. Garfield. The President joined in the laughter when the baby firmly grasped the tree with both hands and seemed to be attempting to take it from his father. It was the first time the President had seen the baby since shortly after his birth at the White House.

The christening tomorrow will be in St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church at 2:30 o'clock and will be strictly private. Mr. Sayre is an Episcopalian and the ceremony will be acording to that faith, despite the fact that the Wilsons are Presbyterians. The Rev. Mr. Carter, rector of the church, will officiate.

The President and Mr. Sayre's brother will stand sponsors for the baby as godfathers and Miss Agnes Winter of Philadelphia will be godmother. She was associated with Mrs. Sayre in settlement work in Philadelphia prior to the latter's mariage. A large collection of presents, including a drinking cup from the President, were received by the baby today. The President also brought here a baseball and bat given to him for the baby by the Washington American League baseball team when he opened the initial game in Washington several weeks ago.

LIQUOR SALES AT EXCLUSIVE CAPITAL CLUB CALLED ILLEGAL

Manager One of Ten for Whom Warrants Are Issued at Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Ten warrants against holders of liquor licenses, including Nathaniel Wilson, president of the Metropolitan Club, the Capital's most exclusive organization, charging violations of the Jones-Marks excise law, were sworn out in police court today.

It is contended that the licenses in question are null and void and that the places conducted by the holders of them should be closed. The complaint is made that the places in question are illegal because they are in residential districts and on a block "where less than 50 per centum of the foot frontage, not including saloons, hotels and clubs having barroom licenses, is used for business purposes."

BATTLE OF MANILA ANNIVERSARY

Dewey Gets Message of Felicitation From Secretary Daniels.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Admiral Dewey received this message today from Secretary Daniels, commemorating the anniversary of the battle of Manila Bay in 1898:

"On board U. S. S. Mayflower,
Hampton Roads, May 1.

"Admiral Dewey:

"Upon this, the anniversary of your victory, the fleet assembled in Hampton Roads joins me in cordial felicitations. All sincerely hope you may be vouchsafed many more years of active service to your grateful country."

The society of Manila Bay held its annual reunion tonight at the Army and Navy Club. Admiral Dewey was unable to attend.

SMUGGLED JEWELS IN SKIRT

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Jewels valued at $8500 were taken today from the hem of Mrs. J. B. Francis' skirt and from fur rugs, treasury officials said, after her arrest. She is charged with smuggling. The jewels were cut and uncut opals and sapphires. What appeared to be a contract with a Sydney jeweler was found in her possession. By it she was to receive five per cent of the proceeds from the sale of the jewels. Mrs. Francis arrived Thursday from Australia.

HUERTA'S PRIVATE SECRETARY IS IN TEXAS FOR CHIEF

Holds Conferences at San Antonio With Fomer Mexican Federal Officers.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 1.—Jesus Del Gardo, private secretary to Gen. Victoriano Huerta, arrived here today from New York on a special mission for his chief. He held several conferences with former Mexican Federal officers and officers of the peace conference. He refused to discuss rumors of a forthcoming visit to the border by Gen. Huerta, saying he was not authorized to make any statements for Huerta.

A message from El Paso received at headquarters of the Mexico Peace Conference here asked if Del Gardo was coming to El Paso for a conference with friends. The message stated that the following officers, formerly under President Diaz and President Huerta, were row in El Paso: Gen. Marcelo Caraveo, Gen. Joaquin Tellez, Gen. Santoago Rivero, Gen. Salvador Mercido, Gen. Caesaro Castro, Gen. Emilio Camp and Gen. Jose Ynez Calazar.

Maderos, On Way to New York, Deny Break With Villa.

EL PASO, Tex., May 1.—Hector Ramos, head of the Villa secret police in the United States, denied tonight that he had made any statement regarding a change in the Villa consular service, or that he knew of any such matter. It had been reported from San Antonio that Ramos had arranged that all Villa consuls in the United States, largely Madero adherents, would be discharged.

Emilio Madero, a member of the family of the late President, and general in Villa's army, said here today that no estrangement had occurred between the Maderos and the Villa faction. Five members of the family arrived here today with Gen. Madero, and proceeded to New York. They declared they had left Mexico to attend to personal matters in the United States. Among them was Col. Julie Madero, formerly a member of Gen. Obregon's staff, who was arrested in Villa territory at the time of the Carranza-Villa split. It was said he had been paroled.

Women to Demand End of War.

THE HAGUE, via London, May 1.—The International Congress of Women concluded its sessions here today. At the final meeting there was adopted a proposal to send delegations to the President of the United States and to the heads of all European powers for the purpose of demanding immediate cessation of the war. Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, president of the Hungarian Woman Suffrage Association, moved this resolution.

FIRE THREATENS PEORIA WHOLESALE DISTRICT

Every Piece of Apparatus Called Out to Fight Blaze—Buildings Three Blocks Apart Burn.

PEORIA, Ill., May 2. (Sunday)—Fire which started at 1 o'clock this morning threatened the destruction of the wholesale district.

The fire at 1:30 was raging in the Cappal-Girard commission building, a three-story structure, and three blocks distant in the Greisser Commission building, and Greisser Bank building and threatened the Lud Hotel, a six-story structure.

A general alarm called every available piece of fire apparatus in the city to the scene.

TWO INJURED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNS AT PARK ENTRANCE

Mrs. Birdie Walker, Pinned Under E. J. Moeller's Car, Is Taken Unconscious to Hospital.

Edward J. Moeller, 39 years old, of 1911 Arsenal street, and Mrs. Birdie Walker, 35 years old, of 4229 Garfield avenue, were injured about 11 o'clock when Moeller's automobile overturned at the Magnolia avenue entrance of Tower Grove Park, pinioning Mrs. Walker under it.

Moeller, who was thrown clear of the machine, pulled Mrs. Walker from beneath it. Dr. Walter Eidman of 3160 Morganford road, who was passing, was unable to restore Mrs. Walker to consciousness and advised that she be taken to the city hospital.

Moeller, who was suffering from a deep cut on his face, accompanied her in an ambulance. He said Mrs. Walker had attended a party at his home and he was taking her to her residence when the accident happened.

Physicians were unable to tell at an early hour this morning the extent of Mrs. Walker's injuries. Moeller is vice president of the Western Screw Products Co., and married. Mrs. Walker, who is a widow, has two sons.

PSYCHOLOGICAL DANCER SUED BY 'RAGTIME PIANIST'

Gene Rodemich Brings Action Against Mme. Ortille Preetorius for $88.

Mme. Ortille Preetorius, interpretative and psychological dancer, was sued yesterday by Gene Rodemich, known as "The Ragtime Paderewski," for $88, covering the services of himself and associated musicians at daily matinees in a West End cafe for the week of April 19.

The suit was filed in Justice Slater's court and a Deputy Constable was sent to the Washington Hotel, where the dancer and her husband, Carl Preetorius, are staying, to levy on her wardrobe for the amount. They found nothing on which to levy.

The Preetoriuses were out when a Post-Dispatch reporter called at the hotel last night. Manager Alexander said he had talked with them about their two weeks' bill and that they assured him he would get his money.

Mme. Preetorius was suddenly called to Chicago week before last because of her mother's illness.

She returned two days ago, ready to dance at the cafe, but the proprietor told her his entertainment program was filled. Rodemich said last night he did not know that Mme. Preetorius' mother had been ill and that if he had known this he might not have filed his suit.

Last December Rodemich and Miss Henrietta Pauk of 22 Kingsbury place announced their engagement. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Pauk, took the young woman to California, and believed they would succeed in getting her to give up the idea of marrying the pianist.

BARNES TO TESTIFY IN TRIAL OF SUIT AGAINST ROOSEVELT

State Officials or Former Officials Summoned to Appear for the Barnes Forces.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 1.—Counsel for William Barnes, in his suit for libel against Theodore Roosevelt, spent today preparing evidence for submission after the case of the defense rests next week.

It was said that about 25 witnesses, many of them State officials or former State officials, had been summoned to appear by the Barnes forces. It was stated positively that Barnes himself would go on the stand.

H. L. HAYDEL KILLS HIMSELF; TWO OTHER REALTY MEN INDICTED

Head of Well-Known Firm Uttered Worthless Check for $4500—Three Deals Were Under Investigation.

C. C. NICHOLLS CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLING $7000

Jesse T. Daniel Accused of Obtaining $650 by False Pretenses—Building of an Apartment House Involved in Nicholls Case—Accused Men Give Bond.

Henry Louis Haydel, president of the Haydel Realty Co., three of whose business transactions were being investigated by the Real Estate Exchange and who had given a worthless check for $4500 to discharge an obligation to a client, shot and killed himself at 9:30 yesterday morning at his home, 4211 West Pine boulevard.

Within an hour after his death, the grand jury returned indictments against two other real estate dealers, Charles C. Nicholls, formerly president of the Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Realty and Financial Co., charged with embezzlement of $7000; and Jesse T. Daniel, secretary of the Daniel Realty Co., charged with obtaining $650 by false pretenses, in cases which have been reported recently in the Post-Dispatch. Both were arrested and were later released on bond.

These developments increased the number of realty concerns which have come under inquiry since the Post-Dispatch, April 10, told exclusively the story of August H. Frederick's traffic in forged deeds, to six.

Anxiety over an investigation of his failure to account to clients for money intrusted to him for investment is believed to have caued Haydel, a member of an old St. Louis family, and president of the Haydel Realty Co., 109 North Seventh street, to kill himself.

The Real Estate Exchange, for several days, had been investigating complaints against him by three of his clients, and Adolph P. Erker, member of the optical firm of Erker Bros., was pressing him to make good a $4500 check which he had given to take up notes secured by a deed of trust, and which had been returned by the Mechanics-American National Bank with the notation, "insufficient funds."

Officials of the bank last night refused to say how much money Haydel had on deposit.

Pressed to Settle Claims.

Charles Z. Trembley, president of the Real Estate Exchange, gave out a written statement yesterday that the attorney for the exchange, Warren McGinnis, had under investigation the three complaints. Trembley refused to make public the details, giving as his reason that the investigation had not been completed. He said, however, that nothing in the nature of a forgery charge had been made.

A Post-Dispatch reporter learned by investigation among real estate men that several of Haydel's clients complained that they had entrusted money to him for investment, and had taken his receipt, but had been unable to get him to settle their claims.

Erker said yesterday that he was acting in behalf of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Josephine Erker of 3632 Flora boulevard, who purchased a deed of trust and notes for $4500 from Haydel three years ago. Both he and his sister-in-law refused to explain the realty man's responsibility other than that the deed had been bought from him and they looked to him for payment.

Erker said that he could not recall upon what property the deed of trust was issued, nor the name of the maker of the deed and the notes secured by it.

The notes, Erker said, fell due last Monday. Mrs. Erker wished to use a part of the money and reinvest the balance, and she left the notes and deed of trust with Haydel for collection.

Haydel made no report on the matter Monday, and Erker said he went to see him Tuesday, and told him of his sister-in-law's wishes. Erker said that Haydel made no complaint that he was in tight financial circumstances.

Statement by Erker.

"Wednesday afternoon I received a check for $4500 from Haydel, made out to Mrs. Erker and drawn upon the Mechanics-American National Bank." Erker said. "This check was deposited Thursday in the German Savings Institution, and was put through the Clearing House by that bank. Mrs. Erker was notified by the bank Friday that the Mechanics-American Bank had returned the check with the statement that Haydel did not have sufficient funds on deposit to pay it.

"I tried all day Friday to reach Haydel, but was unable to get into communication with him. If he had explained to me that he was in financial distress, I should not have pressed him, as we have been intimate friends for 25 years.

"His family and my family were on intimate terms. We visited each other often. We have had many business transactions. I had no idea that he was in any sort of trouble."

Would Have Extended Time.

Mrs. Erker said she did not know whether the notes secured by the deed of trust had been paid to Haydel by the makers and the instruments canceled or whether Haydel had been unable to collect from the makers, as she did not have the papers. She said she bought the deed from Haydel, had been paid the interest by him and trusted to him to handle the matter for her, expecting him to pay the principal when it was due.

She said several days before the notes were due she was asked by Haydel if she wished to renew the loan and she told him she preferred not to. She heard nothing more of the matter, she said, until she received Haydel's check, which the bank did not honor. She communicated with Erker, who, she said, tried Friday to reach Haydel for an explanation. She did not press Haydel for payment, she said, and would gladly have extended the time if he had asked it or if she had known he was in financial straits. She said she was satisfied the deed of trust was genuine. She declined to name the makers of the instrument.

Attitude of Trembley.

Trembley and McGinnis had a conference at noon yesterday over the complaints made against Haydel. McGinnis laid all the facts disclosed by his investigation before Trembley, and it was agreed that Trembley should make whatever statement was given out for publication. If the exchange had been able to complete the investigation before Haydel killed himself, Trembley said, he would have given out the facts. Under the circumstances, he said, he did not think it prudent to say anything further about the details at the present time.

Had Been Very Nervous.

Real estate men were unable to make any estimate of the extent to which Haydel was involved. Several men more or less familiar with his affairs said they knew he was in financial difficulty, but had no idea that he had done anything which would make him the subject of an investigation.

The Real Estate Exchange had made

New and Charming Color Effect in Rotogravures! Rhythmic Dancing Beauties, Like Carved Italian Marble! Post-Dispatch Next Sunday

no complaint to Circuit Attorney Harvey. The exchange, following the exposure of A. H. Frederick and Charles Christian Crone, employed two lawyers, McGinnis and former State Senator Charles F. Krone, to investigate all complaints against real estate men. The exchange had voted to lay all substantial complaints before the Circuit Attorney.

Post-Dispatch reporters learned yesterday that Haydel, knowing that he was under investigation by the exchange, had been extremely nervous for the past 10 days. It was said also that he had been drinking heavily for two or three days.

Securities Investigated.

Hundreds of owners of real estate securities have had them investigated since the Frederick and Crone exposures. Real estate men said yesterday that, although millions of dollars had been invested through real estate firms, the losses in all cases which have come to light probably would not exceed $100,000.

Haydel's office on Seventh street was next door to Frederick's office. While the two real estate men were friends, they had no business interests in common, it was said.

Haydel's office was filled with customers when the news of his death was received by his employes. He did a big renting and leasing buiness. Among his customers were many of the descendants of the old French families of St. Louis. These customers trusted him implicitly in the handling of their money, it was said.

The employes declared that they knew nothing of any financial difficulties of Haydel, and had heard of no complaints against him. They closed the place within an hour after his death.

Revolver in His Hand.

Haydel rose at 8 a. m., his usual hour for getting up. He took a bath, and as he was leaving the bathroom he stopped in his wife's room and chatted with her a few minutes. Mrs. Haydel, who was formerly Miss Sophie A. Papin, has been sick for several weeks.

He passed from his wife's room into his own, and a moment later shot himself. He was dressed only in his night clothes. A new cheap revolver was found in his right hand. The bullet penetrated the right temple. Death was instantaneous.

Besides his wife, his aged mother, Mrs. Frank Haydel; his daughter, Dorothy, and his sisters, Mrs. John Jones and Miss Mae Haydel, were in the house.

Dr. G. W. Carson of 4104 West Pine boulevard was called, but there was nothing the physician could do. He notified the Coroner.

Members of the family were not able to find any note left by Haydel. The only explanation they could give was that he had been worried over business affairs and was very nervous.

Haydel was 55 years old, and had been in the real estate business for many years, having inherited the business from his father. The business was founded by his maternal grandfather, John Byrne Jr.

Until two years ago the Haydel family lived in a stately old house at 4321 Virginia avenue, which had formerly been the suburban home of Haydel's grandfather. The house stood on a block of ground, surrounded by forest trees. The property was sold a few years ago and cut into lots.

USHER INSISTS U. S. AND ALLIES HAVE 'UNDERSTANDING'

St. Louis Author of "Pan-Germanism" Holds Statement in Book Is Proven by Events.

Dispatches from New York yesterday reported that Frederick F. Schrader, a writer for the Fatherland, a pro-German war periodical, had asserted in an article to be printed in the issue of May 5 that the United States was in secret alliance with Great Britain. He based this assertion, the dispatch said, chiefly on a statement by Prof. Roland G. Usher of St. Louis in his book, "Pan-Germanism."

Schrader, in his article, is said to have declared that Usher had authoritative knowledge of the fact of an alliance, having obtained this knowledge from Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, who had in turn obtained it from Theodore Roosevelt.

Prof. Usher told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he did not get his information from Dr. Eliot or from Roosevelt. He said he did not care to say where he did get it, but he added that it was sufficient basis for the statement in "Pan-Germanism," and which he holds has been demonstrated by events to be true.

The statement in question, as it appears in the book, is:

"Once the magnitude of Pan-Germanism dawned on the English and French diplomats, they realized the necessity of strengthening their position, and therefore made overtures to the United States, which resulted, probably before the summer of the year 1897, in an understanding between the three countries. There seems to be no doubt whatever that no papers of any sort were signed, and that no pledges were given which circumstances would not justify any one of the contracting parties in denying or possibly repudiating. Nevertheless, an understanding was reached that in case of a war begun by Germany or Austria for the purpose of executing Pan-Germanism, the United States would promptly declare in favor of England and France and would do her utmost to assist them. * * * The alliance, for it was nothing less, was based on infinitely firmer ground than written words * * * the situation, geographic, economic and political, of the contracting nations which made such agreement mutually advantageous to them all."

Prof. Usher declared that one of the events, since the paragraph was written, that tended to prove its correctness was the action of Great Britain in relinquishing naval control of the Gulf of Mexico to the United States.

At present, he said, the United States Government is able, while strictly following precedents, to aid the allies by the sale of munitions of war. But if the United States, in order to aid the allies, had to break precedents, Prof. Usher declared his belief that it would go ahead and break them.

"The alliance between this country and England," he said, "is just the sort of alliance which England always has. England's alliance with France was hardly any closer, for France never knew, until Britain declared war, what Britain was going to do. England does not exchange promises—England only comes to an understanding as to mutual interests. Our understanding with England did not require us to go to war. If it had required this, we would have been getting ready for war in the meantime—a thing we have not done."

WARNINGS AGAIN TRIP ON LUSITAN REACH PASSENGE

Telegrams Signed "John Smith" or "George Jones" Advise Them to Cancel Passage.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Many prominent Americans, departing for Liverpool today on board the Lusitania, received telegrams as they reached the vessel in which they were advised to cancel passage. The telegrams bore signatures like "John Smith" or "George Jones."

Here is one received by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt:

"Have it on definite authority the Lusitania is to be torpedoed. You had better cancel passage immediately."

First and second cabin passengers on reaching the pier were accosted by persons unknown to them, most of whom spoke English with a German accent, and warned to remain ashore.

Notwithstanding the messages and warnings and the advertisement of the German Embassy, which appeared in the morning newspapers, warning Americans to keep off British ships, the Lusitania steamed into the Atlantic with 1310 passengers aboard.

"The Germans have been trying to spoil our trade for some time," said Charles P. Summer, general agent of the Cunard line, "but never until today have they manifested such an actively friendly desire to put us out of business."

Charge Against Nicholls in Case of Deal to Build an Apartment

The embezzlement charge on which Nicholls was indicted was made by John B. Westermayer of 3615 Juniata street. Westermayer's charge, as outlined to the grand jury, set forth the following state of facts:

Early in 1913, the Ashdown Realty Co. desired to improve a vacant lit in Nina place, Parkview, which it owned, with an apartment house to cost $8500. For this purpose, the Ashdown company executed a deed of trust for $8500 on the lot, covering the intended building as well, and placed it in Nicholl's hands, to be sold at a commission of 2 1-2 per cent, for Nicholls' services in raising the money, and in distributing it for the apartment house, according to specified plans.

Nicholls, acting for the Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Co., sold this deed to Westermayer, it is alleged, taking a $4500 check and a deed of trust for $4000, of unquestioned value, in payment. Nicholls paid out $1500 or $1600 on the building, and then ceased to make payments for this purpose. This left a balance of $7000 received from Westermayer and not expended for the building, and this $7000 Nicholls is now charged with having embezzled.

Nicholls' View of Case.

Nicholls, in a signed statement issued a few days ago as to the Westermayer transaction, said that the reason for his failure to continue making the payments on the building was the closing of his place of business by a Constable last June, and the ensuing bankruptcy proceedings. He suggested that Westermayer's only legal redress would lie in a suit against the Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Co., and Nicholls and Ritter personally.

The view taken by the Circuit Attorney and the grand jury was that Nicholls, in selling the deed to Westermayer, obligated himself to spend the entire $8500 for the purpose agreed on, and that without the erection of the building, the security for the loan was not complete. This money, it was held, should have been kept apart by Nicholls for this purpose, and it was not liable to other claims against him. Its use for any other purpose was held to have constituted embezzlement.

Nicholls Gives Bond.

Nicholls was arrested at his office, 720 Chestnut street, where he now conducts a real estate business. He was dictating to his stenographer at the time. He asked the Deputy Sheriff who made the arrest what the charge was, and expressed surprise that an indictment had been found. He went, in custody, to the Municipal Courts Building, and, finding no Judge there, went to the Mercantile Club, where Judge Fisher was spending the afternoon. Henry B. Scannel, a builder, signed the bond, which was in the sum of $2000. Attorney Robert Nichols, who aided Nicholls in arranging the bond, said later that he would not represent him in his trial.

The Nicholls-Ritter Co. (Richcard F. Goodnow had withdrawn before that time) went into bankruptcy last June, with debts of $300,000 and assets which were variously estimated from $29.55 to $5000. E. P. V. Ritter, the other member of the firm, who was in New York, has not since visited St. Louis. The grand jury made a partial inquiry into the company's affairs after its condition had been shown in the Federal Court bankruptcy proceedings, but no action resulted.

The Frederick expose of three weeks ago, and the inquiry which it started in other cases, are believed to have been the chief cause of the renewal of complaints against Nicholls.

Nicholls was formerly an elder in the Grand avenue (now the Westminster) Presbyterian Church, but he resigned this position after the bankruptcy case had given publicity to his business affairs. He was for years superintendent of the Sunday school there, and taught a Bible class.

COMPLAINT IN THE DANIEL CASE

Daniel, whose transactions were first brought before the grand jury two weeks ago, was arrested at 2 p. m., and gave bond in the sum of $1500 at 5:30, before Judge Arnold in the courthouse, with Sam Arky as bondsman. He refused to make any statement.

Dr. William Brantner Temm of 1469 Union boulevard, a dentist, was complainant against Daniel. Dr. Temm went to the Circuit Attorney two weeks ago and complained that he had purchased four deeds of trust from the Daniel Realty Co., under the impression that they were first deeds of trust. He had the deeds investigated by John J. Dowling, real estate dealer at 1134 Chestnut street, and found, he said, that three were second deeds, one being on property which had been sold under foreclosure on a first deed, and that the remaining one was forged.

The one which was said to be forged bore the purported signatures of J. T. Lefler and his wife. It was for $650, and covered a lot in Vinita Park. Lefler and his wife denied having signed the deed, and said they never owned the property in question.

The deed was described, in a receipt produced by Dr. Temm, with J. T. Daniel's signature, as a first deed.

11 of the Victoria's Crew Rescued.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 1.—Eleven of the crew of the steamship Victoria, which foundered off the Coronado Islands late last night, were picked up by the schooner Flyer this afternoon. They had taken to the lifeboats shortly before the Victoria sank. The Victoria's 15 passengers were taken off last night by the American-Hawaiian steamer American.

TWO MEN SHOT AT BEER PARTY ON OLIVE STREET

Police Think Assailants Who Fired Through Fence Sought to Steal Keg of Beverage.

John McFadden, an engineer, 2215 Olive street, and William Waltz, a guest at a party in honor of McFadden's birthday, were strangely wounded about 10:30 o'clock last night, when revolver shots were fired through a gate at the rear of McFadden's house. The assailants escaped.

There were about a dozen men and their wives at the party, and the guests were in the dining room about the table when McFadden, according to his statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter, heard a noise at the fence in the alley. Burglars entered McFadden's home three times last year, he said, and he built a high fence with a strong gate as a protection.

He and Waltz walked to the gate and asked who was there. They heard two or three voices in the alley, and then someone said: "Come on out and we'll show you."

The two men turned back to the house to arm themselves with pokers before opening the gate. They took a few steps, and then four shots were fired, the bullets splintering the gate. Both McFadden and Waltz were hit in the thigh. The former, after treatment at the dispensary, returned home. Waltz, who was more painfully injured, was taken to the city hospital.

Policemen found an abandoned wheelbarrow at Twenty-second and Pine stheets, two blocks away.

A keg of beer, in readiness for the birthday party, was standing on ice in McFadden's back yard. The police theory was that an attempt was made to steal the beer and take it away on the wheelbarrow, and that the would-be thieves shot McFadden and Waltz.

FEDERAL JURY TO INVESTIGATE VOTE BUYING AT PARIS, ILL.

PARIS, Ill., May 1.—Alleged vote buying in Edgar County at the election last fall, will be investigated by a Federal grand jury. A Deputy United States Marshal today served summonses on several persons to appear in East St. Louis Monday to testify. Among those served were Charles Brown, a restaurant keeper, William Devers and George Nelson, a policeman.

POPULARITY OF BASE BALL

Base ball has grown to gigantic proportions within the last decade, and the scientific work of the teams has been the delight of millions of spectators. There are so many things to admire in the game that it is impossible to describe them. Outdoor exercise is one of Nature's best aids in promoting health and strength and keeping the blood rich and pure; but, perhaps you are one of the many who are denied that privilege. You lead a sedentary life, which always has a tendency to make the liver lazy, the bowels clogged and digestion poor. Oftentimes you are nervous, sleepless, have no appetite and feel run down.

Under these conditions you will greatly appreciate the assistance to be derived from a trial of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It helps Nature by toning and strengthening the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, and with these organs in a normal condition your system is well fortified against an attack of Sick Headache, Heartburn, Indigestion, Cramps, Constipation, Billiousness or Malaria, Fever or Ague.

Always take good care of your health and you will be well repaid, while carelessness only brings suffering and distress. Let Hostetter's Stomach Bitters help you to maintain your health.—ADV.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE TO STAGE PEACE PAGEANT

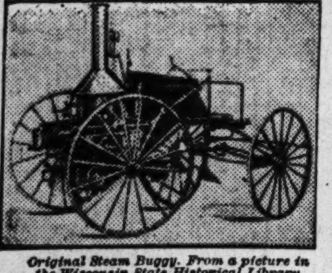
300 Persons Will Be in Cast of Performance at Motordrome on May 30.

The Equal Suffrage League has arranged to produce a Peace Pageant at the Motordrome, Grand and Meramec, May 30, with the possibility of a second performance next day. There will be 300 persons in the cast, almost all of whom are connected with dramatic organizations in St. Louis. The book has been written by Frank P. and Kate Richards O'Hare and introduces leaders of the nations of war, America, Peace, Democracy, History, Charity, Religion and Science, more than a score of other characters.

Folk songs and dances will be a feature, the groups representing the various nations being made up of members of German, French, Russian and other organizations here.

Joseph Solari will act as director of the production.

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening field.



"In 1871 the Case Company aided in building this steam buggy."
—J. W. Carhart.

Original Steam Buggy. From a picture in the Wisconsin State Historical Library

Notice the difference between this steam buggy and the present-day CASE Car. This contrast pictures better than anything else the progress of the Case Company during the past forty-four years.

Since the earliest day of horseless carriages, the Case engineers have kept apace—often ahead—of motor car development.

The present CASE car is the result of years of study, of years of development. The picture of the CASE Car may look like other automobiles—it, too, has four wheels and a hood and a body.

But it is built in the CASE way. There's the difference. The CASE Company could never consent to produce a car less reliable than its other products. For 72 years the CASE name has been an honored one because the Company has kept faith with men. Our motives may be selfish in thus making worthy products. But we are determined to make CASE Cars worthy of the name they bear.

This justifies our statement—always proved to those interested—that the CASE Car abounds in "Hidden Values."

In looking at the CASE you would merely see its style, its finish, its roominess. In driving it—you merely "feel" its power, control and comfort.

But when you come to go into construction details—when you commence to compare it—detail by detail—then you commence to realize its Hidden Values. When you have driven it for several years—when you look back at the lack of repair bills and the low operating costs—then you know it is honestly built. You realize that only superior materials have been used, made and put together by painstaking craftsmen.

There are 33 ways we could have made a CASE costing less—but it would have been a car less perfect. We have built for you the kind of car you'd want to build for yourself. We sincerely believe it is the best car of its class—and as good as cars costing far more.

While we have never "skimped" on the car to reduce its price—there are two ways we save where others must spend:

1. This car is built in the immense CASE plant, backed by CASE engineers. We lost no time or money in establishing our motor car department.

2. The CASE Car is sold by our established sales organization—world-wide. We thus save the usual heavy selling expense.

What we save in these two items goes right back into the car. Otherwise it never could be priced so low.

The Sign of Mechanical Excellence the World Over

Its price, remember, includes as regular equipment an Extra Tire, Extra Inner Tube on Rim with Cover, Weed Non-Skid Tire Chains and 8-Day Clock. This wonderful CASE Car—and its extra equipment—for $1350, 5 per cent discount if cash!

Will you come in today to see this car? We are always glad to show it, without obligating you.

CHINA REJECTS JAPAN'S DEMANDS; CONFERENCE ENDS

Japan in Turn Withdraws Offer to Restore Tsingtau to China; Concessions Refused Include Whole of Group, Held to Be the Most Important.

PEKIN, May 2 (Sunday).—China has replied to the Japanese demands in a note which, while complying with some of the demands, definitely refused to accede to others, including the most important embodied in what is known as group 5.

China also has furnished to the Japanese Minister, Eki Hioki, a list of further concessions which she is willing to grant, but after perusing the note and the list Hioki declared that it was far from complying with the 24 demands as presented by his Government.

This action was taken after President Yuan Shi Kai had thoroughly discussed the entire situation with the members of his Cabinet and his advisers since last Monday.

The Chinese plenipotentiaries met the Japanese plenipotentiaries by arrangement yesterday at the Foreign Office and presented China's reply, which, in substance, refused the so-called "general demands" of Japan.

Maximum Concessions.

Hioki asked whether these were China's maximum concessions, and then whether he should cable his Government. Lu Cheng-Hsiang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, replied that these were China's maximum concessions and that the Japanese Minister could so inform his Government.

The conference terminated with neither the Japanese nor Chinese asking for another meeting. Should the Japanese Government now present an ultimatum or occupy more territory in China, it is intimated that the Chinese probably would appeal to the four Powers which are pledged to China's independence.

On perceiving that the Chinese reply failed to agree to the demands of his Government, the Jaapnese Minister declared the withdrawal of Japan's proposal to return to China Tsingtau, which was conditioned on China's deferring no longer the acceptance of Japan's demands.

The Chinese note briefly recites the history of the negotiations. It denies Japan's charge that China has displayed procrastination and delayed the conferences by disputing various points, and also the charges of Chinese insincerity and unfriendliness. It further denies that China is conducting a newspaper campaign abroad. These were the reasons the Japanese plenipotentiaries gave for presenting their latest list of 24 demands as a preliminary to an ultimatum.

Counter Proposals Made.

The list of concessions is in the nature of counter proposals. China asks the right to participate in an international conference in which the altered status of Shantung will be rearranged, indemnity for the losses incurred in consequence of the Tsingtau campaign and also restoration of its status as before the war. These three requests are repeated from China's original counter-proposals. China offers further concessions with respect to Manchuria, almost meeting the Japanese demands. China accedes to three of the four demands regarding Mongolia, namely the opening of treaty ports, preference in railway loans and the non-pledging of local taxes. The agricultural demand is rejected.

Respecting the Hanyehping company, China agrees that, pending the eventual formation of a Chino-Japanese company, the Government cannot make the company state-owned or borrow foreign capital for the repayment of the Japanese loan. The Chinese understand that this is acceptable to Japan. China rejects the fifth group with the exception of the modified Fukien demand, offering in this connection a separate note, intended to meet Japan's wishes, by pledging that no foreigners shall receive coastal concessions or contracts without Japan's consent.

WASHINGTON LOOKS FOR A COMPROMISE

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Rejection by China of the so-called "general group" of the Japanese demands occasioned little surprise in official quarters here. While the railway and mining concessions sought pertaining directly to certain local section of China in which the Japanese are endeavoring to establish a sphere of influence, have been regarded as not difficult of adjustment, the articles in group 5 have been looked upon since the beginning by the Chinese as the most vital to the maintenance of the territorial integrity and sovereignty of China.

It was recalled today that China early in February virtually rejected the same demands by refusing to discuss them, even in principle. Their reappearance in a modified form was believed by the Japanese to offer a basis for compromising; but China's action today indicates her unwillingness to admit the articles to discussion even under modification.

Observers here familiar with Far Eastern affairs did not believe that a crisis had been reached; but that with the expression by each side in the negotiations of its extreme position, the way would be opened for compromises.

It generally was believed that the rejection by China of group 5 would be followed by further conferences and an endeavor to reconstruct the series of articles along lines more acceptable to China.

Secretary Bryan continued today his policy of absolute silence on the Japanese-Chinese situation; but it is assumed in diplomatic quarters here that both the United States and Great Britain are greatly exerting influence toward a satisfactory adjustment of the situation by compromises.

How often have you sat beside a Phonograph and thought, "Could I but play it—could I but exercise some power of control over this music! How wonderfully perfect, how satisfactory, how much more interesting would the Phonograph become!"

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION

Is a Better Phonograph and One that You Can Play

When You Play It

When you play the Aeolian-Vocalion by means of its wonderful new feature—The Graduola—you do not change the artist's interpretation. That remains always, in spirit, the same.

His phrasing, his tempo, are part of the Record. These you neither can, nor indeed do you desire, to alter.

But this you can do. You can give to the music new beauty and a new quality of livingness. You can vary it in subtle details, just as the Artist himself varies his every performance.

You can shade and color the tones, now rendering this soft passage, still softer. Again giving to these brave phrases still greater power and dominance.

Think what this means! Mastery of the Phonograph means mastery of all instruments and voices.

Do you love the violin? Then play violin Records expressing your own musical instincts with the bows of the world's most famous masters. Do you wish to sing? The sweetest, best-trained voices in the world are yours.

Words cannot picture the charm and interest of the Aeolian-Vocalion with its marvelous new tone-control. You must hear it and play it yourself. Then you will comprehend why it has leapt into instant and amazing popularity.

When It Plays for You

When you let The Aeolian-Vocalion play for you—for like other Phonographs it will play itself—you are astonished at what sound like new tones and effects.

The music is richer and deeper and fuller than any you have heard before from a Phonograph. Nor do you hear any of those noises that have seemed to be inseparable from phonographic reproduction.

Every instrumental Record that it plays reflects its own distinctive tone-quality. The violin is truly a violin, with all the wistful, string beauty of that instrument. Clarionets, flutes, horns, all identify themselves the moment they are heard. While vocal Records sound like the veritable living tones of human beings, not like strident reproductions.

If you use The Aeolian-Vocalion for dancing, another phase of its superiority to other Phonographs, becomes apparent. Its fullness and body of tone, give it greater carrying power than other Phonographs possess. Without loudness or harshness, its musical strains pervade a greater area, reaching the ears of even those relatively distant from it.

The Aeolian-Vocalion is made in a large variety of beautiful models. Its prices compare favorably with those of Phonographs of other make. One favorite style, costing $90, may be purchased for $10 down and $5 per month. All the different models are sold on equally moderate terms. Liberal allowances are made on Talking Machines of other make, taken in exchange.

MAN SHOT BY FORMER WIFE IN COURT CORRIDOR DIES

Kansas City Killing and Attempted Suicide Followed Loss of Annulment Suit.

KANSAS CITIL, Mo., May 1.—Louis Schweiger, shot by his former wife while standing in the corridor of the County Courthouse here this morning, died late today. Mrs. Clara Schweiger, his assailant, will recover from two self-inflicted bullet wounds, physicians said tonight. After firing five shots into the body of her former husband, Mrs. Schweiger turned the weapon on herself.

In a statement, which he signed just before he died, Schweiger declared Mrs. Schweiger had made threats to shoot him.

The shooting followed a ruling in court concerning a petition for annulment of divorce, brought by Mrs. Schweiger. The ruling was adverse to her. Schweiger obtained a divorce last November.

DRUMMERS TO MEET MAY 13

The Missouri Drummers' Association will hold its tenth annual meeting at Jefferson City May 13, 14 and 15. About 250 persons are expected to go from St. Louis. Mayor Kiel will accompany the St. Louis delegation.

Warden McClung of the penitentiary is arranging to have a minstrel show given by convicts for the visitors. There will be a white suit parade and a barbecue and dance.

DEPOSED KHEDIVE OF EGYPT STILL CLAIMS THRONE

Abbas Hilmi Pasha Tells Post-Dispatch Correspondent in Vienna He Did Not Abdicate and Gives Details of His Break With England.

HIS ALLEGIANCE IS TO TURKEY

Says British Ordered Him to Go to Italy Until After War and He Refused—Asserts His People Want Freedom.

By CARL H. VON WIEGAND.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
(Copyright, 1915, by Press Pub. Co.)

VIENNA, via The Hague, May 1.—Abbas Hilmi Pasha, who was deposed as Khedive of Egypt by the British at the outbreak of the war, does not consider himself an ex-Khedive. He told me today he had not abdicated and was the rightful ruler. He denied Great Britain's right to depose him and said Egypt still dreamed of freedom. At present his allegiance is to Turkey, not to Great Britain, and to have espoused the cause of the latter against the Sultan would have been treason. Abbas Hilmi Pasha is living here at the Imperial Hotel. He is delightfully democratic, speaks English fluently and is an altogether pleasing man to interview.

Through the aid of a friend, for many years in the Egyptian service, I was enabled to meet him today. Emphatically denying a report that the British Government had at any time requested him to return to Egypt or that he had refused to comply with such request, this late successor to the Pharaoahs, Abbas Hilma Pasha, told me for the first time something about the break between himself and the British. He was attired in a plain business suit and there was nothing about him indicative of the ruler of the land of the Sphinx and the pyramids. His appearance was rather that of a keen and successful business man.

Was Not Asked to Return.

"No, it is not true the English asked me to return to Egypt," said he, "quite the contrary, I was given to understand I was not to return and it was plain there could be no misunderstanding of it."

"How does it come that Your Highness is in Vienna instead of Cairo?" I asked. "I was in Constantinople, recovering from a wound inflicted by a would-be assassin when the war broke out. I intended leaving immediately for Egypt, but the English advised me not to hurry back, that everything in Egypt was quiet, that the weather was too hot in Cairo to make it advisable for me to return then, that the trip might prove too much for me, although it would have been a short and easy voyage down through the Dardanelles in my yacht.

"When it became evident that Turkey would become involved in the war, Sir Lewis Mallet, British Ambassador at Constantinople, informed me I should leave Constantinople, but not to return to Cairo. He insisted I must go to Italy and remain there during the war. I asked why not Switzerland or elsewhere, but he said no, I must go and remain in Italy.

"England not only wanted me out of Constantinople, but tried to force me to go to Italy. I refused. That caused the break between myself and the English and that is why I am today in Vienna instead of my palace at Cairo."

Has Not Abdicated, He Says.

The Khedive seemed disinclined to say what motives actuated England in not wanting him to return to Cairo during the war. "I am telling you the facts in the case," he continued. "England can best answer for herself as to the reasons for her wrongful action toward me."

"Is it to be understood that Your Highness has abdicated?" I asked.

"No, sir, I have neither abdicated nor renounced my own rights or those of my children to the throne of Egypt," he declared with much emphasis. "I have worked for my country for 23 years. I owed allegiance and fealty to the Sultan of Turkey, of whom Egypt is a dependancy. It was right I should go to Turkey in this war. Racially and in religion Egypt is part of the Turkish empire. Egypt had no complaint to make against the Turkish sovereignty. Egypt has been autonomous to the point of almost practical independence. There has been no disposition on the part of Turkey to encroach on the independence, rights and liberties. On the contrary, the Turkish Sultans from time to time increased rather than decreased those rights, liberties and autonomy that Egypt enjoyed."

"Do you recognize the right of the English to depose you and declare your throne vacant?"

"I do not. I have always been considered and treated as an independent sovereign, with all the honors attached thereto. I was so received and honored by other sovereigns whom I have visited. I had the right to confer honors and decorations on others, given me for that purpose by the Sultan.

Right of Might, He Asserts.

"Through my Ministers I dealt direct with other sovereigns, and I cannot, therefore, see by what standpoint of right, if we speak of right, that the English can depose me. That right is merely the right of might in this case."

"Has Your Highness any hope of getting back the throne of Egypt?"

"This war is not an Egyptian question, but a great general European question, in which also Egypt and its future are involved," said the clever Egyptian by way of polite evasion.

I asked if the Egyptians were happy, contented and satisfied under British rule or if there was feeling against the English. He said:

"It is natural that the Egyptians desire freedom, and that this feeling finds expression. Egypt, like every other country, prefers being free from foreign domination. Since 1882 the Egyptians have had to pay the cost of British army occupation."

The ex-Khedive was disinclined further to discuss political conditions in Egypt, but started to talk about the relations between Egypt and America.

Americans Welcome Visitors.

"Americans are among our most welcome visitors," he said. "It was the mission sent to America by my great-grandfather which first brought cotton to Egypt. The first instructions given our modern Egyptian army was by American army officers. The uniform which the Egyptian army wears we call our American uniform because it still largely consists of designs by the American instructors of those days.

"In our irrigation system we owe much to American engineers, many of whom came to the Nile to study and also to introduce their ideas brought from America. I kept up this American tradition of my great-grandfather and my grandfather. Whenever English engineers submitted plans I always conferred with American engineers to get their ideas."

Many young men in Egypt owe their education to America, he added, saying that at present over 100 Egyptian students are in the American College in Beyrout.

"Of all the foreign institutions of learning in the Levant the American is the most popular with the Turks and Egyptians, because of the tolerance and respect for our religion. Few people realize the great work your institutions in Beyrout and elsewhere are doing."

THEODORE FEHLIG, PRESIDENT OF BOX COMPANY, DIES

Webster Groves Man Was Active Charity Worker—Once Head of German St. Vincent Society.

Theodore Fehlig, president and general manager of the Fehlig Brothers Box Manufacturing Co., died yesterday at his home in Webster Groves. He had been a resident of St. Louis for nearly half a century. He was 75 years old. He organized the box concern in 1887. Prior to that he was engaged in business with his brother, Frank Fehlig, at Nineteenth and Wash streets.

Fehlig, who was born at Hanover, Germany, was an officer in the German army. After he came to St. Louis he took an active part in charitable work and was for many years president of the German St. Vincent Orphan Society.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, the Rev. J. C. Fehlig, C. F. Fehlig, vice president of the box company, and John Fehlig, secretary and treasurer of the company, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph A. Wangler and Miss Louise Fehlig

Think What Security One Gets in a HUDSON

The HUDSON is built by one of the strongest concerns in the industry.

It is built by the largest builder of class cars—cars that cost over $1250.

It is designed by Howard E. Coffin, whose designs have for years led the trend in America.

It shows the Light Six in perfection. Scores of engineers worked for years to get every detail right.

And 12,000 owners in 43 countries have proved this Light Six faultless. In the past two seasons they have driven it at least 30 million miles.

Our Prize Success

There have been many successful HUDSONS, but none so successful as this. When this Light Six came out—the first model—it took a year to catch up with our orders.

Sales last year—$11,500,000—nearly doubled the year before. This year shows another amazing increase.

And never was a car so widely copied as this Hudson—the pioneer Light Six.

Look a Year Ahead

When you buy a Light Six look a year ahead. Do more than consider how rival cars perform now. There are many years coming for the car you buy.

You want a Light Six when you buy a class car. You want lightness, economy, low upkeep cost. Crude, heavy cars are not popular now.

Get the Light Six that has proved itself right. The HUDSON has done that for two seasons, in more than 12,000 hands.

Luxury's High Mark

This HUDSON sets a new high mark, in beauty, finish, comfort and equipment. We have given a whole year to refinements since the model itself was perfected. You will be proud to own it.

Last Spring there was a shortage of HUDSONS. Buyers waited weeks for cars. Now we have larger output, but there will be far from enough, we think. With such a popular car it is wise to choose early. We urge you to come this week.

RAE TANZER GOES BACK TO CHARGE AGAINST OSBORNE

After Two Retractions She Now Asserts Former Prosecutor Was Admirer.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Rae Tanzer renewed today her charge that James W. Osborne and Oliver Osborne are the same man. She was a witness in Judge Hough's part of the United States District Court, where Franklin D. Safford is on trial on a charge of perjury in having sworn that the two Osbornes were one. She maintained the accusation while admitting that she had twice declared it was not true.

In admitting these retractions the girl demanded that she be allowed to tell "my story of how I changed." The privilege was denied her, Judge Hough upholding the objections of the Government. Assitant United States Attorney Hershenstein said that further proceedings as a result of the girl's new testimony were to be expected.

The girl was then excused, but before she left the stand she asked once more: "Aren't you going to let me explain?"

No one answered, and her sister, Dora, was called. When she was asked to say whether James W. Osborne was the Oliver Osborne who had visited the Tanzer home she answered: "I dasen't say, because I have been indicted for perjury."

ARCHDUKE HONORS SERGEANT WHO LED MEN FROM PRZEMYSL

VIENNA, May 1.—Sergeant Johann Szacz and a detachment of 14 hussars, who were attached to the Austrian garrison at Przemysl, Galicia, have reached the Austrian lines after an adventurous journey.

They left Przemysl a few hours before the Russians arrived on March 22. On a number of occasions they encountered Russian patrols, but lost only one man.

Archduke Joseph Ferdinand invited Sergeant Szacz to dinner and rewarded him with gold and silver medals for distinguishad service.

PASTOR, 62, LOST $8200 SAVINGS BY FREDERICK FRAUD

The Rev. John H. Nollau of Waterloo, Ill., Has Only Salary Left.

The Rev. John H. Nollau, 62 years old, for the last 30 years pastor of the Evangelical Church at Waterloo, Ill., it was learned by the Post-Dispatch last night, lost approximately $8200, representing the savings of a lifetime, through investments in real estate deeds of trust bought from A. H. Frederick, who is serving a 10-year sentence in the State penitentiary for forgery in the first degree.

An account of his loss was confirmed by officials of the State National Bank of Waterloo, who, at the time of the exposure of Frederick's fraudulent transactions, investigated four deeds of trust held by the Rev. Mr. Nollau on St. Louis property and found them to be worthless. The action of the bank in this matter led to the erroneous report at the time of the Frederick inquiry that the bank was the loser to the amount of $8200.

The Rev. Mr. Nollau is in Addieville, Ill., attending a church convention, and could not be reached by a reporter. His son, Armin Nollau, and his wife, however, confirmed his loss, and said that he was left penniless except for his salary as minister at a time when he will soon be forced to give up his pastorate because of failing sight.

Before going to Waterloo the Rev. Mr. Nollau was pastor of St. Mark's Evangelical Church at Soulard and Jackson streets, St. Louis, where Frederick's father was a member of his congregation. Frederick, members of the minister's family said, grew up in that church, and his brother, Charles, was confirmed there. Mr. Nollau at that time was well known in St. Louis.

Shortly prior to 1908 the clergyman and his family had saved a few thousand dollars and then one of his sons died, leaving insurance which brought the total to about $8200. It had required exceedingly economical living on the part of all members of the family, they said last night, to lay aside from a minister's salary this little sum for a rainy day.

Had Confidence in Frederick.

The Rev. Mr. Nallau decided to invest the sum through Frederick because he had known him from boyhood and had the greatest confidence in him. He bought four deeds of trust on St. Louis property, one for $2400, one for $2200, and two others representing the balance of the investment, but the amounts of each could not be learned last night. The minister received his interest regularly, going in person to Frederick's office to collect.

The last time Mr. Nollau visited Frederick's office was shortly before the exposure of the latter's frauds, when he collected his interest.

"I am growing blind and soon will have to send my daughter Clara to collect the interest," the pastor is said to have told Frederick at that time.

Was Told Not to Worry.

Frederick told him not to worry, as the money would be paid to the daughter, who is a grown young woman, without any trouble. The income from these investments has been expended liberally by the preacher and his family for charity and living expenses, as it was received.

Members of the family said the minister has had an operation on one eye and can not see well out of the other. He can hardly read his Bible and has to memorize the texts for his Sunday sermons. He feels that his eyesight will soon give way entirely, and that he will have to give up the ministry. He had no suspicion of any irregularity in Frederick's transactions until the exposure was made by the Post-Dispatch.

5 PERSONS MAROONED ON ISLAND

Admiral Howard to Send Vessel to Rescue Them.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Admiral Howard, commanding the Pacific fleet, was directed today to send a vessel to Guadaloupe Island, off the Mexican coast 300 miles south of San Diego, Cal., to rescue five San Francisco citizens shipwrecked and marooned on the island.

No details of the shipwreck were given by Senator-elect Phelan of California who made the request.

DR. GORGAS TELLS MEDICAL RESERVES OF WAR DUTIES

Older Members Would Escape Field Work, Being Assigned to Stationary Hospitals.

Dr. William Crawford Gorgas, Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, told 34 members of the St. Louis branch of the Medical Reserve Corps, U. S. Army, at a banquet at the St. Louis Club last night, what they would have to do in case the United States should go to war.

Dr. Harvey C. Mudd, who acted as toastmaster, is president of the St. Louis branch, and Dr. W. C. G. Kirchner is vice-president. Some of the members are of rather advanced age for military duty and Dr. Gorgas mentioned this fact which, he said, would not disqualify them.

"In the event of war," said Dr. Gorgas, "40,000 beds would have to be prepared, distributed among 80 hospitals. The older members of the Medical Reserve Corps would not have to go into the field, but would be assigned to the hospitals, and volunteer surgeons could be assigned to field hospitals and ambulance work."

Army officers from Jefferson Barracks and representatives of medical societies were also among the 50 guests. Dr. Gorgas repeated, in a somewhat different form, the unfavorable comment which he made, in his address at the Washington University Medical School. Friday, on the attitude of the Panama Canal management toward his anti-mosquito work. In his talk Friday he declared that Col. George W. Goethals, whom he designated by his office, though not mentioning his name, was to blame for the failure to rid the canal zone of malaria. He was not so explicit last night, but his remarks were of similar tenor.

"In Havana, during the American occupation," he said, "I could sit in my office and write an order, and know it would be fulfilled within a week. In Panama, the orders I wrote would have no more effect than the wind. Lack of organization was the trouble."

Dr. Gorgas will leave at noon today for Washington. He spoke at the City Club luncheon yesterday on the development of the tropics which modern sanitation may bring about, and on the benefit which should come to the Mississippi Valley from this development.

TRAINS OF TWO CARS TO BE RUN ON CREVE COEUH LINE

Other Changes Made by United Railways to Lessen Danger of Accidents.

Trains of two cars instead of single coaches will be operated on the Creve Coeur line hereafter. In order to forestall accident, the United Railways Co. has decided to run trains instead of cars because they can be operated at greater intervals and, while admitting of the same speed, lessen the chance of rear-end accidents.

To further prevent accidents, the company has equipped each car with its own automatic air compresser, which insures that the air pressure will never go under the required amount to stop the car. The trains are to be so arranged that the motorman of the forward car applies the brakes to both cars at the same time.

In addition to these safety precautions, the company has installed new whistles which may be heard at a great distance.

—inch by inch Studebaker proves its superiority

And it's SUPERIORITY that you can see for yourself—with your own eyes, if you'll just take the opportunity to go over the Studebaker chassis in detail.

Some manufacturers, you know, who make both a Four and a Six, put the GOOD design into the more expensive SIX. But you take this Studebaker FOUR and stand it side by side with any other car, and study it just on QUALITY. And inch by inch, note the Studebaker superiorities.

First of all, look at that Studebaker-Wagner Electric System. Simple—light—balanced almost to the ounce—every little detail of the whole system EASY to get at. Has been used on 100,000 Studebakers with unfailing success.

And then, note how simply and cleanly that Studebaker Motor is built—and how ACCESSIBLE it is. Carburetor sits high on side of the motor. Valves are easily gotten at. And you can make any inspection or adjustment simply by raising the hood. Built to develop plenty of POWER, too—but to make every last drop of gasoline pull.

And just in passing, look at the Studebaker Steering Gear. Irreversible type, you know, that keeps the road-shocks away from the steering-wheel and makes driving EASIER—and safer. Adjustable for wear, too. Many cars use the old, reversible type that costs less.

Then, note that simple Studebaker Clutch. It's a cone clutch, you know—leather-faced, SOFT-gripping. No jerking when you throw it in. And it's so easy to get at for inspection or oiling.

Then, note that ALL the wiring is enclosed in flexible steel conduits that protect them from moisture and oil and grease and damage from tools. Makes wiring trouble-proof.

Observe the Williard Storage Battery that Studebaker uses. Best that's made—3-cell type. Placed so as to be EASY to see and get at for filling. That's Studebaker attention to details.

And that Studebaker Brake Equalizer—that's mighty important. Many cars omit it—too costly. But it makes the cars SAFER—stops skidding—saves tires. And the only other one like this is on a $5,000 car.

Notice, too, that the transmission is in unit with the Rear Axle. Increases the manufacturing cost—but insures perfect alignment, smothers any vibration of the gears and gets more even distribution of weight. Makes the whole car ride and drive more easily.

And note that Studebaker uses TWO radius rods and a torque arm. Many cars drive thro' the springs. But that necessitates stiffer springs. Makes the car HARD-riding. While the TWO radius rods and the torque arm that Studebaker uses leaves the springs free just for smothering the jolts and jars. Makes the car marvelously EASY-riding.

And then, of course, that FULL-floating Rear Axle will interest you. For, with one exception, every other FOUR uses the earlier type. But Studebaker uses this FULL-floating axle even tho' it's more costly, because it's so much SAFER and easier to get at. Carries the weight of the car on the axle housing and has TWO Timken Bearings in each hub to take up the side-thrusts. Axle shaft only has ONE duty—to turn the wheels. Shaft can be removed, too, in less than two minutes. Note, too, that axle housing. Other cars use malleable castings—THIS is a much stronger and much LIGHTER steel stamping with folded edges.

And so you can go over this Studebaker inch by inch and find scores of SUPERIORITIES. For Studebaker has built this FOUR to live up to the PROMISE of that name of Studebaker. Every last detail has to represent the latest achievement in engineering and the highest quality in manufacturing. We don't want you to buy the car unless you are satisfied that it does, too. But we KNOW that when you stand it side by side with any other car, you'll find that just on merit it's a better buy. And it costs you from $90 to $225 less at the start—and less right along in upkeep. See it today.

Sales of the Seven-Passenger Chandler Are Establishing New Record

CHANDLER SIX $1295
The Pioneer Light-Weight Six

We are showing the New Seasons seven-passenger Chandler to many enthusiastic callers ever day. Without exception, everyone is delighted with the car, and orders insure by long odds the most successful season this famous pioneer of light sixes has ever had.

The factory has greatly increased its production, and our allotment is liberal, but you will do well to place your order at once to be sure of prompt delivery.

The luxurious new body is a genuine seven-passenger body. No cramping, no crowding. When not in use the two auxiliary seats fold away neatly entirely out of sight in the floor and the back of the front seat, leaving the tonneau free from any marring obstruction and converting the car into an extremely roomy five-passenger carriage.

Not long ago a car of such beauty and size and convenience immediately brought to mind the thought of high price. Rich men were paying four and five thousand dollars for cars of such comfort only a couple of years ago. Yet today you can buy this car for $1295. Only a couple of years ago, too, such a price would have been sensational for a small, good four-cylinder car. And here, today, for this price you get the leader of speedy, powerful, flexible, light-weight sixes.

A great many people who really wanted and needed seven-passenger cars have done without them because of excessive weight and expensive maintenance. This obstacle has been overcome now. For the new seven-passenger Chandler completely equipped is still under the 3000 pound mark.

Such a car seems quite impossible for $1295. But the Chandler has always offered seemingly impossible value for its price. It has brought the highest grade six-cylinder construction within reach of the average purse, and the conservative purse.

No Other Car at Less Than $2000
Possesses All These High-Grade Features

The exclusive Chandler motor, of Chandler design and built in the Chandler factory. A powerful, quiet, economical, beautifully finished motor any man may well be proud of.

HORSE'S SIGNAL STOPS TRAIN

DEFIANCE, O., May 1.—An engineer on a fast express on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad received a signal to stop his train near here. It was an emergency signal, so the train was stopped as quickly as possible. The conductor, amazed, ran to the engine, arriving just as the engineer was preparing to go back to the train to ascertain the trouble. Both were dismayed when told no person had given the signal.

Investigation of the express car revealed that a horse had the signal cord in its mouth and was pulling it vigorously.

PROBLEM OF "WAR BABIES" STIRRING CLERGY OF ENGLAND

Reaction of Sentiment on Suggestion to Remove Stigma From Mothers and Infants.

HARD TO FIND FATHERS

Dean of Colchester Declares the Condition Has Been Grossly Exaggerated.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, May 1.—A severe reaction of public sentiment on the "war babies" problem has set in. The public sense of morality was nearly stamped out at first by the appealing guise in which the question was presented. The Protestant church authorities have poured cold water on the encouragement and endowment of moral laxity in the nation because it is at war.

The Bishop of Oxford, one of the most eminent Anglican divines, says: "The controversy indicates a very widespread laxity of sentiment and feelings with regard to sexual matters. I do not doubt in the least that of the two vices, intemperance and sexual immorality, the latter is working incomparably greater havoc. There is also an extraordinary and almost universal laxity with regard to the sanctity of the marriage tie."

Opposed to "Free Love."

The Bishop of Chelmsford enters his protest "against newspapers with immense circulations using the present moment of stress and strain for the purpose of strongly advocating free love."

The Dean of Colchester avers that the threatening "war baby" problem has been grossly exaggerated. "I was told," he said, 'that there was 200 in my district; I found there were two."

Roman Catholic authorities have refused to make any announcement on the subject, relying on the normal work of their priesthood to maintain the morality of their flock.

Premier Asquith extinguished, in a sentence, Ronald McNeill's suggestion that men at the front who had left prospective or actual "war babies" at home should be married by proxy and not a voice was raised in the House of Commons in defense of the novel suggestion which, even if otherwise accetable, would be utterly impracticable, it is thought, to carry out. McNeill said he also favored a general edict of forgiveness from the pulpits which would remove the stigma from the "war babies."

Threw a Book at Churchill.

McNeill hitherto was known to fame only as the Orange member who flung a book across the floor of the House of Commons at Winston Churchill during a parliamentary scene. His aim was defective. He has failed to offer any verification of his astounding assertion that, to his knowledge, there are 2000 war babies expected in one borough, though he has vaguely hinted that it is on the border between England and Scotland.

Meantime, it is heard from military and other observers that the "war babies" campaign has had a bad effect.

It is an emotional time in these islands and the fascination of the soldier for the maid is stirred to its fullest ex pression. In some camps in the neighborhood of big towns and popular seaside resorts, the commanding officers have given timely words of counsel to their men.

Editor's View of Problem.

The editor of the Daily News, in a special article, discusses some of the difficulties of dealing with the trouble: "One of the most common difficulties relates to the identity of the father," he say. "Most of those concerned have long since gone abroad, many are dead, many more never will return and probably a large proportion are not even known.

"Where their identity is ascertainable, they should be subject to a charge similar to that borne by a married soldier. The most distressing fact in connection with the problem is the large proportion of cases in which the law as to age of consent has been outraged. It is important to know what warnings were issued by the War Office on this subject which would give some guide as to how far fathers are to be held liable to provisions of the law essential to the protection of children at their most critical and unbalanced age."

The editor of the News considers that recognition of the mothers is a vastly complex question, but adds: "The child is the real care of the state and with the abundant voluntary organizations now acting it should be possible to see that its interest are abundantly provided for."

NEW WALNUTS ON OLD TREES

Arizona Naturalists Revolutionizes Growing Industry by Grafting.

TUCSON, Ariz., May 1.—The walnut industry of Arizona is being revolutionized by the discovery of C. R. Biederman, a naturalist, that the English walnut can be grafted on the native Arizona tree and made to bear the new fruit the following year. Not only is the fruit richer and of more commercial value, but the character of the grafted trees is changed so that they are preferable to other kinds for the purpose of beautification.

The experiment of Biederman was begun several years ago and was so wonderfully successful that the entire country has become interested in it. The State Commissioner of Highways of Missouri, having heard of the possibilities of the tree, has planned to get Arizont plants to place along public highways of Missouri.

ARREST OF GIRL REVEALS ROMANCE WITH WEDDED MAN

Tailor Wrote Song, "No One Can Win You From Me" That Young Musician Had.

Miss Rosie Jungman, a musician, 25 years old, was arrested yesterday afternoon at 3830 Washington avenue, and was ordered held pending an investigation, according to the police, as to whether a violation of the Mann act had been committed by Charles E. Wright, 42 years old, a tailor. He was arrested Thursday on a charge of deserting his wife, Mrs. Laura Wright of 802 South Taylor avenue, Chicago, and was released on bond to appear tomorrow in Judge Clark's court.

Miss Jungman admitted, the police say, that since January she had lived with Wright as his wife, at various addresses in St. Louis. She met Wright seven years ago, she said, when she was a shopgirl in a department store in Chicago, and Wright was employed in one of the departments. They were attracted by the love of music, she said, she playing the piano and Wright using his spare time to compose songs, which she played for him.

In her possession was a song bearing her picture on the title page. The title was: "No One Can Win You From Me."

The young woman lived up to the title when she was confronted at police headquarters by Mrs. Amy Osborne, a stylishly-dressed young woman, who is Mrs. Wright's sister. It was Mrs. Osborne who obtained the information which led to the arrest of Wright and Miss Jungman, and she sought to persuade the latter to promise to testify against Wright.

"Think of the wrong he has done you," said Mrs. Osborne.

"He has never done me any wrong," said the girl.

She declared that Wright did not accompany her to St. Louis and that he did not send money for the trip. He wrote her his address, she said, and she came on her own responsibility.

LAWSON CASE GOES TO JURY

Labor Leader's Counsel Charges Detectives With Swearing for Money.

TRINIDAD, Colo., May 1.—The case of John R. Lawson, labor leader, on trial for the alleged murder of John Nimmo, a Deputy Sheriff, Oct. 25, 1913, went to the jury late this afternoon.

Attorneys for the prosecution argued that the evidence had proved that the strikers started the battle in which Nimmo was killed and that Lawson was in command of the attacking party. The theory of the defense was that the battle was started by deputy sheriffs and that Lawson, instead of inciting a riot, tried to calm the men and women of the Ludlow tent colony.

Horace N. Hawkins, for the defense, referring to the testimony of two detectives, shouted: "Somebody is hiring these detectives to go on the stand and try and swear away Lawson's life."

DEALERS VALUE FRANKLIN LAND AT TWICE PRICE ASKED

Committee Agreed to Sell for $300,000—Worth $680,000, One Man Says.

Land dealers testifying yesterday in the United States District Court in the injunction suit brought by the First National Bank of Madison, Ill., against John E. Franklin, former president of the Bankers' Trust Co., and the Committee of Creditors who have taken over his affairs, set values ranging as high as $680,000 on 8500 acres in Pemiscot County, Mo., which the committee undertook to sell for $300,000 to William McGinley of Decatur, Ill.

The plaintiff, one of Franklin's creditors, is seeking to enjoin the committee from consummating the sale, on the ground that the price obtained is too small, and to have the United States District Court take Franklin's affairs out of the hands of the committee and administer them under the bankruptcy laws.

Under the arrangement made, McGinley paid $25,000 in cash and gave notes for the remaining $275,000. The suit halted proceedings in the deal before he acquired title to the property. The members of the Committee of Creditors are Richard S. Hawes, Irvin B. Barth, August Schlafy, August E. Booker and Samuel C. McCluney.

C. D. Martin, a St. Louis land dealer, testified that he would be willing to pay more than $300,000 in cash for the Franklin tracts, and that he had offered McGinley $50 an acre for 1400 acres of the land, or $70,000, but had been refused. On the objection of attorneys, sustained by Judge Dyer, Martin was not required to state what definite sum he would pay for the property, as it was held that the publication of this information might injure him in competition with other dealers. Martin denied he told McGinley that if he didn't sell him 1400 acres he would attempt to prevent McGinley's purchase of the property from being perfected.

Former Judge J. B. Brasher testified he had lived in Pemiscot County 43 years and was acquainted with the Franklin tracts. He estimated that 6000 acres, which are cleared, are worth from $75 to $100 an acre, or between $450,000 and $600,000; and that the remaining 2500 acres are worth from $25 to $40 an acre, or between $62,500 and $100,000. If properly advertised, he said, the land should, on an average, bring from $60 to $80 an acre, or between $510,000 and $680,000.

NEGRO STABS JUNK DEALER

Two negroes appeared at the back door of Abe Hoffman's residence at 2700 Dickson street at 9 o'clock last night and asked him if he wanted to buy some junk. Hoffman, who is in the junk business, said he transacted his business only during the day.

One of the negroes insisted that Hoffman should make a purchase and when he refused drew a knife and stabbed him in the left side. The negroes then fled through an alley. Hoffman is not seriously injured.

WATER TO LINK CENTRAL ILLINOIS AND NEW ORLEANS

Through Freight Service May 22, Anticipating Success of Gov. Dunne's Project.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 1.—Announcement was made today that, beginning May 22, a through waterway freight service will be established between Central Illinois and New Orleans.

In anticipation of the building of Gov. Dunne's proposed waterway connecting the Illinois River with the Chicago drainage canal, a company on that day will begin running packets between La Salle, the head of navigation in the Illinois River, and New Orleans. This information was received by Gov. Dunne today from the manager of a Chicago piano company, which will ship a load of pianos on the initial trip at a freight rate of 72 cents, compared with a rail rate of $1.10. The company will ship its instruments to La Salle, where they will be transfered to boat and then taken down the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers.

Two U. S. Cutters Are Launched.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 1.—Two new coast guard cutters—the Ossipee and Tallapoosa—were launched here today, in the presence of a distinguished company of Government officials. Miss Sally McAdoo, 11-year-old daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Miss Mabel Hartwell, daughter of H. T. Hartwell of Mobile, Ala., were sponsors for the boats.

—"That 'Knitted Leg Extension' Solves the Bare Knee Problem"

EVERY MAN WANTS ATHLETIC UNDERWEAR, but he objects to the rubbing of his bare knees against his trousers. Here is the ideal summer underwear!

Goodknit

Nothing but union suits—time and experience have proved one-piece garments the most comfortable and practical. This improved style of hot-weather underwear, with the ventilated closed crotch and the knitted extension leg, is being chosen by men who know, and is the "last word" in summer comfort. Study the picture. The only parts of this union suit that are knitted are the extension leg, the ventilated closed crotch and a little section at the back of the waist—just enough to provide "give" where give is required.

Nothing "Sticky," Nothing "Clingy."

Read about "comfort feature." Then go to one of the listed dealers. Insist on "GOODKNITS." They're just what you've been looking for.

Knitted Knee Extension: The knitted extension leg is a patented improvement covering the knee, thereby doing away with all the discomfort of bare skin in contact with rough trousers. At the same time the crosswise webbing is so soft and elastic as to be scarcely noticeable. There is neither pull nor bind at the knee as in knitted suits, yet these "Goodknit" Suits are a scool and comfortable as a knee-length garment. This remarkable improvement is found only in "Goodknits."

Closed Crotch: Notice the closed crotch. It is the famous time-tried "K. K.," one button closed crotch, patented October 18, 1910. The opening extends down one leg only. There are no double thicknesses. This crotch cannot bind, gap, sag nor bunch up between the legs. It is pure comfort.

Patent Ventilation at Crotch: A new feature, and very sensible improvement, found only in "Goodknit" Athletic Union Suits. The crotch is made of a special fabric woven with holes that permit free and easy ventilation, insuring supreme comfort. Doesn't this feature—providing coolness and ease, where ordinarily the greatest discomfort is felt—appeal to you? Patented August 4, 1914. This ventilated feature is included in all "Goodknit" underwear, the knee length as well as the three-quarter length leg.

Every "Goodknit" Suit is gnaranteed—no red tape—if it is not satisfactory return it. Made in sizes to fit every man. "Goodknits" are made also in KNEE LENGTHS.

In Kool Krepe, $1.50 In Checked Nainsook, $1.00 In Aero-weave, $2.00

HATCH WINS SIXTH M. A. A. MARATHON BY 1½-MILE MARGIN

Chicago Men Capture Every Place But Fourth and Last—St. Louis Runner, Tsinpris, Makes Good Showing—Time Was Slow.

By W. J. O'Connor.

SIDNEY HATCH, of the Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago, yesterday won the Missouri Athletic Association's marathon run, in its eleventh renewal, over the Gumbo course, 26 miles and 385 yards, in 3h. 5m. 10s.

Olaf Loday, of the Danish-American A. C. of Chicago, was second, 13 minutes behind the winner. Lodal's time was 3h. 18m. 23s. The third man to finish also was a Chicagoan, Charles Mellor, of the Logan Square A. C. His time was 3h. 31m. 28s.

Official Finish of Yesterday's Marathon

Finish—Name—City.	Time.
1. S. H. Hatch, Chicago..	3:05 10 3-5
2. Olaf Lodal, Chicago.....	3:18 23
3. Chas. L. Mellier, Chi...	3:31 28
4. Wm. Tsinpris, St. L.....	3:43 40
5. Rudy C. Hansen, Chi....	3:52 15
6. Manuel Cooper, Chi......	4:00 1-5
7. A. Monteverde, Morristown, N. Y..................	4:36

W. J. Kennedy, Illinois A. C., and Arthur Rettig, Southern A. C., were the only two who failed to start. Twenty men left the mark at Gumbo, when Starter Bassett sent away the field.

Weather and road conditions were ideal. A temperate sun, at times a cooling breeze, no dust from the recently oiled roads and superb traffic regulations, once inside the city limits, gave the participants in this endurance test absolutely no peg on which to hang an alibi for failing to break the course record. The reigning mark was hung up by Hatch, yesterday's winner, in 1914, when he covered the route in 2h. 58m. 49s.

Twenty runners faced the starter in yesterday's race. Only seven of these finished. The others tottered and fell by the wayside although no one quit in distress. St. Louis failed to finish in the money, as John Probst, Joe Bantle, Henry Levinson and Jake Kaysing, the best local bets, quit before the half-way mark was reached. However, William Tsinpris of the Columbia A. C. endured to the finish and took fifth place, the best position gained by a local entrant. He's a novice at the running game.

Hatch Loses Six Pounds.

It was the sixth conquest in local competition for Hatch, the wiry weakling from Chicago. Hatch is 32 years old, or rather will be in August, is unmarried and at present employed in a bank, as a clerk in Chicago. He has toed the scratch in 10 races over the local course and never finished worse than third. Twice he took show money, twice he finished second, while he kicked his dust in all eyes in the other six races.

After yesterday's test, Hatch seemed a little more wabbly than he was in years past, although he was dressed and out of the M. A. A. gymnasium in less than an hour after he had breasted the tape. He went into the race weighing 133 pounds and burned off 6 pounds o nthe circuitous road from Gumbo. He weighed 127 pounds after he had received a rubdown.

Hatch competed a week ago in the Boston Classic, starting the race at 133 pounds and finished weighing 127 pounds, with a smile.

"I think this is my last race," said he after he had dressed yesterday, "although I know I'm going to have a battle with myself to keep out of next year's run. However, I was agreed that this should wind up my career, if I won. I have trained myself down pretty fine and I don't know whether I can stand the test of losing so much weight in a day. I'm beginning to feel my years and probably you'll never see me as a competitor again in St. Louis, although I'll always be here for the M. A. A. race, as a spectator, at least. I like this event because I always have been treated so well."

Charles Mellor, 21 Years Old, "Rode the Rods" From Chicago to Run Third

THE most thoroughly pleased person, with himself, was Charles Mellor, 21 years old, who "beat his way" from Chicago to finish third. He won a diamond medal by getting a place in the "money" and announced last night that he intended to "ride the rods" back to the city of wind.

Mellor finished strong, although he stands almost six feet in height and weighed only 121 pounds after the race. He lost six pounds en transit. Mellor is an employe of the Motor Cycle Club of Chicago and did most of his training on wheels. He said he left Chicago Wednesday evening on a "blind" and shifted to the "rods" once to reach here Thursday morning. He worked out Thursday evening, rested Friday and went over the full course for the first time yesterday. He was a good third in as much as the field was scattered over three miles. This is his first Marathon race, although he has competed in several road races of 10 and 15 miles.

Olaf Lodel, the runner-up to Hatch, is a machinist, in Chicago, and began his marathoning in Denmark in 1901, when he was 16 years old. He's easily the heaviest man to compete yesterday, weighing 160 pounds in condition. He has thick calves, expansive feet, spartan courage, a pronounced and amusing Swedish accent, and a laugh that is worth the price of admission. To his way of thinking, Olaf Lodal is about the niftiest guy on earth or anywhere else; but his self-adoration isn't offensive; just funny.

It was Hatch's race all the way. At the gun, John Probst jumped into the lead and paced the field for seven miles, but he tired early and quit at the tenth mile post. Then William Matthews came on and challenged Hatch, who had taken the lead after Probst effaced himself. Matthews, too, found the little Chicago bank clerk too fast and he wearied and quit shortly after leaving Creve Coeur.

From then on it was Hatch. Turning into the North and South road he held a commanding lead, while at Clayton, although running behind the time-record for the course, he was 400 yards ahead of his nearest competitor and breezing alond on the bit. Hatch continued to widen the gap between himself and Lodal and as he wheeled into Lindell avenue at King's highway, the runner-up was just turning off Skinker road into Lindell drive. Hatch finished strong.

Here's a Deep One.

Dr. C. W. Bassett, Michigan "oughty-8," or near that year, gave the railbirds a laugh at the start when he instructed the runners how to take the turn at Channing and Lindell avenue.

"There is at that corner a right-angel triangle, since the short cut was made from Locust to Lindell avenue," said the Doctor. "You runners must follow the hypothenuse of the right-angle triangle in this race."

"If we have to do that I'll quit right here," said Charles Mellor, who reached St. Louis "on the rods." Mellor quit school before he got his geometry. Be easy, Doctor!

Tom Watts, accompanied by Norton Newcomb, was out there in a Tin-Lizzie trying to kid folks who had regular automobiles. By desperate driving Tom managed to finish one length behind Hatch. He should get a medal because there are certain kinds of riding which makes Hatch's profession a pleasure.

MINNESOTA WINS FROM IOWA IN FIELD MEET

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 1.—Minnesota today defeated Iowa in the first track meet of the year at Minneapolis, 73¼ to 57¾. Minnesota won most points in the dashes and distance runs, while Iowa was strong in the field events, capturing first in all of these except the broad jump.

Capt. Shrader of Iowa piled up three firsts and tied for one second place, winning high individual honors. Watson, Martin and Ritter were the heavy winners for Minnesota.

Davenport H. S. Wins Meet

GALESBURG, Ill., May 1.—The Davenport High School won the annual interscholastic track and field meet at Knox College today, gaining 35 points. Sol Butler, a negro star, achieved the individual record of 23 points. Rock Island took second place with 30 points, Kewanee 17, Geneseo 9, Canton 7, Princeton 4, Galesburg 3, Monmouth 3 and Moline 0.

C. A. C. Swimmers in Tryout.

The Columbian Athletic Club swimming team will take its first workout today in the Meramec River. Coach Grimes of the C. A. C. water squad will chaperon 12 swimmers from Fern Glen to Valley Park. Bob Johnson, who won the five-mile swim last season, will work out with the squad.

Bartenders Boycott Browns and Rickey

CLEVELAND, O., May 1.

IT was rumored this afternoon that the Cleveland Bartenders and Waiters' Union had placed a boycott upon the St. Louis Browns because of alleged speeches in favor of prohibition by Manager Branch Rickey. Union officials tonight, however, denied that any such boycott had been declared, while Branch Rickey prior to leaving for his home in Portsmouth, O., asserted he had never made any such speeches. Secretary Hi Mason says he believes the rumor was started by some enemy or organized baseball.

Missouri States Play.

The local Missouri State Life Insurance Co. baseball team will journey to Granite City, this afternoon, where it will meet the Granite City Blues. Johnson will pitch for the locals. The game will be started at 3:15 p. m.

TERRIERS POUND THE SPHERE HARD, BUT FAIL TO WIN

Lot Wasn't Large Enough to Get Them Out of Reach of Fielder Scheer.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEWARK, N. J., May 1.—The Terriers had another inch chopped off their tails this afternoon, and stand a chance of losing a couple of more inches tomorrow because they play a double-header with the "Peps."

This is the more or less official name of the Newark club, which this afternoon trimmed the "Low-balls" by a 4 to 1 score. Both St. Louis and Newark played like regular major league clubs this afternoon.

It would be a good deal of a bromide to speak of Scheer, the Newark's left-fielder as the "King of the May," but the fact remains that Scheer was the ablest sort of a coadjutor to Moran in pulling off the result. On the defense he was "mamma's fair-haired boy."

Moran was a crafty sort of a pitcher. He looked easy, but he wasn't. The Terriers got a lot of hits, but when they needed them worse than a farmer needs a wagon, they couldn't get them. The reason, therefore, was Scheer. On several distinct occasions drives were sent skying out to left that looked like they were ticketed for the back yard of one of the numerous factories that make up the landscape at Harrison, N. J.; but none climbed the fence, and that was the only chance they had to get away from Scheer. Now that McGraw has lost Kauff, he may display a little interest in Scheer. For sheer worth—but that's too awful.

Peps Were Never Headed.

The Peps got away in front and they were never seriously worried. They put two across in the second after the first two were down, the first, Laporte on a wonderful running catch by Drake. Esmond, up third, singled to right, and Scheer planted one in the same corner, Esmond going to third. Rariden was intentionally walked because Moran, the pitcher, was supposed to be easy on that end of the position, but Moran wanted to win his game and laced a single

KAUFF SUSPENDED INDEFINITELY BY FEDERAL LEAGUE

Gilmore Says "Most Valuable Man in Organization" Must Pay the Penalty.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Benny Kauff, star outfielder of the Federal League, who jumped to the New York Nationals and was today turned back by that club to the Brooklyn Federals, tonight was suspended indefinitely by President Gilmore of the Federal League. Gilmore made this known in a statement in which he said:

"Player Benny Kauff of the Brooklyn club of the Federal League, has been indefinitely suspended by me for a gross violation of his contract. His suspension takes effect at once.

"Kauff signed a perfectly equitable contract with a duly authorized agent of the Brooklyn club. The contract was approved by me as president of the Federal League. Kauff is suspended as an example to him and to every other player in the league that we do not propose to tolerate any breach of contracts that we enter into with them in good faith.

"Kauff is the most valuable man in our league, yet he stands suspended the same as if he were a man of mediocre ability.

"I do not know what the ultimate disposition of Kauff's case will be. He will stand suspended until I see fit to lift the ban."

Kauff an "Undesirable."

CINCINNATI, May 1.—The National Baseball Commission today refused the application for reinstatement of Benny Kauff, Brooklyn Federal League player, who signed a Giant contract last Thursday.

The finding of the commission follows:

"Player B. Kauff applied to the National Commission for reinstatement in organized baseball. His request is refused for the reason that in the past he has not respected his contractural obligations and therefore, in our judgment, is not a desirable person to be identified with the great national game.

"AUGUST HERRMANN,
"B. B. JOHNSON,
"JOHN K. TENER,
"National Commission."

The decision was reached after numerous telephone communications between Herrmann, Johnson and Tener.

RALLY IN TENTH WINS CLOSE GAME FOR LOWDERMILK

Backed by Good Support, Browns' Only Winning Pitcher Overcomes Indians.

ERRORS HELP VICTORS

Barbare's Blunder With the Bases Filled Spills the Beans in Final Round.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 1.—With Grover Lowdermilk pitching gilt-edged ball and receiving excellent support, except from Johnny Lavan, who erred twice, the Browns today defeated the Indians, 5 to 3, the battle going 10 innings. While the Browns batted no harder than the Indians, they were aided by some loose playing on the part of the locals who played brainlessly at times and presented St. Louis with most of its runs.

As the result of its losing streak, Manager Rickey gave his batting order a shakeup and it brought results. Jimmy Austin was moved into second place, where he twice had the chance to sacrifice. Pratt was placed third, while Williams was dropped to sixth place, where he demonstrated his value by whaling out a triple when it counted. Williams, Walker and Kauffman, by the way, did the most effective batting, Kauffman sending two of his teammates home while he scored once himself.

It is quite possible that both teams would have scored more runs but for the unwise chances taken upon the paths. Cleveland had two men thrown out at the plate and another at third, while St. Louis had one man nipped at the plate and two others at second or third on plays that looked bad for the Browns.

Hagerman Is Unsteady.

Hagerman's unsteadiness gave St. Louis a run in the first inning. He passed Shotton as a starter, and when Austin bunted threw wild to first, Shotton taking third. Pratt popped to Hagerman, who overlooked a chance to double Shotton off third. Kauffman lined a double to left. Shotton scored but Austin was out at the plate, Graney, Barbare to O'Neill. Walker shot a single to right and was out when he tried to take second on Joe Jackson's great throw, which turned Kauffman back to third.

Unfortunate base-running kept Cleveland out of a bunch of runs in the second. Graney led off with a pass and took second on Barbare's single to center. On the attempted double steal, Graney was nipped at third, while Barbare was out when he tried to score on Shields' single to center. O'Neill was safe on Lavan's error, Shields taking third, but when a double steal was tried, Shields was run down. Jackson inserted his homer in the fourth after which there was no scoring until the seventh, when St. Louis was presented with two more runs. Shields' muff of Chapman's throw saved Kauffman, after which Walker sacrificed. Williams' triple to left scored Kauffman, Lavan fanned. Directed to pass Agnew, Hagerman disobeyed, grooved one and Agnew sacrificed, Williams scoring. Lowdermilk ended the scoring with a fly to Leibold.

The eighth inning saw Cleveland tie it up. With one out O'Neill was hit. Hammond ran for him. Smith batted for Hagerman and flied to Walker. Leibold and Rogers followed with singles, Hammond scoring. On Lavan's fumble of Chapman's grounder Leibold scored, but Rodgers was out at the plate.

The winning runs were shoved over in the tenth without much trouble. With one out Shotton shot a single to center, Austin's grounder got away from Shields and Shotton took third. Pratt was passed purposely, filling the bases. The Indians laid back for a double play and had one made to order presented when Kauffman hit a grounder to Barbare. The latter, however, fumbled it long enough to let Shotton score and to let Kauffman reach first, Austin, though, being forced at third. Walker's single to left sent Pratt across.

Herzog's Side

MANAGER HERZOG of the Reds last night wired details of his run-in with Umpire Rigler to President Tener of the National League. Herzog says he will follow this up with affidavits to substantiate his claim that Rigler attacked him (Herzog) with his mask. Herzog says he will be out on the field again today unless suspended by Tener. His wire to the N. L. executive, which follows, is self-explanatory.

John K. Tener, President National Baseball League, Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

In regard to the trouble with Umpire Rigler, which took place on the Cardinal field today, I wish to make the following statement:

In the seventh inning, with Leach on second base, Huggins of the Cardinals hid the ball and claimed to have touched Leach out, while he was off the base. Umpire Hart, who was giving the base decisions, admitted that he did not see the play, and refused to call Leach out. During the argument at second base between Huggins and Hart and before Rigler was appealed to, Catcher Snyder of the Cardinals asked Rigler if he had seen the play. Rigler, at the hearing of Killefer, who was at the bat, replied that he did not see it, but upon being appealed to by Hart, Rigler immediately waved the man out. Killefer and Rigler immediately started to argue a point and I went up to see what it was all about. I found out that Killefer was asking Rigler why he should have made the decision when he had a moment before admitted that he had not seen the play.

In emphasizing this point, I touched Rigler on the chest and he warned me not to do so again or he would hit me on the jaw. Leach then came in from second base and the argument started again. While trying to get things straightened out I accidentally again touched Rigler with my finger and he immediately hit me in the face with his mask, blackening my eye, cutting my nose and loosening two teeth.

I understand Umpire Rigler excuses himself of this action by claiming that I spiked him. This is absolutely untrue and an affidavit will follow from Killefer, swearing that he accidentally spiked Rigler in trying to hold him back after the blow had been struck. I used no improper language in talking to Rigler, did not threaten to hit him or make any offensive, malicious move of any kind. Affidavits to this effect will follow. Only one blow was struck and that was by Rigler with his mask and without provocation. It seems to me to be unreasonable to expect me in my official capacity as manager of a National League team to have to appear on the field with an umpire officiating who has deliberately assaulted me by hitting me in the face with a mask during a game and upon the playing field.

(Signed),
CHARLES L. HERZOG,
Manager Cincinnati Baseball Club.

Semi-Pros Open Season Today at Four Ball Parks

The Interstate Baseball Association will open its second season today in three cities with double-headers at each park. In the double bill at Brock's Field in St. Louis, the A. B. C. nine will oppose the Suburbans in the preliminary, while the Alpen Braus meet the Beyers of Belleville in the main event.

At C. B. C. campus the Wabada Juniors clash with the Malleys in the preliminary and the Wabada Seniors play the Donnelly Stars in the feature game. At Polo Park, East St. Louis, Grimm & Gorly's hook up with Geller, Ward & Hassner in the opening game, while the Ben Millers battle East St. Louis. In the fourth double-header at Belleville the Maroon Juniors and the White Seals will open the season, while the C. A. C.'s will tackle the Belleville Maroons in the second game.

The Interstate League will stage double-headers in all four of its parks on Sundays during the season. The first games will be played by Junior League. The preliminary games will be between the teams of the Interstate League. The preliminary games will start at 1 o'clock and the big games 3:30. Admission 10 cents.

REDS' MANAGER HIT AFTER PROTESTING OFFICIAL'S RULING

Cards Were Leading 9 to 5, and Hug Had Worked Hidden-ball Trick, When "Choke-Em's" Language Offended the Arbitrator.

UMPIRE CHARLES RIGLER of the National League and Manager Charles Lincoln Herzog of the Cincinnati club, who engaged in a fist fight at the home plate during yesterday's ball game at Robison Field, were arrested after they left the park and taken to the Ninth District police station, where they furnished bond to appear Monday in City Court No. 2 on a peace disturbance charge.

Umpire and Manager Tell Story of Fight

What Manager Herzog Says.

I DID not use any improper language to Rigler. I have been very careful about this all season, because I figured the umpires would be after me. I did say to Rigler, though: 'Well, old boy, you showed me more yellow today than I ever saw on a ball field?' Then he hit me with his mask."

Umpire Rigler's Version.

HERZOG came back at me, after I had put him out out of the game, and pushed me and stepped on my foot at the same time. I never stood for anything like that in my life and am not going to start now. I did not hit him with my mask, but dropped it to the ground and hit with my fist."

Rigler's bond was signed by Oscar Miller, while Herzog's bond was furnished by Andy O'Connor of 4015 Lexington avenue.

Rigler and Herzog cross-charged each other on a peace disturbance charge. Herzog refused to make a statement to Lieut. Tom Walsh at the station, but Rigler said that Herzog had provoked him so that he hit him (Herzog) in the eye. Herzog's left eye bore mute testimony to the truth of Rigler's statement, the police say.

Hidden Ball Trick Is Cause.

The fracas which eventuated in the arrest of the umpire and manager was imposed suddenly upon some 6000 fans in the seventh inning of a game which the Cardinals won from the Reds, 9—5. What immediately led up to the clash is hard to determine, but Manager Herzog exploded when Tommy Leach, his veteran outfielder, was victimized on the hidden ball trick, a moth-eaten affair, by Manager Huggins.

This play took place at second base. Hug held the ball until Leach wandered off second and then dove for his prey and landed him. Umpire Hart, officiating on the bases, didn't see the play. He appealed to Rigler, who was behind the plate. Rigler called Leach out. Then Herzog rushed at the umpire.

Rigler promptly ordered Herzog out of the game. The Cincinnati manager went to the bench but returned and renewed his argument with Rigler. He tapped Rigler on the chest with his index finger and what followed the fans were hardly prepared to appreciate.

Rigler Starts Fight.

Rigler hit Herzog with his mask and then followed with blows from his fist. The pair clinched and fists were flying freely while the players of both teams and all the available policemen rushed to the plate. The belligerents were separated and Herzog hurried off the field to the clubhouse, while Rigler regained composure and proceeded with his duties as umpire.

Manager Herzog said afterwards that he did not use profane language to the umpire and only said to him: "Well, old boy, you showed me more yellow today than I ever saw on a ball field."

"No, he did not use any improper language," said Rigler. "He came up at me after he had been put out of the game and pushed me and stepped on my foot. (Rigler exhibited a deep gash on the big toe of his left foot to bear him out.) That was too much, and I hit him.

"I have never stood for anything like that before and do not intend to start now. Even if he had not stepped on my foot I would have hit him. I think I am big enough to take care of things like that. I saw one umpire thrown out of the league for not defending himself." Rigler weighs over 200 pounds.

In the Cincinnati clubhouse after the game, Wade Killifer, the Red left fielder, said that he accidentally stepped on Rigler's foot while trying to separate the pair.

Cardinal's Heavy Artillery Gets the Range and Bombards Cincy's Hurlers

MILLER HUGGINS turned loose his heavy artillery in the fourth and fifth rounds, counting eight tallies and nine blows off Douglass, Ames and Schneider. Besides the nine safeties in these two rounds, the Cards were able to connect safely only two times.

The fourth was the big session for the Cards. In this round just nine men batted against Douglass and Ames. Six of them hit safely, while five crossed the plate. Wilson opened with a single and romped home on Beck's double. Butler went out, but Snyder and Griner singled, putting Beck over. Here Ames replaced Douglass. Huggins forced Snyder. But Dolan came through with a triple, both Griner and Hug tallying. Long doubled, scoring Dolan. Miller brought the five-run rally to a close with a grounder to Herzog.

In the next session the Cardinals touched of fthe fireworks again, Wilson walked, went to third on Butler's hit. Snyder's two-bagger sent Wilson over. A double by Huggins scored Snyder with the final run. After this the Cardinals failed to make a safety. This happened to Ames and Schneider.

The other count came in the first en bases on balls off Huggins and Long and Miller's single.

A pass to Leach, Herzog's infield out and Griffith's bingle gave the Reds one in the opener. Three were sent across in the third. Leach drew his second pass, Herzog was hit, Killifer's sacrifice sent the pair along. Griffith grabbed his second hit, Leach scoring, while Herzog was cut down at the plate. Groh walked and then Long made a three-base muff of Olson's fly, both Griffith and Groh coming over.

The final count for the Reds came in the fifth, when Herzog, first man up, hit to the clubhouse for a home run.

One of the big features of the game from a Cardinal standpoint was the great pitching of Hank Robinson, the southpaw. Robinson replaced Griner in the fifth. Robinson did not allow a bingle and walked only one man, Leach, in the seventh.

TEAMS WITH HARD HITTERS SHOWING BEST EARLY FORM

Figures Show That Pitching in All Three Major Leagues Is Far Below Par.

REDS IN ANNUAL SPURT

Tremendous Slugging of Veach, Crawford and Cobb Hold Detroit Club High.

The second week's averages in the three big leagues bring out some interesting facts on the baseball situation. Cincinnati is out in front in hitting in the National with a .280 mark. The Reds also have the individual batting leader—Heine Groh, who is clouting .429. The Reds also are high in stolen bases, while they are second in drawing passes.

In the American, Detroit heads the league, because the Tigers own the best batters. Of the first five hitters—Detroit owns three, Veach, Cobb and Crawford. The Browns have a mark of .214.

With only 73 hits in 269 times at bat, Fielder Jones' Terriers are stranded at the bottom of the Federal League with .196. The Terriers are also low in extra base hitting, having cracked out only eight doubles, a like number of triples and one home run.

The Reds have three batters in the select circle. Besides the trio in the first 10, Mollwitz, the first sacker, is clouting .300. They'll fall, though, and pretty soon Daubert, Zimmerman and the others will be at the top.

Giants last in batting, base stealing and fielding. That's the reason for the stay of McGraw's team at the bottom. The alleged speed wonders of the Gotham crew have pilfered only nine bases. But that's all the leading Phillies have pilfered.

Frank Snyder, .333; Jack Miller, .327, and Bob Bescher, .313, top the Cardinal hitters. Then comes Tommy Long, with .273.

Hans Wagner is regaining his batting eye. Falling below .300 last season, everyone thought Hans was done. But his mark for this campaign is .325.

Larry Doyle, with .342, is the Giants' main sticker. Burns, with a .219 mark, is the leader among the outfielders. Last year's "champeen" base stealer has still to pilfer a sack.

Fitzpatrick, the youth who is playing second for the Braves, is swatting .275. McLarry, .267; Hinchman, .264; Bancroft, .238, and Schultz, .245, are other kids who are doing well.

Two recruits—Severeid and Kauffman are the leading hitters for the Browns. The former has .286 and the latter .283. C. Walker, Del Pratt and Rickey's other sluggers are around the .250 notch.

Hitting is not the thing that is keeping the Athletics in the second division, as they are swatting .269. The Mackmen, though have swiped only seven bases and have drawn only 31 bases on balls. They also are last in fielding, and tied for last with the Browns in run getting.

Looks like those Yankee batters are hitting out of their heads. Hartzell, .333, Pipp .326, and Boone .308. Cree, a regular swatter, has .242.

Ty Cobb has counted 21 runs in 15 games and pilfered nine bases, putting him way in the lead. Maisel has swiped six sacks.

Lajoie is picking up in his batting. The veteran at present has a .298 figure. He has connected for 14 hits in 47 attempts.

Tris Speaker and Clyde Milan are having a hard time getting bingles. The Red Sox star is batting only .194, while Milan's average is .205.

Lee Magee's Brookfeds have swiped more bases than any team in either of the three leagues, with 35. Their total of 72 bases on balls also is high. Six of the Brookfeds' hitters are among the first 10.

The only real St. Louis boy with one of the local teams is leading the Terriers in hitting, with .289. He is Johnny Tobin, the fleet-footed outfielder.

Here's how the Terrier infielders are swatting: Johnson, .243; Borton, .222; Deal, .179, and Bridwell, .081.

The five ex-Cards with the Federal League clubs are doing well. Here are their batting figures: Magee, .388; Mowrey, .269; Koney, .260; Oakes, .255, and Evans, .250.

MOTOR BOAT RACES TO BE TIMED BY WIRELESS

At the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association regatta, which will be held at Hannibal, Mo., July 5, 6 and 7, the association officials will inaugurate something new in the line of timing of the races. The races will be timed by wireless. The wireless system of timing the races was tried out at [illegible] last fall and found to be very satisfactory, as every fractional part of a second of the races is recorded.

Some of the best boats in the country will take part in the regatta. Among some of the boats who will show in the races are: [illegible] Pugh's "Disturber IV," John[illegible] "Black Demon IV" and Commo[illegible]'s "Baby Reliance." The officials [illegible] new world's records to be made, as the water at Hannibal is said to be ideal for the affair.

WHERE are the fans of yesterday
And eke the day before?
They hail you on the street and say:
"Hey, mister, what's the score?"

And Wise Men.

According to a Philadelphia exchange the Bethlehem Steel Works will put a fast team in the field. Naturally the Bethlehem would be an all-star team.

Grover Cleveland Alexander rises to remark without fear of successful contradiction that he intends to win 40 games of baseball for Pat Moran this year. Grover says he owes this to Pat for saving him from the minors, for which undesirable bourne Charley Dooin had him slated in 1911.

The Phillies are the biggest joke team in the National League. To get the subtlety of their humor the standing table should be consulted.

It looks like all of Pat Moran's gray matter is not confined to the outside of his dome.

The record of the Phillies reads just as we predicted it would, except that the figures in the won and lost column should be reversed.

Those New York Yankees seem to be running wild under Wild Bill Donovan.

There is plenty of room in St. Louis for three major league teams. The fans seem to be disposed to give 'em all the room they want.

JUDGING by the crowded houses Jess Willard is not drawing, it looks like the fight fans are satisfied with the result and will let it go at that. Can it be that Jess will have to fight for his money?

The most signal service Charley Dooin ever rendered the Phillies during his long and turbulent connection with that club, was when he stepped down and out and recommended Pat Moran to the management for the position of manager. Patricio is vindicating Red's judgment with a vengeance.

ST. LOUIS TO HAVE TWO MEN IN CUE LEAGUE

CLEVELAND, O., May 1.—Plans announced here today for the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League of next season by E. M. Helm call for a membership of 25, an addition of 10 over last season. All of the cities in the league last season have retained their franchises, while six of them, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Pittsburg and Cincinnati, have taken out additional memberships. Chicago and Detroit have each taken two more. Brooklyn and New York have been granted franchises. More than $3000 in prize money and a trophy will be played for, with a first prize of $1000. The league will hold its annual meeting at Put-in-Bay, June 28 and 29.

Golf Season Is Formally Opened at Local Clubs

Country Club Stars Qualify for Opening Tourney — Algonquin and Normandie Busy.

Play on the golf courses of almost every country club in and around St. Louis was formally ushered in yesterday afternoon. Virtually all of the links were crowded with overanxious golfers, impatient to follow the pesky little pill after some six months of dormance. Several prominent golfers assert that the large number of devotees of the Scotch game who rounded the links yesterday indicates that this year will be productive of the earliest golfing season in years.

Country Club golfers, who have quite a start on the contemporary club stickers, enjoyed their third week of play. The Hanley road golfers participated in the third flight of a four-week qualifying play for entrance in the opening tournament, which will be started on May 16. Those whose medal scores yesterday allow them entrance into the match play are T. B. Boyd, C. W. Scudder, Harry Potter, A. T. West, W. H. Glasgow. Those who qualified to play previously are C. H. Morill, G. H. Walker, Dwight F. Davis, Bradford Shinkle, H. M. Kaufman, H. B. Wallace, A. H. Langenburg and Jackson Johnson.

Normandie Club also had a busy day, the golfers out Ferguson way formally opening their season with an 18-hole match play tourney against par. M. F. Babbitt, with a handicap of 10, won the honors of the day, gaining a 5 up decision on par Dr. George F. Payne and C. P. Commers tied for low medal score, each taking 86 strokes to traverse the course. One hundred and ten were entered on the tournament. The ladies putting contest was won by Mrs. C. F. Chesbro.

The Algonquin Club also celebrated its season's inaugural with an Opening Day Tournament. The tournament had an entry of over 100 clubbers and consequently play was divided into three classes. The results in the Class A or Championship Class were as follows: J. H. Van Buren defeated R. B. Petrack, 4 up and 3; E. H. Abadie defeated O. Van Brump, 3 up and 1; S. Hale defeated O. J. Barwick, 1 up; C. C. Pangman defeated R. E. Lord, 3 up and 2; G. H. Avery defeated C. Nowell, 1 up; J. C. Jones defeated E. M. Prin by default; D. M. Boyd defeated M. P. Ardle, 3 up and 1; M. W. Warren defeated J. B. Shipley, 2 up. Sixteen matches were played in Class B, the feature of which was a victory of G. H. Bruns over W. J. Lackaye in 20 holes. Twenty-two competed in Class C tourney.

The Midland Valley Country Club opened in the form of a qualifying round for the annual spring championship tournament. Sixteen golfers qualified for each of the championship A, B and C classes. The low medal score honors of the day went to L. C. Smith, who registered the course in 84. The match play contests are to be contested between today and next Saturday. Those who qualified for the championship class and the pairing for the first round are as follows: L. C. Smith vs. G. B. Say; E. C. Sullivan vs. S. A. Mitchell; A. H. Hitchings vs. J. B. Bedringhause; J. W. Bowman vs. O. C. Smith; B. S. Stauffer vs. G. H. Ruft; G. A. Morse Jr. vs. W. W. Grabes; S. L. Canter vs. G. R. Baker; H. S. Shaver vs. W. L. Whipple.

Bethlehem Wins National Soccer Football Title

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., May 1.—In a game that carried with it the championship of the United States, Bethlehem today defeated Brooklyn Celtics in the national challenge cup tie by a score of 3 goals to 1. The score does not show how clearly the Celtics were outclassed. The contest was staged in Taylor stadium at Lehigh University, there being some 7000 people present.

Originally in the contest for this trophy were 82 teams from all over the country. By the elimination contest 80 of these representative elevens were dropped.

Two of Bethlehem's scores came the first period, and only the rarest kind of luck prevented Bethlehem from making three more.

During this half Goalkeeper Duncan was called on just once to handle the ball, while two other tries went wild. All told Bethlehem had 24 unsuccessful attempts to 8 by Brooklyn during the whole game.

The line-up:

Brooklyn.	Position.	Bethlehem.
Mather	Goal	Duncan
Nicholas	Right fullback	Fletcher
Broadben	Right halfback	Campbell
Donegan	Center halfback	Clarke
Neville	Left halfback	Morrison
Campion	Outside right	Ford
Lonier	Inside right	Murray
O'Halloran	Center forward	Millar

Goals—Ford, Millar, Fleming. Penalty—McQueen. Linesmen—C. Lamb of Boston; James Walter, Philadelphia; C. Crein, New York. Two 45-minute halves.

ALEXANDER BEATS GIANTS, MATTY UP; PERRITT INJURED

Ex-Cardinal Pitcher Sent to Hospital After Collision With Byrne; Score, 4—2.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—Philadelphia defeated New York today, 4 to 2, in a game marked by brilliant fielding, with Lobert, Bancroft, Becker and Byrne making the sensational plays. Bancroft's single and Becker's home run in the first inning gave Philadelphia the lead, and an error by Doyle in the sixth cost the visitors two runs. Meyers started one of New York's runs off Alexander with a double and his second two-bagger sent in another tally. Byrne was called out by Umpire Eason in the eighth after making a triple when Paskert, who was coaching at third base, ran to the bag and patted him on the back. Before the game Pitcher Perritt of New York and Byrne collided going after a fly ball. Perritt had his nose broken and three teeth knocked out and was taken to a hospital. Byrne wrenched his left shoulder. Score:

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 1.—James J. Parrish Jr., national golf links of America, today won the championship of the annual spring tournament of the Country Club of Atlantic City, defeating Maurice E. Risley, star of the local field, in the final round, 4 and 3. Risley outdrove his opponents, but did not fare as well in the approaches.

Lyon Wins Clay Bird Shoot.

NEW YORK, May 1.—George L. Lyon of Durham, N. C., shooting under the colors of the New York A. C., won the tenth annual championship of America at clay birds over the Travers Island traps of the New York A. C. today. He made 192 out of a possible 200 targets.

Penn Oarsmen Beat Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 1.—Pennsylvania won today the varsity race from Navy by two lengths, in 7 minutes 16 seconds. Pennsylvania also won the second-crew event. Navy won the fourth-class race.

McKinley Trims Central 19 to 9 at Park Opening

Dedication of Red and Black's New Campus Was Followed by Defeat.

Central High School quite auspiciously opened its new athletic campus, Scholastic Field, yesterday afternoon, but the baseball nine representing it ignominiously inaugurated play at the new stamping grounds, with a 19 to 9 defeat at the hands of the McKinley High School team.

About 1200 persons were present. The new field was formerly turned over to the school when Principal Chester E. Curtis of Central hurled three perfect strikes over the plate to Principal Armond R. Miller of McKinley.

Central took the lead at the start of the game for the simple reason that the mid-city nine was first at bat. One tally was registered, on a hit, a walk, a hit batsman, and an error. All of which shows that the red and black-hosed lads did not play the game as George Stallings would prescribe it.

Then McKinley Began.

McKinley came back in its half and on two solid wallops and one misplay tallied twice. Two more came in the second and six in the fourth. Evidently the South Siders had their slugging togs on, as five more of Coach Schiek's proteges crossed the pan in the sixth. Pitcher Menze from then on took matters easy and, consequently, several Central athletes flittered across the plate before the game was over.

Although Central scored nine runs, the McKinley team played an excellent game. Several fielding stunts were performed that were really gems, as W. Coates' capture of McElwee's triple in the making during the fifth frame.

The Central team did not play together well and, besides the eight box score black marks, erred frequently in judgment. Third Baseman Larmore relieved Rehagen in the box in the seventh inning and fared middling well. Menze pitched a clever game for McKinley when he was forced to do so.

to center that brought in Esmond and Scheer.

Another was chalked up in the fourth, when Rariden doubled and scored on Moran's—the same Moran, the pitcher—single, again to center. Moran had nothing to do with the run scored in the fifth. Rousch singled and went to third when Laporte rapped out a safe one. Huhn fanned, but Johnson made a wide throw on Esmond's grounder, dragging Borton away off the bag, and Esmond ducked under his stab and reached first safely, Rousch scoring.

The Terriers' sole run came in the fourth. Borton and Kirby led off with singles, were advanced by Chapman's sacrifice and Borton scored while Laporte was throwing out Vaughn.

YANKS TAKE LEAD IN LEAGUE AFTER BEATING MACKMEN

Caldwell Not Even Extended, While Shawkey Is Knocked Out of Box.

NEW YORK, May 1.—For the first time since the oldest inhabitant can remember, the New York Yankees are first in the American League, while the New York Giants are last in the National League.

The Yanks' boost in the world came when Caldwell pitched his team to victory over the Athletics, today, while the Detroit team was being beaten in the West.

Caldwell didn't have to extend himself to win from the broken Mackites. It was the eighth straight victory for the Yanks.

TIGERS GET THREE HITS OFF RUSSELL AND LOSE

CHICAGO, May 1.—Russell proved an enigma to Detroit today, holding them to three scattered hits, while Chicago shut out the visitors 5 to 0. Ray Schalk's homer with two men on the bases was enough to give the locals the game, but they added two more by bunching hits in the third and eighth innings. Cobb was ordered out of the game in the seventh for arguing with Umpire Nallin for calling strikes on him. Score:

Western to Open Regatta Season on River Today

Three Races Will Be Rowed at South Side Club's Inaugural, Weather Permitting.

The rowing season in St. Louis harbors will be officially ushered in today at the Western Rowing Club's headquarters. Righthander Mayor Kiel will be an added attraction to the regular program of races. Kiel will pitch for the reception committee.

The first race will start at 3:30 p. m., with an eight-oared barge race as a starter. The second race of the afternoon, a single scull event, is booked for 4:15 p. m. The four-oared crews will follow immediately after the scull race.

The officials of the race are: Billy Westhus, timekeeper; Joe Rentz, starter; George Minges, referee; Frank Weick, clerk of course, and Pop Schaab, Edmond Koeln, P. B. Blattner and A. J. Mandeville, judges.

Mound City's Crews Busy.

The Mound City Rowing Club crews are training hard for the opening of the Mound City's rowing season Sunday, May 16, at the clubhouse at the foot of Madison street. While the crews are in training under the supervision of Capt. Harry Bentlage, they are without a coach. They hope to have one signed in time for the opening. Coach Ed Brown, who handled the yellow and black boys last season, is at Harvard this spring and will not return to the Mound City Club this year.

The feature race of the Mound City opening will be the Junior Barge race for the Holfer trophy. When the Mound City crews line up one of the veterans of the former crews will be missing. Bruce Imboden, the long oarsman who has been one of the club's mainstays, has decided to quit the game, owing to business reasons.

Century to Open June 6.

The Century Rowing Club will hold its opening on the Mississippi, Sunday, June 6. The junior crews will be the feature of the races on that date. Commodore Max Starkloff will take the junior crews through their first practice session today. The senior crews have not been started as yet, but Starkloff has issued a call for all recruits in the senior class to report and prepare for practice Sunday, May 16. Starkloff announces that he has some of the best crews lined up for the races in the local harbors this season and expects the Century Boat Club to have a big year in the river events.

RANKIN TRADE SCHOOL LOSES TO PRINCIPIA

The Ranken Trade School nine was defeated yesterday by the Principia team at Principia campus, 9—4. Hargis, who has been Principia's mainstay behind the bat, did the pitching for his team, and made a creditable showing. Schaberg, the regular twirler for Principia, got into the game at shortstop, he having pitched against Yeatman High Friday. To date Principia has won five and lost three games.

Driscoll Wins From Boversmith in Single Round

Victor's Amateur Standing Questioned and His Medal Will Be Held Up.

Five bouts were decided last night in the amateur boxing tournament at the South Broadway Athletic Club. This constituted the entire program, but it provided some good entertainment.

In the 110-pound class, Charlie Johnson of the S. B. A. C. defeated Willie Colona of the C. A. C. in a special match, receiving the judges' decision at the end of three rounds. Johnson was at his best, easily outboxing and out-generaling Colona.

Harry Claves, the M. A. A. star, was too clever for Arthur Burke of the S. B. A. C., and won the judges' decision at the end of three rounds.

The hardest boxed bout took place between Erne Jaco of the C. A. C. and Richard Burke, S. B. A. C., in the 115-pound class. It was a good bout, well boxed and developed some good, clean hitting. Jaco gained the referee's decison, after the judges failed to agree.

John Driscoll, unattached, won from Frank Boversmith of the M. C. R. C. in one round. The boxers exchanged hammer-and-tongs fashion and Boversmith was put down near the close of the round, and then retired. Driscoll's amateur standing was questioned by Fred Ward, chairman of the A. A. U. Registration Committee, and his medal will be held up pending an investigation.

Arthur Wickert, unattached, and Oliver Albion of the M. C. R. C. staged a slugging match and Albion quit in the second round after receiving a hard punch to the solar-plexus. Richard Ulrich, entered in the 145-pound class, reported sick and was excused. Officials—Judges, James Solari and Frank Schlueter. Timekeeper—Fred Scheele. Referee—George Kirkwood.

Post-Dispatch Bowlers Win

The Post-Dispatch bowling team, No. 1, won the championship of the Union Printers' Bowling League tourney, which has been in progress all winter.

Team No. 2 of the Post-Dispatch finished second, while the squad from the St. Louis Star finished third.

The winners of the championship won 15 consecutive games, while the star member of the team, William Elfert, had an average of 500 in all but three games out of the 33 matches rolled. The members of the champion five are: William Elfert (Capt.), Gus Gelbach, Henry Nordman, Charles Baeder and Oscar Berghaus.

BURKE TACKLES TOUGH BATTLER IN GUS CHRISTIE

Milwaukee Ringman Has Fought All of Good Boys in Middleweight Class.

LOCAL BOY WILLING

Three Good Preliminaries Also Have Been Arranged by Tommy Sullivan.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

Gus Christie, the Milwaukee middleweight who engages Tom Burke at the Future City Athletic Club, is a boxer of considerable experience and a fairly hard hitter. He is 24 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and easily makes the middleweight limit of 158 pounds ringside. This is the weight at which the match with Burke was made, and a foreit of $50 posted to bind it.

Christie is classed as a good second-rater, and has been considered good enough to match with such well-known fighters as Mike Gibbons, Jack Dillon, George Chip, George ("Knockout") Brown, Buck Crouse, Eddie McGoorty, Tony Caponi, Freddie Hicks, Glen Coakley, Dick Gilbert and Jack Herrick, all of whom are men with good records, and Christie met some of them several times.

Burke's bout with Christie should give some line on the local boy's real ability. Christie has by far the best record of any boxer Burke has been called upon to meet. While it is true that Christie has not kept very busy in the ring for the past year, it is probable that the rest has done him good. He has not been entirely idle, but he was a hard-worked boxer for four years, beginning with 1910, and it was necessary to let up a bit.

Burke Is Ambitious.

Burke is ambitious and eager to fight his way to the front rank. He has defeated all the local middleweights, and now wants to reach out. In agreeing to meet Christie, Burke shows his willingness to take a chance. Burke is a well-mannered man of good habits, never enters the ring in poor condition, and is always trying his best.

The semi-windup between Fred Nelson and "Bud" Clancy should provide a good bout. These men are evenly matched. Both have been shaded by Tom Burke, and by about the same margin. They will box at 158 pounds ringside.

In one of the preliminaries Charley Pelzer of Milwaukee, said to be a clever little boxer, will meet "Young" Monterey, a younger brother of Al Monterey, the hard-hitting local featherweight. This bout will be at 115 pounds.

In the other preliminary, "One-Round" Wagner will box Pete Witt, a younger brother of Leo Witt. The bout will be at 115 pounds. The same two boxed before the Future City A. C. on the 8th of last December, and Wagner was the winner by a knockout in the first round.

Tommy Sullivan has instructed all the boxers to report at the clubhouse not later than 8 p. m.

GASOLINE TEST MAKES 36.9 MILES ON ONE GALLON

Weather Conditions Prevent Better Showing Saturday by Franklin Six.

In the face of weather conditions which were not favorable, a test to ascertain the minimum gasoline consumption of a 1915 Franklin six-cylinder, air-cooled car, was made Saturday, May 1, into St. Louis County, with official observers to certify to the record made. The test was a part of a nation-wide contest which is made on the first of every May by every Franklin dealer in the United States.

The St. Louis test car was driven by Joseph B. Dryer of the Franklin Auto & Supply Co. The observers were Sam Platt for the Automobile Club and W. J. Harris, mechanical engineer.

The run started early Saturday morning, when the temperature was sharply cold, which prevents the free vaporizing of the gasoline, and heavy wind was encountered all the way, which to some extent prevented coasting down hill and the rain of the night before had left the roads in a heavy condition.

In spite of the handicaps noted the car made the round trip from King's highway and Lindell boulevards, to Kerr's Mill road, in St. Louis County, and return. The last stroke of the engine as the last drop of gasoline went through the carburetor was just west of the Clayton road entrance to Forest Park.

The run out showed better results from the gasoline used than the return trip, but the total mileage at the end of the trip as certified to by the observers was 36.9 miles for the gallon.

The test was carried out with great fairness. In order to get actual distance, an auxilliary can was suspended at the left if the car at the hood, which was filled with a certified gallon of gasoline. This tank communicated directly with the carburetor and there was no other gasoline in the car. At the end of the run the tank was again filled and the car was driven to Skinker road and Lindell drive, where the speedometer was tested over the two miles between that point and the lamp post at King's highway and Lindell drive. It was found to be accurate. It was also tested simultaneously with the speedometer of another Franklin car and found correct.

A feature of the test was the remarkable driving of Joseph B. Dryer, who took advantage of every factor which would assist to give longer mileage to the single gallon of gasoline carried, but who drove the car rapidly throughout the trip. The start was made at 7:48 a. m., and the car was back in St. Louis and the speedometer test finished by 10 a. m.

Another Franklin car, driven by Sales Manager Wolffe of the Franklin Auto & Supply Co., accompanied the test car to give aid if needed and to clear the road of obstructing teams or road machinery.

The gasoline was purchased from the filling station of the Standard Oil Co. at 3424 Locust street, and was their regular Red Crown grade, taken directly from the filling tank. At the end of the trip the car was put on a public scale and was found to weigh, without passengers, 2720 pounds. With its passengers it weighed 3250 pounds.

The result of the test was wired to the Franklin Automobile Co. at Syracuse, N. Y., by Mr. Dryer and a little later on the Franklin Company will issue a schedule of the mileage made by dealers in other towns and cities. The St. Louis average is greater than that of most of the dealers, but in some cities, having perfectly level roads and streets or smooth highways, the average is considerably greater than the St. Louis record. In last year's trial the agent at Milwaukee drove his car 52 miles on one gallon of gasoline.

COLE '8' MAKES FAST DRIVE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 1.—Averaging almost 30 miles an hour for a distance of 481 miles through Indiana, Illinois and Iowa in a new Cole "8," J. J. Russell, Cole dealer in Cedar Rapids, Io., wires the factory that the new car works perfectly. Mr. Russell drove the 235 miles from Indianapolis to Chicago in eight hours and the 246 miles from Chicago to Cedar Rapids in 8½ hours for an average of better than 29 miles per hour.

SPEEDWAY MANAGER BUYS A BUICK CAR

Great interest is being attached to the coming races at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Decoration Day, and probably the busiest man in connection with the forthcoming contest is C. W. Sedwick, manager of the Speedway. He is also Indiana representative of the A. A. A., and as an assistance to his work, he has just purchased and had delivered to him, a Buick model C-36 roadster, to keep in touch with his private business, as he is a prominent Indianapolis business and clubman and the multitude of affairs at the Speedway requires a fast, powerful and reliable car, and he was attracted to the Buick, because of the over-head valve motor, and the fact that practically every one of the contests won at the Speedway have been won by cars so equipped; in fact, cars with over-head valve motors hold more records of wins at Indianapolis than any other type.

"It is a fact," said F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., "that most of the foreign cars that have been sent over of recent years have been equipped with over-head valve motors, even though the cars built for regular usage and for sale by the concerns have been of some other type. This is due to the fact that it is recognized by all motor engineers that the over-head valve type is the most powerful. While it is common to use two valves in the head, some of the foreign cars have even gone so far as to place three valves in the top of the cylinder—one for the intake, and two for exhaust. It is also a significant fact that some of the American manufacturers in the cars that they build for speed racing purposes are using the over-head valve type motor, even though their regular manufacture is of some of the other types."

The Buick Co. have entirely discontinued racing and take no part in speed contests, but hold an enviable record for having won 84 per cent of the races in which they started during the time in which they were taking part in speed contests.

TAXI CO. BUILDS CARS

The St. Louis Taxicab Co. has recently installed a plant for building and rebuilding automobiles and taxicabs. The company is employing in its its shops about 99 men, skilled mechanics and painters, has has a specially well-equipped plant to build a new car from the wheels up. Ten new limousines are now in process of assembling and the company expects to have these new limousines in service before the end of the year. The company now owns 100 cars of all kinds and when the new equipment of limousines is completed, all the old-type taxicabs will be discarded.

CASE BUSINESS GOOD

W. S. Roberts, local branch manager of the J. I. Case T. M. Co., builders of Case cars, has just returned from a trip through Illinois territory which took him as far as Mattoon. Crop conditions are fine, the wheat already being knee high, while the farmers are busy plowing for corn with prospects for a bumper crop.

A feature of the Case business the past two weeks has been that every car sold out of town has been driven home by the purchaser.

Cars went to St. Charles, Big Springs, Mokane, Gorin and Monroe City in Missouri, and to Donaldson and Mattoon, Ill. In St. Louis a Case "25" was delivered to Louis Heffner. In the trip to Mattoon Roberts made the 160 miles between noon and 7 o'clock is the evening.

REASON FOR RED TIRES

Among the usual run of automobile tires there is much distinction but very little difference—the pattern of the non-skid tread has been perhaps relied upon more than any one feature to differentiate one make of tire from another.

There is a big vital difference between Empire red tires and other makes. The important difference is the quality and toughness and ruggedness of the rubber itself.

Not only does the red rubber in Empire tires remain soft and lively and is less subject to deterioration than gray, but it has a very peculiar faculty of protecting itself against cuts and abrasions. A cut in the tread has a tendency to close up upon itself rather than to spread and become larger and larger as is the case with so many gray tires.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Let the Stewart Tire Pump do your hard work

WHY continue to pump automobile tires at home and on the road with a hand pump, when your engine is right there to quickly do this dirty work for you?

Why continue to use an old fashioned, unsatisfactory hand-pump, which almost breaks your back, makes you perspire and dirties up your clothes?

This is the day of labor saving devices for the automobilist. You push a button to start your car. You push a button to light your lights. You touch a plunger to sound your warning signal. Your clock is wound electrically. A glance at your speedometer figures the speed and mileage for you. One man can now put up a top. For the same reason, why not make your motor pump your tires?

Put a Stewart Tire Pump on the motor of your car and it will always be "on the job" to save you the dirtiest and most exasperating work and delays of automobiling.

Tire companies report that 90% of all tire troubles are DUE to UNDER-INFLATION.

The Stewart Tire Pump will quickly pay for itself in the increased mileage you'll get out of your tires by keeping them properly inflated, which also makes steering and riding easier, and consequently safer on any road.

The Stewart Tire Pump is correctly designed of exactly proper size to pump up any tire in a very few minutes without straining the motor, without requiring a lot of extra lubrication, without overheating or vaporizing the oil and passing it into the tires, where it will shortly rot them. Reliability is the most important feature. You want a pump that will be "on the job" every time you require it.

Chief of Police Young has purchased for his use in department work a Cadillac "8" car from the Cadillac Automobile Co.

F. C. Kenney, who has for several years been the St. Louis Studebaker branch assistant manager, has been transferred to the office of manager of the subbranch at Memphis. B. J. Collins, lately with the New York Studebaker branch, has been appointed to fill Kenney's position in St. Louis.

A. N. Zerweck, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., started Saturday for the Oldsmobile factory at Lansing, Mich., and will go from there to the Metz factory at Waltham, Mass.

The Hupp Motor Car Co. announces the appointment of Lee Anderson as sales manager, to succeed Frederick A. Harris, who resigned.

The Gerber Fruit Co. and the Fleischman Yeast Co. have purchased one and one-half ton worm-drive trucks and George Toenis a 1500-pound Commerce delivery car from the Federal Truck Co. of St. Louis. The last-named car is to be used in the service of the Graham Paper Co.

E. E. Ryne has been added to the sales force of the Phoenix Auto Supply Co.

Vernon Castle, "father of modern dancing," has just purchased a Marmon 41 runabout.

The Ford Times, a moving picture weekly supplied by the Ford Motor Co., is being shown each week on Monday at the Delmar Theater, Aubert and Delmar avenues.

W. A. Roesch, manager of the St. Louis Locomobile branch, returned from the Locomobile factory Saturday.

Roy F. Newberry is the new sales manager of the Berkemeier Auto and Repair Co., 6231 Bartmer avenue.

F. W. A. Vesper of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., accompanied by his brother, Walter Vesper, manager of the Buick Auto Co. of Oklahoma City, and Fred Campbell, local accessory dealer, started for Kansas City Saturday morning in a Buick car. They will spend 10 days covering Buick territory.

M. B. Bellis has just joined the sales force of the Auto Tire Sales Co.

The Bee-Tee Tire Co., 1003 Pine street, has just taken the agency for St. Louis and the Southwest for the Chester tire, which carries a long run guarantee.

The Ahlberg Bearing Co. has opened a branch at 2831 Locust street, with F. O. Burkholder as manager. The company's specialty is regrinding and repairing worn bearings and the replacement of single bearings with new ones. The work is done while the car waits, if possible.

STUDENTS GET PRACTICAL TRAINING

The St. Louis Automobile College at 2735 Olive street, established some months ago by J. W. Welch and F. W. Darling, who have had considerable experience in this line. O. H. Hentschel was recently taken into the firm. The Automobile College teaches automobile repairing, overhauling, rebuilding and driving of all standard makes of cars in a practical manner. All students are assisted to good positions when competent.

The demand for chauffeurs who can do their own repair work is becoming greater every day. In the jitney business, for instance, it is compulsory in some cities for the driver of a jitney car to be a licensed mechanic. The Automobile College believes that all owners of cars would save considerable money each year if they understood the mechanical end of their cars. It would enable the owner to keep a closer tab on the repairman and chauffeur.

TRUCKS FOR ROAD MAKING

This spring, to a greater extent than ever before, road builders are showing their appreciation of modern machinery. They have accepted the motor truck with the welcome due an emancipator, for this machine has solved some of the knottiest problems that ever confronted the highway contractor.

Officials of the Packard Motor Car Co. point out that the dump body motor truck has revolutionized transportation methods as applied to road building. They cite an instance of economical hauling of road materials near Zanesville, O., where, the contractors say, the effective use of horse-drawn equipment would have been impossible. In this case the Packard truck, working 24 hours a day, delivers 8400 brick from the railroad to the scene of the work. A horse outfit could deliver only 400 brick in a working day.

Motor trucks are now being used for road building throughout the United States.

AUTO CLUB ELECTION

The annual election of the Automobile Club of St. Louis will be held at the club headquarters in the Planters Hotel, Monday, May 3. The ballot boxes will be open between 12 and 3 o'clock p. m. The regular nominees are Edward M. Flesh for president, George J. Tansey for vice president, Mathew F. Morse for secretary and Sam Plant for treasurer. The Board of Governors nominated are James Hagerman Jr., Roy F. Britton, Nat W. Ewing, E. J. Russell, J. D. Perry Lewis and T. S. Maffitt. Lewis and Ewing are the only new members nominated on the board.

WILL VALUE USED CARS

The Used Car Committee of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association has completed its first listing of used car values. This will be in print in about two weeks and distributed to all of the dealers to be a help to them for allowances on used cars. About 400 cars are listed in the catalogue and the values affixed are the actual prices received for them when the dealer who had traded them in sold them.

PREMIER DOES STUNTS

Many excellent reports on the performance of the new 6-50 Premier product are being received from persons who have had an opportunity of testing out the model. William Schreiber, sales manager for the Frye Motor Car Co., St. Louis Premier dealers, performed a stunt on the difficult Bissell hill in St. Louis that is considered phenomenal. With a party of six people he started at the bottom of the hill on high, keeping his speed close to 15 miles an hour. After getting down the hill, he turned around, started down the hill, went half way, made a complete circle twice and started back up the hill, finishing on high speed at 19 miles an hour.

Packard Responsibility behind your hauling

Packard New Model Trucks are more than a complete line of trucks just a generation ahead.

They are more than the only complete series of silent, up-to-date chainless trucks.

HILLCREST AND UNIVERSITY CITY LOTS IN DEMAND

Emilie Bolz Buys Site in Latter Subdivision for Home—138-Acre Tract, a Part of the Lewis Holdings, to Be Sold by Receiver Next Friday.

DR. ERNEST SACHS BUYS HILLCREST HOME

C. F. G. Quinn Has Completed Plans for Building $12,000 Residence—A. G. Pasquier Starts Work on 3 More Houses.

Both University City and Hillcrest are magnets of the St. Louis realty market. The features of the week in University City were the sales of three lots and two houses on Washington avenue in the sections west of Pennsylvania avenue.

With plans for the erection of two handsome houses, Emile Bolz, president of the Bolz-Bride Cooperage Co., purchased two lots, 50x190 feet each on the north side of Washington avenue between Pennsylvania avenue and Williams street. One of the houses will be retained by Bolz for a home and the other will be placed on sale.

The third lot was sold to a client of Paul Jones & Co. whose plan has not been disclosed. It is said he may also build.

The price paid for the lots, which are in the Jackson Johnson block, was $65 a front foot. Bolz recently sold his home at 7012 Washington avenue, on the opposite side of the street, to George W. Burbach of the Post-Dispatch. The price paid in this deal was $11,000, the house being one of the most attractive in University City.

Block Is Subdivided.

The Jackson Johnson block, bounded by Pennsylvania, Willman, Delmar and Washington avenues, in University City, has been subdivided into 80 lots according to a plat filed at Clayton by Paul Jones & Co., who have been appointed exclusive agents for it. All the lots are subject to restrictions which insure the upbuilding of the block on a splendid scale. Contracts have been awarded for the construction through the block of an east and west alley, with conduits for electric light and telephone wires. The work of subdividing and improving the property will be made under the direction of Julius Pittman, surveyor. The block was the site of the Jackson Johnson home.

The Washington avenue lots overlook both Washington University and West Portland Place. The site is just west of Ames Place, an addition to Parkview, which has been subdivided and improved at a cost of $200,000.

Another sale in this section was that of a nine-room house on the south side of Washington avenue, west of Williams street. The purchaser was A. McMurtry Dunn, a Shelby County banker, who shortly will remove to St. Louis. The seller was A. G. Pasquer. The price paid, it is understood, was $12,000. The house, which is finished in hardwood, has two baths and a solarium.

New Homes Being Built.

The Bush-Burns Real Estate Co. has begun the erection of a handsome house on the south side of Washington, just west of Williams street.

Matt G. Reynolds, former Circuit Judge, has been almost bewildered with inquiries as to the 138-acre tract in the western part of University City, which, as receiver for the Lewis holdings, he will dispose of Friday, May 7, at 3 p. m., without limit or reserve, to the highest bidder.

The tract, comprising several parcels, has an aggregate frontage on the north side of Delmar boulevard of 3410 feet. The construction of Delmar boulevard has been completed between the city and Clayton, and the cost borne by Judge Reynolds as receiver. The tract is superbly situated for a high-class residential development.

Sales of building sites in Ames and West Portland places, both in University City, were also brisk. The former subdivision is restricted to $5000 and the latter $3500, exclusive of the cost of the site.

Hillcrest, lying on the west side of Skinker road and of Forest Park, is a cynosure of both homeseekers and investors. Sales in this tract the past week include that of a beautiful nine-room house at 97 Arundel place. The purchaser was Dr. Ernest Sachs, a member of the faculty of Washington University. The sale was effected by Sidney Schiele, manager of the sales department of Giraldine Bros.

The house has nine rooms exclusive of sleeping porches and two baths, besides sun parlor.

Giraldin Bros. in connection with J. H. Farish & Co. have built eight nine-room houses in Hillcrest, all except three of which have been sold.

F. G. Quinn has plans completed for the erection of a nine-room house on the south side of Arundel place. The cost, including the site, will be $12,000. A. G. Pasquier has begun the erection of three houses on Aberdeen place. Already he has built five houses in this subdivision, all of which were disposed of before completion.

Gets Space in Gould Building.

The Gould Directory Co. has leased space to Newburger Garment Co., on the third floor of the Gould Building, 1324 Washington avenue. The upper floors are now all leased except one office.

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE POULTRY WORLD

CAPONIZING EASY AND PRODUCTIVE OF GOOD PROFITS

Right Sort of Tools, Proper Directions and Common Sense the Only Essentials.

Roosters and the little or no profit received from them when sold as such was the reason for my trying caponizing. Although I raise standard-bred chickens and have heretofore kept the best cockerels to sell for breeders, the prices received were not satisfactory and they were more often sold at a loss, as I had to keep many of them most of the winter before there were calls for them. Unless one has yards to keep them separate from the rest of the flock there is no bigger nuisance in the poultry yard than a bunch of husky cockerels, and the loss from fertile eggs sold during the summer has to be laid at their door.

I finally decided to get a set of tools and make a try of caponizing, but the question as to what were the best kind of tools was one I have since found to be very important. I decided on the automatic safe tools and sent in my order for the No. 10 set. After using these tools for two years I find that I made no mistake.

As I am a cripple and confined to a wheel chair, I haven't much to do, so after the tools came I studied the directions closely. I had only five cockerels that were the right size to caponize at that time, they being about the size of a quail and weighing about two pounds. I think this is a good size for a beginner, as the organs can be seen plainer than when they are smaller, but after operating on a few and the position of the organ to be removed is fixed in mind, I believe a more successful operation can be secured when the birds are smaller.

Thirty-six hours before caponizing the cockerels, I had them penned up in a dark, well-ventilated coop, without feed or water, so that their intestines would be empty. And keep out of the way when the operation is on. They don't seem to suffer from the long fast.

In preparing to work I used a couple of halves of a brick to weigh the bird still, and laid a wide board across the arms of my chair for an operating table. I picked off a few feathers in front of the hip joint, then made an opening with a sharp knife that comes with the tools, between the last two ribs. Next I inserted the humane spreader and opened it about one-half to three-fourths of an inch. Then I came to a thin skin that had to be torn open, and about the first thing I saw was a small yellowish object about the shape of a bean, which was the organ to be removed, and I took it out according to directions. The automatic safe remover loops, placed over the organ, will close automatically and will safely grasp the organ without catching hold of the large blood vessel that lies directly back of the organ. This is practically the only place in the operation that there is any danger. After removing the first organ I turned the bird over and repeated the operation on the other side, finishing a successful operation. I never sew up the opening for when the bird is standing it is under the wind and will heal over by the next morning.

The last two seasons I have caponized about 150 cockerels and of this number have killed only three or four. After the operation I give the newly made capons feed and water and they go to eating as soon as let loose. Inside of 24 hours they cannot be told from a cockerel. Occasionally a bird will puff up with wind a day or so after the operation, but this is no cause for alarm; in fact, is a sure sign that the wound is healing nicely. Whenever this occurs I have them penned up in their roosting coops at night and the next morning catch them and tear a hole in the skin with a pin to leave the air escape. This doesn't hurt them, as the air is under the outside skin.

If the construction of the tools used for removing the organ is such that the testicle and cords are not held firmly until removed there is liable to be a small particle of the organ or cords left in the bird. When this happens nature proceeds to grow a new organ and this causes the bird to develop into a rooster, but as they are neither rooster nor capon they are called slips.

The young capons are quiet, grow fast and are awkward until they are several months old, when they begin to take on fat.

The capons are fed with the other chickens, on such grains as are found on any farm, until two or three weeks before they are to be sold. Then pen them in a small yard and feed them ground corn, keeping sour milk before them all the time. It is surprising how fat they will get in a short time. We have sold 76 white Wyandotte and barred Plymouth Rock capons, and after paying all expenses they netted 19 cents per pound. This bunch weighed, when dressed, 592 pounds, or an average of nearly eight pounds.

Aside from the advantages mentioned there is another that is of great value to poultry raisers, and this is using the capons as foster mothers for the incubator chicks. This sounds funny, but it is funnier still to see a capon hovering a brood of chicks and to hear him cluck to them. I have found that they will take to the chicks more readily if they are handled often, so they will be tame and used to your being around.

Skim milk is a fine feed for young stock, from the chick stage up. It furnishes elements for the making of growth that are difficult to supply otherwise. Dry bread soaked in milk and squeezed out makes a good feed for the first week of a chick's life.

Poultry Problems Solve

Pigeons.

I should like to have some information regarding raising pigeons for squabs. What is the best kind for this purpose? Is there any breed of pigeons that will weigh as much as 15 ounces when old enough to sell on the market? What is the usual price of good breeding pigeons?—W. S. B., Fort Worth, Tex.

A. The two most common varieties of pigeons raised for squabs are homers and Carneaux. The homers were formerly used almost entirely. Now the Carneaux are becoming popular also. The homers, when ready for market, will weigh 9 pounds or less per dozen. The Carneaux will weigh 16 pounds to the dozen or less. You can buy good breeding homers for $2 to $3 per pair and Carneaux for $3 to $5 per pair.

Head Lice.

Please let me know the best way to keep from having head lice on chicks. I have lost chicks this year from this cause. I sprinkle the pens with sulphur and coal oil and use other remedies, but I have lost a good many chicks within the last week.—Mrs. J. F.

A. The use of the remedies you suggest is of some value, but if the lice get on the heads of chicks they should be handled individually. Put some sort of insect powder like sulphur, or Persian insect powder or prepared lice powder on the head, under the vent and around the wings. In fact, all over the chicks. It is a good plan sometimes when lice are upon the chicks to put a little lard on the tops of their heads when the chick is first hatched. If you are hatching chicks with hens, as I suppose you are, it must be seen that the hen is free from lice when the hatch comes off. In fact, she should be dusted with some insect powder tw[illegible] three times during the incubation [illegible]ocess. You have got to keep fighti[illegible] them and as I have said above, if [illegible]y are on the head of the chicks, ind[illegible]ual treatment is necessary. That h[illegible] been my experience, at least.

Tankage.

I see in your Sunday paper that you recommend tankage for the purpose of securing animal protein.. Will you please inform me what this tankage is?—J. D. O., Gordon, Tex.

A. Tankage is a by-product of the packing houses. Practically all the packing houses prepare it and sell it. It is made from the animal waste in packing houses by cooking under heat up to 250 degrees or higher and also under pressure. The fat floats to the top and is taken off and used for soap and other purposes. The residue is then put in drying receptacles and subjected to further heat. It is a very valuable protein product containing as a rule about 60 per cent protein. Its value therefore, is apparent. Some dealers handle it. It can be obtained from any of the packing houses of Fort Worth and other cities.

Portable Poultry School Conducted in Kansas

The latest action of the Kansas State Agricultural College in furthering the cause of poultry raising is the establishing of a system of "movable poultry schools" in small towns and rural communities. These schools, in many instances, will be held right on the farms, where the presence of fowls, housing and poultry equipment will make it possible to give very practical poultry instruction. Instructors in poultry husbandry from the college will have charge of the schools and will furnish instruction and demonstration.

These schools will be held three or five days in one place, as may be desired by the poultry raisers asking for them. A school will be held on the petition of 20 or more persons. Should 20 or more women be on the petition, they may also have a cooking school in connection. In that event a teacher from the college domestic science department will be sent with the poultry instructor. In the morning, classes in cooking will be held for the women, and the afternoon will be given over to poultry instruction.

The poultry classes will include lessons in incubating, breeding, housing, feeding, dressing, caponizing and egg handling. The first of these schools were held early in March, and they will continue until June. During June and July special classes of egg buyers will be organized in the cities and towns for instruction in egg candling. Instruction in candling has been given for several years, but the poultry schools are an innovation.

We "learn by doing" in poultry raising as in everything else. You can learn from others. You can learn from this page, but you learn chiefly from your own actual experience, from your failures and from your successes.

PROFITS ON EGGS DOUBLED BY NEW MARKET SYSTEM

Parcel Post, Grading of Eggs and Stamping Them Pay, Farmer Says.

One of the principal reasons why poultry keeping is not carried on more extensively on the average farm remote from the larger cities, is because of the unsatisfactory market conditions found in the small towns. Prices paid for eggs usually are so low that it hardly pays to feed and care for the poultry. To a large extent this condition is the fault of the farmer himself. At least, it is within his power to remedy it.

The experiences of such a farmer who saw the light and revolutionized his poultry raising methods, were given to the poultry editor recently. "We used to sell our eggs to the local dealer for whatever price he was willing to pay," he says. "They were all put in together, clean and dirty, white and brown, large and small. Even after we learned to feed for more eggs and breed for better layers, the marketing end was neglected. Then we woke up.

"First we provided clean nests with fresh material, that would not soil the eggs. A washed egg does not have the appearance of one that has never been dirty. The next move was to carefully grade colors and sizes. Some markets pay more for white and some prefer brown eggs. We tried to distinguish these different markets and sell for the best price. Later the layers of white eggs were disposed of, and now we breed for brown eggs exclusively. Even now the grading is carefully attended to and eggs of different shades of brown kept separate. Uniformity in appearance is our aim.

"Most of the eggs are shipped to a commission merchant. He has never failed to give several cents a dozen more than the local dealer would pay. Since the parcel post has become of practical use we have started a direct trade, having a number of customers whom we furnish from two to five dozen eggs a week. Every egg is stamped with the date it is gathered from the nest. A small rubber dater, costing about 10 cents, does the work. The eggs sold direct bring us an average of 5 cents a dozen more than those sold through the commission merchant.

"In the past year we have adopted the plan of shipping by parcel post in crates holding 15 dozen eggs. This is allowable in the second postal zone, and the eggs are taken right from the door by the rural mail carrier. We figure that the better methods in grading, searching out the best market, and the breeding of uniform purebreds, has more than doubled our receipts from eggs. So far as we can see the expenses have increased very little."

Missouri's production of poultry and eggs is the largest of any state in the country. The value of its poultry products is approximately $50,000,000. Missouri also sends to other states more poultry products than any other. It has the largest poultry breeders' association in the country, numbering 5000 members.

May is an excellent month for hatching chicks, especially under hens.

POULTRY SUCCESS
Lee's Lice Killer and Germozone are essentials to success with poultry. The former is simply sprayed or painted on roosts and kills all insects there as well as lice on the bodies of the chickens roosting over it, scaley leg mites, etc. No handling, dusting, dipping or greasing. Germozone is given in the drinking water. It purifies the water and vessels. It prevents contagion from one to the others. Is counteracts musty or spoiled food. It prevents and relieves bowel trouble. It is a ready remedy for roup, colds, swelled head, canker or skin disease.
Conveniently obtainable at most every city or town.

POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE NEWS

BY BERRY MOORE

PLANS ARE UNDER WAY FOR SEVERAL LARGE BUILDINGS

Uptown and Downtown to Share in Improvements Which Promise to Carry Expenditure of Millions of Dollars and Aid Activity in Real Estate Along Broad Lines.

HOTELS CONSPICUOUS AMONG THE PROJECTS

Railway Ticket Offices for Locust and Eleventh Street Said to Be Not Unlikely Unless Broadway Site Is Shortly Assimilated—Parkway Looked to for Benefit.

The salient features of the realty and building situation are the skyscrapers on the calendar for both downtown and uptown St. Louis. The successful issue of any one of these projects, contemplating structures ranging from 10 to 20 stories, according to realty men, would suffice to revive building operations on a large scale.

Plans have been drawn for two large hotel buildings, one for the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets, and the other for a site west of and adjoining McKinley Station, at High street and Lucas avenue.

Arrangements have been completed for the erection of a 16-story hotel building at Twelfth and Locust streets. The site, which embraces a quarter of a block, is held under a 99-year lease by a company of which W. K. Bixby is the dominant spirit, and which, it is understood, will have the controlling interest in the improvement. W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., who has been prominent in the building movement in the business center, is engineering this project.

Negotiations have been completed by which a wealthy hotel proprietor of Peoria, Ill., will become the lessee of the new Twelfth street hostlery, the plans for which are being perfected by Tom W. Barnett, architect, with offices in the Central National Bank Building.

Incidentally, Barnett was one of the architects for the Jefferson Hotel, which was built by clients of the Mercantile Trust Co., just prior to the World's Fair.

For Interurban Visitors.

Announcement of the proposed McKinley Station hotel was made in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, together with the fact that negotiations are pending with Weldon & Whitson, comprising the Moser Hotel and Silver Moon Restaurant Co., for its operation. The latter project contemplates a 15-story structure of 300 rooms, with direct connection with the McKinley Interurban Station.

While the successful issue of these projects are contingent upon the sale of bonds, they are noteworthy as showing the potentialities of the realty and building situation in downtown St. Louis.

The upward swing of the pendulum began a fortnight ago, when the Orhpeum Theater Co., in connection with Louis A. Cella and Frank R. Tate, announced plans for the erection, at the southeast corner of Ninth and St. Charles streets, of a playhouse to cost $1,000,000.

Approval of the Central Traffic Parkway project, which is anticipated by the real estate fraternity, it is believed will have a wholesome effect upon the realty and building sit- [illegible] The result will be that im[illegible] plans for both sides and [illegible]nds of the proposed parkway [illegible] revived.

[illegible]ovement of the southeast and [illegible]west corners of Twelfth and [illegible]nut streets, owned respectively [illegible] Leo Moser and the Hetzel Investment Co., only awaits the adoption of the parkway plans at the special [illegible]lection in June.

Although he has not announced his plans, a handsome structure, it is understood, will also be erected by Moser on the site of the old Moser Hotel building, north side of Pine street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The building which was recently condemned is now being torn down.

The Mercantile Trust Co., it is said, is prepared to erect a building at the northeast corner of Locust and Eleventh streets for the railway ticket offices, should the Broadway and Locust project for this purpose collapse. The railroads, together with the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone Co., have executed leases, which provide for the erection of a five-story building on the Broadway corner. Officials of the Mercantile Trust, however, decline to make any overtures in this connection, until it is definitely known that Broadway cannot assimilate the railway ticket office building project.

Sponsors of the Broadway project have been trying to pro rate or collect the capital for the erection of the building among the banks and property owners on that and intersecting thoroughfares.

Realty circles are awaiting developments at the northwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue with more or less interest. This site, which is owned by E. C. Simmons, was originally selected for the hotel structure now to be erected by the Holbrook syndicate at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets, and the Franklin Bank was to have occupied the first floor.

Notwithstanding this fact, the Broadway and Washington avenue corner, it is said, has not lost its attractions for the Franklin Bank, and financial circles anticipate the early improvement of the site with a building containing quarters for the bank.

Since the publication in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of plans for the erection on the site of the former Presbyterian Church, of an office or a hotel and theater structure, Paul Jones & Co. have been flooded with letters from prospective hotel and theater lessees.

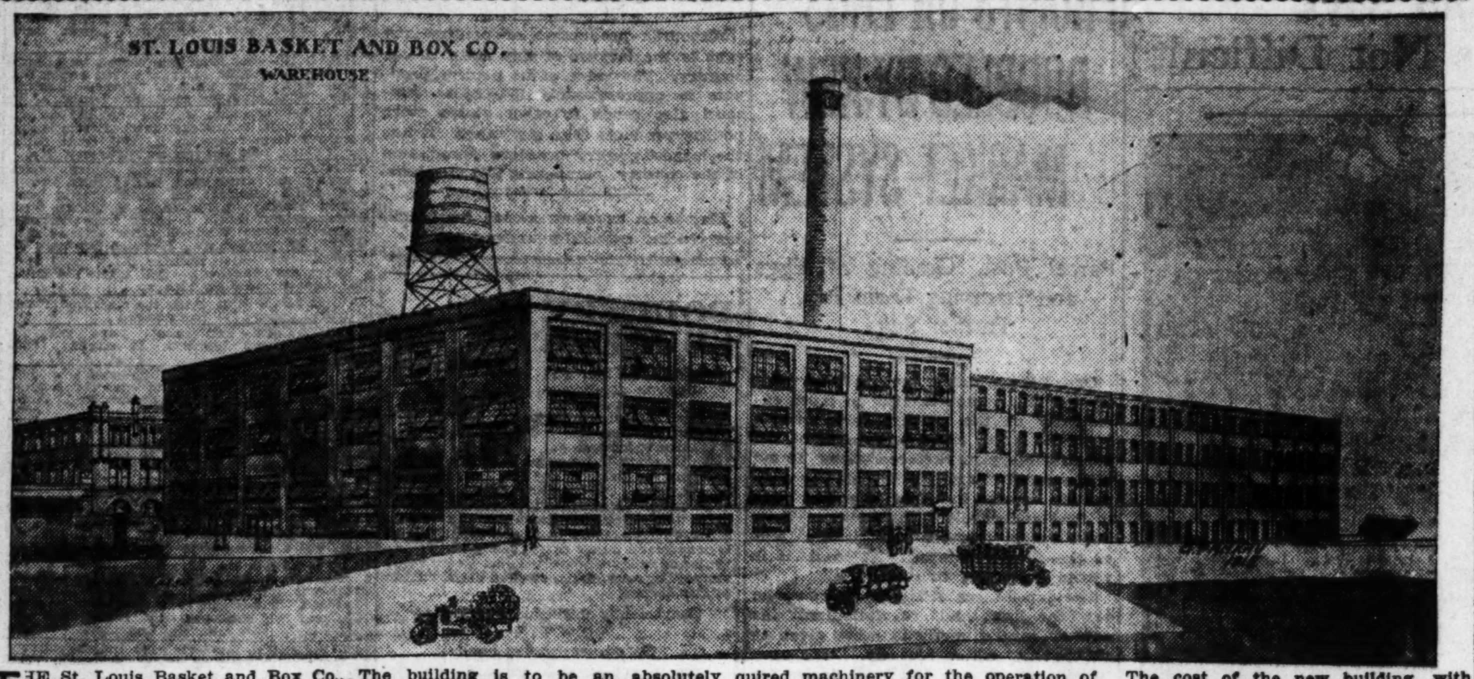
The property is situated on the west side of Grand avenue, just north of Olive street, and at the head of Washington avenue, and thus forms one of the most commanding sites in the city for an improvement of this character.

The owner is Moses Schoenberg of the Famous & Barr Store, who recently purchased the property through Paul Jones & Co. for $190,000, and whose investments in both uptown and downtown St. Louis has been features of the St. Louis realty market. The wisdom of his purchase of the Grand avenue property at the price stated is evidenced from the fact that he has already had several opportunities to resell at substantial advances.

The Mercantile Trust Co. has enjoyed excellent business the past week. Indications are that this spring will far exceed any in the last two years. The company reports numerous inquiries, and quite a number of sales and leases under contract.

The most important transaction of the week was the sale of 303 North Broadway, a three-story-and-basement building erected for John R. Tnompson & Co. of Chicago, its occupant. The building was owned by the Tallahassee Realty Co and sold for their account to the Thompson company.

Drawing of New Warehouse of St. Louis Basket and Box Co. at Second and Arsenal Streets on Which Work Has Started



ST. LOUIS BASKET AND BOX CO.
WAREHOUSE

THE St. Louis Basket and Box Co., of which C. W. Johnson is president, has begun the erection of a large warehouse on the north side of Arsenal street, east of Second street, and adjoining its present plant on the west. The building is to be an absolutely fire-proof structure, with floors, columns and girders of reinforced concrete, the exterior walls being of brick. The total length of the building is 137 feet along Arsenal street by a depth of 170 feet. The first floor contains all required machinery for the operation of the plant and storage rooms. At the south end of the second floor there will be handsome and commodious offices. The remainder of the building will be used for the storage of the finished products.

The cost of the new building, with equipment is estimated at approximately $125,000. The plans were prepared by Widman & Walsh, and the Fruin-Colnon Contracting Co. has been awarded the contract for erection of the building.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE TO INSTALL OFFICERS MAY 20

Governor and Mayor Invited—Eastern and Southern Tourists to Be Guests June 16.

The annual installation banquet of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange will take place at the Mercantile Club May 20. Gov. Major, Mayor Kiel and the Circuit Judges have been invited to attend.

The Exchange will entertain about 150 eastern and southern delegates en route to the national convention at Los Angeles June 16. They will be shown the points of interest by the Exchange's entertainment committee, who will then take them for an automobile ride over the city.

YALE AVENUE SUBDIVISION HAS MODERN IMPROVEMENTS

Bungalow Lots Adjacent to Forest Park Expected to Find Keen Demand.

The new subdivision on Yale avenue, between Oakland and Wise avenues, just west of Forest Park and 200 feet south of Clayton road, has been improved with concrete streets, sidewalks, sewer and all modern improvements. About 2100 feet of level bungalow lots will be put on the market by J. H. Farish & Co. The improvements will be finished by May 15.

The property to be offered is in close proximity to Forest Park. It is served by the Market street car line, which goes direct to Yale avenue.

James C. Morfit, sales manager for J. H. Farish & Co., 119 North Eighth street, is superintending the improvements and sale.

MACARONI FACTORY TO OCCUPY BUILDING AT EIGHTH AND CASS

Structure Erected by James M. Carpenter & Co. Leased by Ravarino & Freschi.

Ravarino Freschi have acquired a three-year lease on the new three-story factory building at the northeast corner of Eighth street and Cass avenue.

The building which occupies a lot, 75x100 feet, will be used as a macaroni factory. The lessor is James M. Carpenter & Co., who erected the building a year ago at a cost of $100,000.

FRENCH MARKET OPENING TAKES ON AIR OF MAY-DAY FESTIVITY

Housewives Attend in Large Numbers and Purchase Sunday Dinner Supplies.

The opening of the French Market, 1000 to 1400 South Broadway, Saturday morning, took on the air of a May day festivity. Housewives from every part of the city attended in hundreds and purchased everything for the Sunday dinner. The large and well-arranged stocks of vegetables, fruits and flowers made the stalls very attractive.

Women with baskets rode to the market by street car, in touring cars, coupes and the family carriage. It was a revival of the popularity of the old French Market, when housewives were wont to buy supplies for the table direct from the farmer and gardener.

Merchants on South Broadway are striving to make the market place the most sanitary and up-to-date institution of the sort in the city. They offer the farmer and gardener market space free.

The housewives and consumers of St. Louis are thus given opportunity of buying direct from the farmer and gardener, and securing fresh vegetables and dairy and poultry products from St. Louis and Jefferson counties. The market is strictly retail—that is, the farmer and gardener sell direct to the consumer.

EASTERN SHOE MANUFACTURING FIRM LEASES BUILDING HERE

Location Will Be 1408 Washington Avenue, With 10,000 Square Feet of Floor Space.

The Harry Simon Realty Co. reports having leased for the account of the Wiltonet Realty Co. the building at 1408 Washington avenue, the lease being made to the Kreider, Schwarz and Sallenbach Shoe Co., wholesale jobbers and manufacturers of children's shoes, for a term of 10 years, beginning July 1 next. The building contains approximately 10,000 square feet. Alterations and improvements will be made.

Kreider, Schwarz and Sallenbach Shoe Co. are Eastern shoe manufacturers with branch stores in western jobbing centers. The Washington avenue building was leased for the needs of the business in St. Louis and the Southwest.

BANK'S "FIRST GRANDCHILD"

Baby's Picture Is in the April Number of "Service."

The April number of "Service," the periodical issued by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., contains a picture of the Trust company's first grandchild. The picture is that of an infant, not yet blessed with hair, and beneath the picture are the words: "The Mississippi Valley Trust Company's first grandchild, born Dec. 28, 1900. At date of her birth her father was 19 years old, and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. was his guardian." The names of parent and child are not stated.

A group of Sylvester's Mississippi Valley paintings is a frontispiece and the cover design is "Union Station in April Rain." There are articles on "The New State Banking Law," "Service for Travelers to San Francisco," and "Bond Buyers."

The Associated Press News Service is received and printed exclusively by the Post-Dispatch in the St. Louis evening field.

50 BUNGALOWS BEING BUILT IN WEST WALNUT MANOR

Majority of Homes Were Sold From Plans—Active Demand for Lots.

An active week in the sales of houses and lots in West Walnut Manor was reported by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co. The houses, which are four-room bungalows, are sold for $980 each on terms of $25 cash and $9.77 month. More than 50 houses, practically all of which were sold from the plans, are in course of construction in the Manor. The lots are also being sold on time payments.

The tract, which is located at Florissant avenue and the city limits, is reached by the Union avenue and Bellefontaine cars in conjunction with the St. Louis and Jennings Railway, the latter being owned by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co.

REALTY COMPANY'S PRICE LIST NAMES MANY GOOD PROPERTIES

The Walter Scott Realty Co.'s new price list of suburban property is one of the most comprehensive that has been issued this spring.

The Webster Groves offers, ranging in price from $2800 to $13,000, include some of the choicest properties of the suburb. The list also includes many attractive Kirkwood, Maplewood and Glendalt Heights homes, besides residences and acres tracts throughout St. Louis County.

THOMPSON LEASES MARKET ST. PREMISES FOR A RESTAURANT

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports having made a 99-year lease, for account of H. A. McCallister and wife, to John R. Thompson & Co., on the building 1819 Market street. This building is directly opposite the entrance to the Union Station.

The Thompson company intends to spend about $10,000 or $12,000 for alterations and improvements, which, when complete, will make this a most attractive restaurant.

REAL ESTATE AGENT TO FURNISH BOND TO CLIENTS ON DEMAND

John J. Dowling of 1134 Chestnut street, former secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, has hung out the "Safty First" sign by becoming a bonded real estate agent. Each of his clients, on application, will receive an individual bond, with the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. as suerty.

The bonding plan is a modern and highly approved form of protection for realty investors.

Facsimile Letter Co. Lease.

The fifth floor of the Nelson Building, 714-16-18 Locust street, has been leased to Hudson Stilwell and the Typewritten Letter and Facsimile Letter Co., at $1800 a year. The quarters embrace more than 6000 square feet. The lease was made by the Martin-Breitt R. E. Co., agent for Charles P. Nelson.

Joins Barngrover & Specht Staff.

W. McCrea, for a number of years with the leasing department of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., has joined the forces of Barngrover & Specht, which is increasing its facilities. Other members of the Barngrover & Specht staff include H. F. Frilenwider, Charles Perry and Fred W. Curl.

GOLDMAN REALTY CO.

The Goldman Realty Co. reports the sale of the Rose Apartments, at 5865 Nina place, to M. Strauss, who purchased for investment. This property contains three apartments of six rooms and sun parlor, with every modern convenience, having private driveway with garage for tenants. The building rents for $2400 a year. J. P. Blake assisted in the sale.

Also reports the sale of 5218-20 Delmar boulevard, a seven and eight room flat building, with separate hot-water heating plants, on lot 33x150. This building rents for $1020 a year and sold for $9000 to a client, for investment.

Also sold 5122-24 Kensington avenue, a four-family flat building of five and six rooms and tile baths, with large brick porches; lot 50x175; rents for $1380 a year. This property was sold to a client of J. P. Blake for investment.

Also reports the exchange of properties aggregating $100,000, the northwest corner of Eighteenth street and Lucas avenue, owned by the Flora Realty Co., at a valuation of $60,000, and the Hill Top Farm property, a country home located at Victoria, Mo., and owned by Samuel Haas, at a valuation of $40,000. J. Slupsky will occupy the Hill Top farm property as a summer home, and Haas intends to improve the Eighteenth and Lucas avenue property shortly.

Loans on St. Louis real estate aggregating $18,500 were also negotiated.

BARNGROVER & SPECHT.

Barngrover & Specht report having sold the two-story single flat building at 6214 Ridge avenue. This flat contains two apartments of four and five rooms each, with baths, granitoid laundries, cellars, furnaces, etc. It was sold for the account of Alma B. Langguth and August Langguth, and was purchased by Frank L. Udell, secretary of the Udell-Predock Mfg. Co., who purchased for an investment. In part payment for the property Mr. and Mrs. Langguth took a 50-foot lot on the east line of Rankin avenue, having a depth of 217 feet to an alley. Barngrover & Specht handled both sides of this transaction, being represented in the negotiations by Fred W. Curl.

Barngrover & Specht also report that W. McCrea, who for a number of years was commercial lease man for the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., has connected himself with them in a like capacity. McCrea was formerly in the architectural business, and because of his training along this line is particularly fitted to successfully handle the leasing proposition.

WEBSTER GROVES ASKS INSPECTION BY ST. LOUISANS

Wants Them to Take Advantage of Its Excess Room, Light and Air.

Webster Groves, known as a beauty city of homes, 11 miles southwest of St. Louis, announces in an advertisement today that it has room and light and air for many more than its present number of inhabitants and is inviting St. Louisans to look it over for themselves. The last census showed it to be a fast-growing little city.

At the present time Webster Groves is quite attractive; but at all seasons it is a healthful, convenient, satisfactory home place. It has 25 miles of streets, flanked by 50 miles of sidewalks, and it has preserved its native trees. The work of landscape gardeners is shown in the many handsomely arranged estates and lawns.

Webster Groves has five graded schools and a new high school. It has its own water main, fire department, sewer system and police department. The streets are wide and well lighted by electricity. The churches are large and handsome. The Monday Club, an organization of women, owns its clubhouse, which is also the public library.

The Algonquin and Westwood Country Clubs have 18-hole golf courses. Good automobile roads lead all over the county and to the city. Two electric lines run day and night, and two steam lines operate 59 trains a day to and from St. Louis.

It is essentially a home town, there being no factories or saloons. It is just far enough out to enjoy fresh air and be free of smoke and dirt.

In winter the transportaiton is regular, and snow is promptly cleaned from the sidewalks.

The Arion Club, of male voices, and the Chaminade Club, with 100 women's voices, are leading musical organizations.

Riding to Webster Groves by motor one passes through Forest Park, then west through Hillcrest, Brentmore and the Clayton road districts. West of Webster are the beautiful hills of the Meramec.

Murphy Beds Give the Utmost in Home Comfort and Economy

Enable You to Get Double Efficiency Out of Every Room in the House Except the Kitchen

Did you ever stop to consider that in the ordinary apartment or flat, ONE-THIRD OF YOUR SPACE—your bedrooms—IS IDLE TWO-THIRDS OF THE TIME? The Murphy Bed does away with the wasteful habit of giving up good space to bedrooms that cannot be used by day. It does away with domestic drudgery—cuts household labor in two. It does away with large furniture investments—cuts equipment cost in two.

The Murphy Bed is pivoted to the frame by an ordinary closet door by means of a simple mechanism which permits it to swing through the doorway and be easily lowered for use. The bed does NOT fold. Has no weights. Installed in your living room, library or sun parlor, it is out of sight and mind during the day, but instantly ready to jump into, the moment you open the closet door and let it down.

When You Rent, Buy or Build See That You Get the Benefit of This Latest Home Convenience.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BUYING DEMAND IN THE STOCK MARKET CENTERS IN INDUSTRIAL SHARES

Reports of War-Order Purchases Are Used to Stimulate Trading.

SHARP DIP MAY COME

Overspeculation for the Rise Invariably Causes Unusual Selling.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"The best point about the present stock market, with its enthusiastic 'outside' following, is that it has absorbed with such equanimity so immense a quantity of American shares sold back by Europe. The worst point about it is its exaggerated interest in stocks whose purchase is the crudest kind of gambling.

"Very possibly, it is true, that the standard investment shares have been kept from such performances as 'Bethlehem,' 'Westinghouse' and 'Locomotive,' by the simple fact of this foreign selling, whereas those stocks, at the behest of their professional conductors, have acted without unrestraint, because Europe, not having previously invested in them, cannot sell on the advance. If so, one may reasonably regret that these favorites of the outside speculator had not been largely owned abroad.

"When an excitement of the present sort prevails, the 'public' as well as a good part of the Stock Exchange loses all sense of values. It buys, not because a stock is intrinsically worth more than its quoted price—that may or may not in a given case be so—but because it is going up. When such a rise goes beyond bounds, as it usually does, there are various influences which, according to experience, serve to stop the performance, and naturally the more extravagant the preceding rise has been, the more violent the real reaction when it comes.

Money May Be Dearer.

A tightening money market is one of those influences; nobody fears that now, and perhaps the refusal of consider it is for the present warranted. Selling from Europe used to be another influence; but that will keep nobody awake at night, when Europe is not a holder of his stock.

"There are left two further influences—sudden realizing sales by speculative holders, increasing as one over-extended speculator sees the others selling, and the mental influence of unexpected and unfavorable news. Each of these influences will necessarily be more violent in its action, and more destructive in its effect on values, in exact proportion as the inverted pyramid of speculation rises further from solid earth.

"Two comments must be made on the movement of the past few weeks. One is that being based ostensibly on 'war orders,' the outside speculator has no notion how much, or how permanently, such business really will enhance the earnings and hence the value of the enterprise. He usually does not know, in fact, whether the concern has actually received such orders. The business is in its nature unusual, irregular and temporary. It is not placed by the foreign governments regardless of cost and without close specifications. While it lasts it will interfere with other normal contracts which might be applied for. When it ends it will end with the greatest suddenness.

Bad News Must Come.

"The other consideration is that these stocks are not immune, any more than others on the list, from the influence of bad news. We have thus far had this season one of those long-continued, unbroken series of favorable news, announcements (from the Stock Exchange point of view) which often lead the unwary speculator to believe that the character of the news will never change. As a mere mathematical proposition, no presumption could be more absurd. Tested by past experience, the occurrence is ceasingly more probable; the longer the succession of good news.

"So far as regards the financial situation generally, the week's developments have been undoubtedly encouraging. The heavy increase in our export trade keeps up, despite a smaller outgo of wheat and cotton.

"The country's total exchange of bank checks for the week is abreast of 1914 for April; as a whole, it should exceed last year.

"More than one-half of the railway companies reporting net receipts for March have shown increase over the preceding year, and some of the gains are large. Behind all these tangible evidences of better things—emphasized, in the otherwise unfavorable Steel Corporation statement, by the rapid expansion of monthly earnings from January to March—stands the unquestionable strenghtening of confidence in business as well as in financial circles. In this, as usual, Wall street has moved in advance of the community at large.

"Prices averaged 1 to 5 points lower on the week, the latter on Bethlehem Steel. Yesterday's market was irregular."

LONDON BANKERS NOT OPTIMISTIC OF EARLY PEACE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, May 1.—No event of a decisive character in the war is immediately expected here and the city, at any rate, is as fully prepared for a prolonged conflict as it has been from the start. Those hopeful people who predict an early peace fail entirely to give convincing reasons for their faith.

Our Government is selling without difficulty £20,000,000 treasury bills weekly. This shows abundant power to finance the war for months to come, even without another large public loan.

Satisfactory progress is also being made in the Stock Exchange readjustment here, and, in general, industrial conditions are satisfactory. The chief problem, but one of manageable dimensions, is the question of gold reserves. We find it surprising that your cables make no reference to the release of gold from the Bank of France in important quantities for New York, because that is the chief explanation of this week's steadiness in exchange. Probably there are further important developments in that direction impending.

London Is Selling Stocks.

"Our sales of American securities will continue, not because of individual finacial distress there, but purely as a corrective of the low sterling rate; for we look for further decline in your exchange on London, and therefore expect continued demands upon our gold.

"Curiously enough, it has been discovered that some of the gold already sent from here to neutral countries has probaly gone to Germany.

"In spite of the treasury restriction, loan flotations in this market are increasing and are successful. A Victoria, Australia, loan of £2,250,000 has been easily placed. South Africa is borrowing £3,000,000, and an Indian railway loan for more than £3,000,000 is expected shortly, besides a joint American-English loan to Argentina.

"We note with approval your market's greater display of caution concerning the financing of other countries. It is believed here that you are beginning to recognize the wisdom of husbanding even your large resources for all possible emergencies. Present indications are that the Reichsbank is finding greater difficulty than heretofore in commandeering gold.

"Possibly a feature of our own coming budget will be taxation of profits on manufacture of war materials."

Cotton Movement in April Shows an Increase.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 1.—Statistics announced today by Secretary Hester of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange indicated cotton movements for April showed marked increases over that month for the last three years. There was brought into sight 922,710 bales, an increase of 158,829 bales over 1912, which had held the April record for several years. North spinners took 317,834 bales, increasing the weekly taking this season to 64,640 bales. Stocks at the seaboard and at the 29 leading interior centers at the close of the month were 2,125,811 bales, as against 1,108,193 bales last year, and 1,020,890 bales in 1913.

The cotton market is getting to be a weather market, and some price decline from the high levels is due largely to the improvement of the weather in the eastern part of the cotton belt. Spots have not been so much affected, but futures in New York have declined 40 to 50 points from the recent high.

A review of the weather for the week ending April 27, and a view of the map since then shows how far these needs have been corrected. The Bulletin said, "In Texas and Oklahoma excessive rains greatly hindered farm work. Fields were badly washed, bottom lands were flooded, and much land already planted to cotton and corn will have to be replanted, while the wet soil will still further delay cotton planting, which is generally considered as several weeks late.

"In the Central States of the belt planting progressed and local showers greatly benefited cotton already planted in many sections. In the Eastern States of the belt the crop has been largely planted, but little growth is possible on account of drouth, and germination of late planted will be delayed until rain occurs.

Drouth in South Carolina.

"The drouth referred to in this bulletin is especially severe in South Carolina and Georgia. In Macon, Ga., the rainfall since March 1 has been 31 per cent of normal. Since the issuance of the report rains in Texas and Oklahoma decreased; on April 28 and 29 practically the whole State of Texas was without rain; on Friday and Saturday scattered showers occurred over the State of Texas, amounting in some places to heavy rains. On the 28th and 29th and May 1 scattered showers occurred over Oklahoma. Yesterday's weather map gave promise of clearing weather over both Texas and Oklahoma, the rain area moving eastward to the relief of the drouth-stricken states.

On April 28 three stations in Georgia reported good showers; and on the 29th 15 stations reported an average rainfall of 52-100ths inch, Eastman, Ga., receiving 1.10 inches on April 30, and May 1 scattered showers occurred.

Acreage reports continue to be put out by private estimators; latterly one report has set the total reduction at about 16 per cent; all of these reports must be accepted as well meant but premature, in so far as they are useful in determining the yield and that is what all are trying to determine.

Prices hinge mainly on the prospective yield, apparently, because the future markets, which are now a fair reflection of the spot markets, turn on the weather reports. Two weeks from now reports of how well the seed which had not germinated in the eastern part of the cotton belt is progressing, after it has become a real plant, will be valuable knowledge. All hands agree to the heavy reduction in the use of fertilizers and estimates of acreage reduction range from 15 to 30 per cent.

After the weather the most absorbing feature of the market is the continuation of the export movement of cotton. The week ending Friday totaled 144,412 bales, compared with 61,207 bales last year. The total for this season was 7,193,905 bales, compared with 8,244,529 bales last year. A steady exporting of 75,000 bales per week from last week on would bring the total up to last year's grand total by the last of the season. Exports the past week were nearly twice that estimate.

The fact that exporting is not affected by slackening of demand plainly indicates that much cotton is committed. The demand has noticably slackened during the decline of the past few days, but is still sufficient to absorb the comparatively scant offerings. This feature of the business has been a puzzle to buyers the past few months and their continual wonder is where the cotton can have gone to. Stocks at the ports are 1,375,603 bales; in the interior counted towns, 752,697 bales; total 2,128,530 bales, with around 3,000,000 bales held in the uncounted towns and on farms, over 5,000,000 bales in all, seem sufficient at this season of the year to satisfy the wants of all, and yet cotton is hard to buy; it is hard held.

If the conviction were not very strong in the cotton country, and that is where the bulk of this cotton is held, that acreage would be drastically cut, it would be natural to begin a grand unloading, for prices seem high if prospects are good for a full yield next season. The advance to 11 cents for the winter months evidently discounted a reduction in acreage. Any change in conditions of weather or other influence on acreage should affect prices.

If we assume that the more conservative of private estimaters is correct, and 15 per cent will represent the reduction in acreage, this reduction, under normal conditions, would produce a crop of 12,750,000 bales, taking 15,000,000 bales as a normal yield. If we take into consideration the heavy reduction in the use of fertilizers and enforced abandonment we can easily imagine a crop of about 10,000,000 bales. At the present rate of consumption such a crop and the surplus now carried would easily be consumed by the end of next season.

India and Egypt have curtailed, too, and there is a better demand for Indian cotton just now. So it is that, while the visible supply of cotton is large, forehanded men are not overlooking their opportunities and are laying in a supply of cotton while it is available. Any signs of increasing acreage, however, would in all probability destroy the confidence of the market that its supporters have held and lead to a large liquidation, which might effectually destroy the advantage gained for the farmer by the advance in prices.

Seventy Per Cent of Missouri Corn Planted.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 1.—Seventy per cent of the Missouri corn land already has been planted, according to the report of the State Agricultural Commission, made public today. The acreage represents an increase of one per cent over that of last year. The condition of wheat is 90 per cent. Nine hundred thousand acres has been sown to oats. The condition is 93.

Speculative currents crossed and recrossed in the wheat market on the Merchants' Exchange last week. As the trading closed prices were irregularly lower, compared with the preceding week's finals. Outside participation in the market was light throughout the week and many quick changes in quotations took place as professionals shifted from one side of the market to the other.

From the crop standpoint the developments decidedly favored the bears. The Southwest had good rains, and reports from Texas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas indicated that the winter wheat is in almost perfect condition, and the largest acreage ever shown. East of the Mississippi River light showers fell, but to maintain the present high crop promise, general rains are necessary. The Atlantic states need moisture badly, but even in that section some minor precipitation was recorded.

Crop Killers Active.

Crop killers made an effort early in the week to start a buying movement on reports of Hessian fly damage in several important wheat states, but the effort fell flat, as every year there is more or less loss to the crop from Hessian flies, but only in one year have they materially reduced the harvest. With the advent of warm, dry weather, however, Hessian fly reports will probably multiply very rapidly on the commission house flies, as traders invariably use this ammunition (artificial or real) as a maker of prices.

Statistical news continues to run bullish. Receipts were light for the week and the domestic visible supply showed a wide decrease. Indications also are for another lowering of the total on Monday. Exports of wheat and flour for the week ran over 7,000,000 bushel, and while 2,000,000 bushels less than the previous week, were three times as large as those of the same week a year ago.

Liverpool quotations were more or less irregular, especially in the late trade, when more optimistic reports from the Dardanelles influenced that market. Paris quotations, however, were sharply higher on the week's speculation.

As a factor in prices, however, the war continues the dominating influence, as it is realized that were it not for the foreign conflict the present crop outlook would mean materially lower quotations on the distant options. As long as war continues, however, abnormally high wheat should prevail, as the belligerents are buying liberally of future supplies at present levels, and America is the most available market in which to make purchases.

With supplies of old crop wheat reduced to a point where cash grain is worth $1.60 per bushel, it will probably be found that the July options, selling close to 30 cents lower, are at too wide a discount, even with a large wheat crop to be marketed. High-priced wheat has prevailed in the world's markets in every important war of the past, and during the Civil War, and for several years after, wheat sold from $1.75 to $2.50 per bushel. Supplies in the warring countries will no doubt ultimately be reduced to such an abnormally low basis that even peace, which no doubt would cause a violent smash in values, will later be found to mean high prices, until the acreage in the fighting countries has been again fully developed, and empty bins in Austria-Hungary, Germany, Belgium and France replaced with stocks of wheat carried in normal times.

It also will no doubt be found that the run of new domestic wheat to market will find more ready buyers than in any year in the history of the trade, especially if the recent reports of foreign buyers of the July and September options prove to be true.

Total Chicago deliveries yesterday on contracts aggregated about $40,000 250 tierces, ribs 4,300,000 lbs.

Local deliveries on May wheat contracts totaled 260,000 bu, of which 85,000 bu was No. 2 red wheat.

Corn deliveries were 15,000 bu, and oats 140,000 bu.

Minneapolis deliveries were only 5000 bu of wheat.

Flour stocks inspected on the Merchants' Exchange in April totaled 8619 barrels. Stocks on May 1 were 54,200 barrels, against 60,500 barrels on April 1, and 61,800 barrels May 1 last year.

Clearances of wheat were 717,000 bu; flour, 13,000 bu; wheat and flour, 776,000 bu; corn, 269,000 bu; oats, 488,000 bu.

The Oklahoma crop report gives May wheat condition as 92, April 86; last May, 93. Record-breaking crop is expected. Condition of oats, 89; last year, 86.

Winnipeg deliveries were: Wheat, 872,000 bu; oats, 986,000 bu; flax, 429,000 bu.

April exports of wheat from Galveston amounted to 2,709,850 bu. No wheat was exported during April last year, and only about 400,000 bu in April, 1913.

LIGHT ARRIVALS CAUSE STEADY CATTLE MARKET

RECEIPTS AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS.

	Last week	Prev. week	Year ago
Cattle	8,785	10,397	11,064
Hogs	40,041	38,871	45,377
Sheep	10,670	8,696	12,657
H. and M.	6,329	5,273	2,982

Last week's cattle receipts were close to the lightest of the year, and were far below normal for this period of the year. However, much of the lightness was accountable for by a lack of seasonable runs from southern states. The beef steer supply was moderate and during the fore-part of the week a large advance was scored. However, this gain was short-lived and was practically all eliminated at the close. The bulk of steers closed about steady with the previous week. There were places, however, where a 10@15c decline was evident. Yearling steers sold last week up to $9.30, the year's high price. Best heavy beeves went at $8.35.

Butcher cattle supply was of good volume and quality easily the best this year. There was a generous sprinkling of choice to prime steers and heifers included in the run. As was the case with steers, heifers opened higher, but the advance was lost in mid-week and medium and common kinds closed 15@25c lower, while best kinds were steady. Mixed yearlings sold at $9.25, the top in the butcher division.

Cows were in moderate supply all during the week, and while they were lower later in the week than early, they closed steady. Bulls were in generous supply all during the week and sold steady.

Vealers Are Plentiful.

A generous supply of vealers arrived last week, but there was a good demand for them and they sold steady at all times. Top was $10, a good sprinkling making the figure.

Last week's trade in stockers and feeders was at the high points of the year, and prices were the highest since was around 15@25c, with both feeders last spring. The advance for the week of and stockers selling up to $8.25. Stocker she-stuff was also in good demand and sold steady.

A mere handful of Southern cattle was on sale during the week. Texas contributed the bulk of the receipts, but even then just a small supply was on sale and the total week's run was less than what could be considered a good day's receipts. There was a good demand for what few steers were offered and they sold at an advance of a dime, Texas-fed steers topping for the week at $8. Texas bulls sold strong and up to $6.25, the year's highest price for car-lot consignments.

Southeastern States were very light contributors and this class of stock showed no change. Alabama mixed steers and heifers sold for $7.15, a year's record.

Hog Receipts Are Small.

The supply of hogs was rather small as the total was in the neighborhood of 40,900 head, which is about the smallest number received here during the present year. There was a fair representation of good medium hogs on sale, but heavy hogs with quality were pretty scarce. Pigs and lights were plentiful as the demand was not very good for the pigs.

The market was on a higher basis as a rule, in fact it was on the highest basis of the year. Pigs did not meet with a very good demand and suffered a heavy loss. The top of the market than any week so far this the hogs were at $7.65@7.85. Packers were slow traders, most of the week, but the shippers were active in their operations on all kinds, with the exception of pigs.

Best hogs sold at $7.75 and higher; fair grades, $6.50@7.80; rough throwout packers, $7.00@7.25; best grade of lights weighing less than 165 pounds, $7.55@7.85; fair lights, $7.25@7.50; best quality pigs under 125 pounds, $7.10@7.50; fair to medium grades, $6.35@7.00, and the poor grades, $5.50@6.25, as a rule.

With a moderate supply of sheep on sale each day, there was little change to the trade. The supply consisted of a fair reprsentation of all kinds, with more spring lambs on the market that any week so far this year, and it is expected that each week the number will increase. The good fat offerings were ready sale each day, but common little spring lambs did not go very well.

Best springers went at $10.50@12.50, fair grades sold at $7@10, best wool lambs $10.25@10.75, with poor grades at $10 and under. Clipped lambs sold at $8.50@9.25, the latter price being the highest ever paid on this market. Clipped lambs are selling fully $1 under wool offerings of the same grade, but are meeting with a good demand.

Good wool sheep found ready sale at $8@8.25, but after the middle of the week none went above $8.15. Clipped mutton sheep sold at $7@7.25, fat wool bucks $7 and clipped ones $6. Choppers sold at $6@6.50, and canners $4@4.50.

Last week the horse and mule market had liberal runs of horses each day, and the trade was strong enough to care for all that arrived. There was a good strong demand in the auction for all types of Eastern horses, and the Southern states took enough to make the trade in the ring generally strong. The demand from foreigners was also good and they took large supplies. Prices on all those kinds ranged high, and shippers were well pleased with returns for the week.

A SAFE INVESTMENT

Two experienced engineers have succeeded, after long, careful and critical search, in finding for their personal management a proven high-grade gold-silver-copper mine which meets their entire approval; in fact, the usual elements of risk seem eliminated.

This property, located in Arizona, has a production record of three (3) years, much ore averaging over $100 per ton.

Because of principal owner's death, these engineers have taken over property by bond and lease contract, with option to purchase—the very safest way to invest capital in mining operations—and desire money for needed development work and increasing mill capacity.

Safe and liberal offer to investors, whose money, it is confidently believed, will yield a splendid return.

FOR 1915
COPPER

CHARLES A. STONEHAM & COMPANY announce a new publication in their series of PROTECTIVE PUBLICITY, entitled "COPPER."

The new booklet contains a wealth of vital and valuable information on this subject. It comprises sixty pages, divided into five parts.

Part I. contains the history of copper metal, the part now being played by American mines in the world's production and demand, together with a forecast of the future of the red metal.

Part II. is devoted to Copper Securities, the history of the share markets and the present relationship of securities prices to the new conditions in the metal.

Part III. contains copper statistics of incalculable value to the investor and speculator, showing production and consumption figures, price ranges, dividends, etc.

Part IV. represents an analysis of thirty-five Copper companies, giving capitalization, funded debt, officers, dominant interests, property location and acreage, ore reserves, costs, annual output, and at the end of each company statement the company analysis is appended, a table showing earnings per share with each variation of 1c per pound in the price of copper metal.

Part V. gives instructions for trading in copper securities, together with a brief description of the business of Charles A. Stoneham & Company.

The booklet is handsomely and attractively printed in two colors, bound in copper colored covers, and is a de luxe edition.

A copy of this booklet will be sent without any charge whatsoever. The edition is limited because of the great expense incurred in its preparation, and we suggest requests for copies be filed as early as possible.

DENIES DORRANCE BOY WAS BORN IN THE BARNUM HOTEL

Former Manager Contradicts Testimony of Woman Who Says C. F. Dorrance Is Her Son.

DR. H. G. MUDD A WITNESS

Never Attended at Birth of a Child—35 Cents He Found Fixed Porter's Memory.

Evidence opposing the testimony of Mrs. John Dorrance that Charles F. Dorrance of Kansas City, who, she asserts, is her son, was born in the Barnum Hotel, at Sixth street and Washington avenue, in 1891, was presented yesterday in the Dorrance estate contest before Special Master Schofield.

Collateral heirs are attacking Charles F. Dorrance's claim to a $200,000 estate in Pennsylvania coal lands and farm lands near Keytesville, Mo., on the ground that he is not the son of the late John Dorrance but a foundling taken from St. Ann's Asylum in St. Louis.

Robert Walker, the first witness, testified that, in 1891, he was manager and proprietor of the Barnum Hotel, and that during that year no child was born at the hotel. He was corroborated by his brother, Harry Walker of 3805 Folsom avenue, assistant manager of the hotel, who said he never heard of a child being born there in 1891, or any other year.

Dr. H. G. Mudd Testifies.

Dr. Havey G. Mudd of 7 Vandeventer place was called in answer to Mrs. Dorrance's testimony that at the birth of the child she was attended by a "Dr. Mudd." The witness said that he and his brother, the late Dr. Henry H. Mudd, were, so far as he knew, the only physicians of that name who ever practiced in St. Louis. He said he had searched through his office records and his brother's and had found no entry indicating that either of them treated a woman named Dorrance in 1891 or the neighboring years. He said he was a surgeon, had never attended at the birth of a child, and that he had never treated a patient at the Barnum Hotel.

Miss Clara Housan, 3501 Washington avenue, testified she was employed as bookkeeper by Dr. Mudd and his brother in 1890 and 1891. She also had gone over the records, she said, and found that Dr. Mudd some years ago attended a woman named Dorrance, but that she was a negress. She did not remember for what the woman was treated.

"Found 35 Cents That Day."

William Edwards, a negro, 4271 Garfield avenue, former porter at the Barnum Hotel, identified a photograph of Mrs. Dorrance as that of a woman whom, he said, Robert Walker, in 1891, directed him to escort from the hotel to a hospital at Tenth and O'Fallon streets. He carried her suitcase, he said, and assisted her to alight from a Lee car and walk into the hospital. He denied telling one of the attorneys in the case that the woman was about to become a mother.

Edwards was asked when he became a porter at the hotel, and replied emphatically: "July 17, 1890." Questioned whether he was certain of the date, he answered that he surely was. "On that day," he explained, "I found 35 cents." Those present laughed, Mrs. Dorrance leading.

In rebuttal of Mrs. Dorrance's testimony that she and Dorrance were married in Louisville, in 1887, under assumed names, she describing herself as "Emma Timmons," and he as "John Johnson," a deposition of J. J. Davis a Louisville attorney, was read. He said the records showed that no marriage license was issued to persons of those names in 1887.

Tells of Birth Records.

Leon Grosch, clerk of vital statistics in St. Louis in 1891, testified that the records of that year did not show the birth of a child named Charles F. Dorrance. He was asked if the records showed the birth of a child named Edward Grozzle. He replied that they did, in September, 1890. According to the contestants, Edward Grozzle was the foundling taken from St. Ann's.

A continuance was ordered until next Friday morning. Master Schofield said that if the case was not concluded next Saturday, he would hold night sessions during the following week.

GOV. MAJOR AND PARTY REACH SAN FRANCISCO AHEAD OF TIME

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Several hundred Missourians met Gov. Major and his party when they arrived this afternoon. The party included the Governor's family, Col. and Mrs. Horace Rumsey, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dallmeyer, J. A. Cunningham and Norman M. Vaughan. They were not expected until tomorrow evening, but managed to make up the day.

Motion pictures of St. Louis brought here by the Business Men's League of St. Louis were shown this morning for the first time to a crowd that packed the auditorium of the Missouri Building.

A ball and entertainment were given tonight under the auspices of the league. Mrs. J. B. Gannt was the hostess of the evening.

NIGHT COURSES AT WASHINGTON

The Washington University faculty has announced that beginning next fall about twenty night courses will be offered for men and women employed during the day. These will begin about the middle of October and continue to April 21.

There will be courses in engineering, architecture, mechanics, English, history, economics, political science, philosophy, mathematics and law. The Saturday morning courses will be continued, as will the Monday afternoon classes, under the direction of the Committee on Extension.

'NUTTY' ANSWERS GIVEN IN QUIZ BY EFFICIENCY BOARD

CANDIDATES STUMPED

Chairman of Board Says Questions Criticised by Kiel, However, Are Very Few.

"Nutty" answers were hurled back at the Efficiency Board in reply to puzzling questions in its recent examinations, questions that Mayor Kiel says could be answered only by a "nut," according to candidates for city jobs who described their experiences to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. Here is one:

Q. What approximate value would you give to a coal gas plant per 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity per day?

A. The market value.

If the board members suspect the candidate betrayed ignorance of such plant values they are right, the candidate himself admitted.

According to this candidate, another person informed him that, in reply to the same question, he wrote: "I would only value the plant in bulk, not by its capacity per day."

He'd Look It Up First.

Another candidate, when he encountered this question with others of similar nature, declares he bracketed all and wrote: "I would only value these things after carefully inquiring of manufacturers what they cost."

The questions which Mayor Kiel criticised were selected from examination papers submitted to 102 applicants for places as Deputy Assessors. On the day of the examination five men are reported to have walked out of the examination room after reading the typewritten list of questions, without attempting answers.

One question, according to a candidate, was as to how the applicant would assess the property of a street railway company. He answered that a Deputy Assessor in St. Louis would not be required to study this problem, as it was the legal function of the State Board of Equalization to assess street railway companies in cities.

A candidate who failed to answer many questions he encountered told a reporter he concealed the fact from his family and friends until he read Mayor Kiel's criticism. He says he is boasting now that he was unable to answer the queries, which removes him from suspicion of being a "nut," as viewed by the Mayor, at least.

Rodgers' Reply to Criticism.

Mayor Kiel said that, in campaigning for the adoption of the new charter, he frequently stated in speeches that the Efficiency Board provision aimed merely to exclude the unfit from public office and was not intended to establish a highly technical test that would enable only college-bred men to qualify.

Chairman Thomas H. Rodgers of the Efficiency Board said, in reply to the Mayor's criticism, that the board may have made some mistakes in its examinations, due to lack of experience, but that the questions referred to constituted only two per cent of the grading to be given applicants and failure to answer them would not necessarily ruin the chances of any candidate.

CORONER'S JURY VERDICT HOLDS YOUTH FOR DEATH OF FIANCEE

Hurley Admits Giving Strychnine to Katherine Roller When She Urged Him To.

LINCOLN, Ill., May 1.—Daniel Hurley Jr., 19 years old, was held responsible for the death of Katherine Roller, 17, in the verdict of the Coroner's jury today, and it was recommended that he be held without bond.

Miss Roller, to whom Hurley had been engaged, died last Friday night, a week after her return home from a buggy ride with Hurley. The latter admittetd giving strychnine to the girl, according to the police, but said he did so because she had urged him to get it for her for more than a month.

Hurley was arrested on the charge of having caused the girl's death and held without bail. An examination of the viscera, it is alleged, disclosed the presence of sufficient strychnine to have caused death.

RETIRED SALESMAN IS BURIED

Thomas Lewis, 62 years old, who died in San Diego, Cal., April 26, was buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery yesterday afternoon in a lot purchased by his father, Charles Lewis, an old resident of St. Louis County, many years ago. Lewis was a salesman for the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., died suddenly of heart disease. He retired from active business about four years ago, after having served the Ely & Walker Company for 36 years.

Besides his wife, he leaves a sister, Mrs. C. V. Harper of 5536 Bartmer avenue, and two brothers, Charles of Neosho, Mo., and John M. of Montgomery City.

U. S. Consulate at Colon Burned.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The American Consulate was among the buildings destroyed by fire in the business section of Colon, Panama, last night, according to a cablegram to the State Department today, which said the fire spread over an area of 22 blocks, and that two persons were killed and 20 injured and that 15,000 persons, mostly negroes, were homeless.

VANDERLIP SAYS AMERICA HAS NOT FELT WAR'S FULL EFFECT

Easy Money Situation Not Due to Inflation in Europe, Says T. W. Lamont.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, New York, at today's session of the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, said the United States had not felt the full financial effect of the European war. He presided at the session at which America's financial position as affected by the war was discussed.

Vanderlip said the inflation of note issue and the inflation of credit in the European countries at war had acted as a cushion against the shock. He thought the effect on the financial situation would eventually be felt more seriously than at present.

The present easy money situation in the United States, according to T. W. Lamont, a member of the Morgan banking firm of New York, was not due to excessive inflation in Europe.

At the morning session, at which the relations of the United States with Central and South America were discussed, Dr. Bernhard Dernberg, former Colonial Secretary of Germany, denied that Germany had protested against the right of the United States to ship arms to belligerents.

A. B. Leach, president of the Investment Bankers' Association, said the net result of the war on this country's finances would be of substantial benefit.

The meeting closed tonight.

BRYAN EXPECTS 10,000 HIGH SCHOOL BOYS TO MAIL PLEDGES

Secretary Not Disappointed Over Scantily Hit Sawdust Trail at New York.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Secretary Bryan this afternoon said that he was not disappointed at the results of his abstinence crusade in New York. While relatively few of those in his audience took the sawdust trail to the water wagon pledge as compared to those who signed up in Philadelphia, this should not be interpreted to mean that the trip was a failure, Mr. Bryan said.

"It is not always the number of persons who sign pledges that signifies the success or failure of the meeting," Mr. Bryan declared. "In New York and Philadelphia we got a great deal of newspaper advertising which went all over the country, and that in the long run is the important thing.

"In a few days I expect to receive 10,000 names of high school boys attached to pledges. Our pledges are being distributed throughout the country and every mail brings in some new signers."

Mr. Bryan then fetched from a cupboard a handful of pledges and offered to sign up with about 20 newspaper men who were making their regular afternoon visit. He handed each man a printed pledge. He announced that the offer would be good at any time, but explained that all the pledges were for life, there being no trial pledges for a limited time in the Bryan cupboard.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Elizabeth Dessaa, who departed this life one year ago, May 2, 1914.

Home is not home, for mother's not there,
Angels have taken her out of our care,
Sleep mother, sleep, thy toils are o'er,
Sweet be thy rest so oft needed before.

Her daughters,
ANNA HOFMANN AND ELIZABETH DESSAA.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our beloved father, Christian Rathert, who departed this life May 1, 1914.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather round our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The face we see no more.

Nor shall your memory fade and though on earth your body lies your soul is safe in heaven. Loving hearts will often linger 'round the grave where you are lying. Sadly missed by

HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear wife and my dear mamma, Matilda Tritschler, who died May 4, 1914.

Just one year ago on this day
Since our dear mamma passed away;
We saw her suffer, heard her sighs,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes;
We saw her sinking hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
But now she calmly sleeps at last,
All pains, all aches, all suffering passed.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND BABY.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear wife, our mother, daughter and sister, Matilda Tritschler (nee Schwecke), who departed this life one year ago, May 4, 1914.

A dear one from our home has gone,
The voice we loved is still;
Grim death has left a vacant place
That never can be filled.
But long as life our hearts shall hold
Thy memory ever dear,
And o'er thy grave, in lonely grief,
Shall fall the silent tear.

Sadly missed by her husband, baby parents and sister, and those who loved her.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear brother, Burt Daniels, who fell asleep in Jesus April 30, 1912, three years ago.

Dear one thou art gone before us,
And thy saintly soul is flown,
Where tears are wiped from every eye
And sorrow is unknown.
The toilsome way thou'rt traveled o'er,
And borne the heavy load,
But Christ has taught thy languid feet
To reach His blest abode.
Rest on, dear brother, thy labor is o'er,
Thy willing hands will toil no more.
Like the ivy on the withered oak,
When all things else decay,
Our love for you will keep green
And never fade away.

Sadly missed by
SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear child, Lydia Alma Bieberman, who departed this life May 1, 1914.

Just one year ago today
Since our little darling passed away;
We saw her suffer, heard her sighs,
With aching heart and weeping eyes.
We saw her sinking, hour by hour,
But could not stay death's awful power.
But now she calmly sleeps at last,
All pains, all aches, all sufferings past.

Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, Fred Lebermann, who departed this life one year ago, April 29, 1914.

Just one year ago today
Since our dear Fred passed away;
We saw him suffer, heard his sighs,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes.
We saw him sinking, hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
But now he calmly sleeps at last,
All pains, all aches, all suffering past.

Sadly missed by his MOTHER, FATHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of William C. Harlan, who departed this life May 5, 1914.

Within this lonely home I sit bewildered in my grief,
Or walk beneath the burden of my doubt,
Striving with little to do and bear
Since time is left, with daylight blotted out.
Oh, father, how we miss your coming footsteps,
The voice we loved is stilled forever,
Forsaken and forgotten we are.
The world knows little of our sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed,
Home is not what it used to be since you are gone.
Whenever I close the door at night,
And turn the creaking key about,
A pang renewed assails my heart,
I think our darling father is shut out.

Sadly missed by
HIS WIFE AND BABIES.

WHAT MAY BE NEEDED TO MAKE YOUR REAL ESTATE BRING RETURNS?

The day when persons "doctored themselves," made their own clothes, tried their own cases at law and otherwise avoided the help of people who "know," has gone. In that day men were apt, also, to act as their own real estate agents. But the wise man now calls for the expert. He who would get the most from his real estate will turn it over to a good agent, with instructions to keep the property properly advertised through the Post-Dispatch big House, Home and Real Estate Directory.

LOST and FOUND

Solid agate, 10c line, minimum 20c.

THAT LOST ARTICLE MAY NOT BE FOUND TODAY

Or tomorrow or next week. In fact, a month or more may elapse before it turns up. A little persistency may be necessary. Often the article may be unfound; often fear of prosecution or hope of more satisfactory reward may delay the restoration. Then the belated awakening of the finder's conscience explains many delays. But persistency and Post-Dispatch wants will usually recover a lost article if an honest person finds it. The service of the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau is also enlisted in behalf of advertisers. (93)

The fact that the place is building up rapidly discounts all statements of a negative character.

The fact that the people of Southampton appreciate and recommend the present system of car service discounts all statements to the contrary. You will like it, too, when you understand the value of cars spaced on a time schedule and run regularly.

It's the greatest spot in town for the children. The clean, fresh air and sunshine makes their cheeks rosy and their eyes sparkle with the "Wine of Good Health."

Bar none, there is not a more beautiful or desirable piece of ground in the corporate limits of St. Louis today than that included in the limits of Southampton.

There are no better people anywhere than you will find in Southampton. They love their flowers, their gardens, their trees, their homes and everything that goes to make home-life worth while.

There are one hundred facts we might recite about Southampton, but the main thing for you to do is to come and see.

Nothing Low But the Price

Ever hear of the city directrix? It's the point where the river touches Market street. The point from which we reckon elevations in St. Louis.

Central Kingshighway is about 86 feet above it; Southern Union avenue is only 64 feet; the high point in Parkview is 112 feet; in Ames Place it is 133 feet.

Look at Ames Place to-morrow and be as skeptical as you can.

You'll see the highest grade of lighting, street-paving, guttering and alley paving.

You'll see the highest class of completely built-up surroundings that any subdivision has ever shown.

You'll see the highest type of restricted, close-in, logical, residence property.

You'll begin to realize that the prices per foot are the only low things in

Ames Place

To see Ames Place, motor through Parkview or take University Car to Pennsylvania Avenue. Then see us for prices that are lower now than they ever will be again.

OUR MOTTO: SAFETY FIRST!

THE SAFEST INVESTMENT ON EARTH IS A GOOD DEED OF TRUST SECURED BY ST. LOUIS REAL ESTATE PURCHASED THROUGH A CAREFUL AND CONSERVATIVE AGENCY

You cannot make a loss on a Real Estate loan if you make it through the office of Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co.

WE ARE PROUD OF OUR RECORD. In twenty years we have placed millions of dollars for St. Louis Home Clients, secured by DEEDS OF TRUST ON ST. LOUIS CITY REAL ESTATE, without the loss of a dollar either in Principal or Interest to our Clients.

No Client of ours has ever had to take a piece of property to satisfy his loan. Every loan made by us has been personally inspected by a member of the firm. Every loan bought of us is worth 100 cents on the dollar all the time. Every loan made by us is made with our own money before being offered to Investors. Both the borrower and lender receive our personal, individual and prompt attention.

We cash ON DEMAND at any time, any loan bought of us for a commission of 1 per cent. Every loan sold by us is a FIRST DEED OF TRUST; every principal note is Certified by the Recorder of Deeds that it is the Principal Note described in the Deed of Trust and every precaution is taken which a conservative and careful firm should take; every loan has Certificate of Title and Fire and Tornado Insurance.

OUR TWENTY YEARS OF SUCCESS WITHOUT THE LOSS OF A DOLLAR TO ANY OF OUR CLIENTS PROVES CONCLUSIVELY that WE ARE CAREFUL and use conservative methods, combined with good judgment, and that we understand our business.

TO THE INVESTOR: Read the above and give it some thought. Have your Investments turned out as good as our Clients' Investments in Deeds of Trust?

Consult us the next time you have money to invest. By careful and conservative methods and honorable dealings to both the borrower and lender we have grown in twenty years to the largest lenders of money on Real Estate in the City.

We always have on hand a good selection of loans and we are always in the market for good loans. No loan is too small or too large for us to handle.

We court your careful investigation of us and our methods and invite you to talk it over with us when you contemplate making your next investment.

This Is May Day

The feast of wild flowers, when custom and tradition bid us spend the day in the open, close to Nature. Gather the beauty spread before us so bountifully by Nature's lavish hand. Breathe the pure air of the country and store up new energy and new courage for next week's business battles.

Come Out Today

to Kathmar Acres, for bounteous Nature has been partial to this section and has lavished her rich gifts more freely here than in any other part of the county. Blossoming fruit trees make the hills of the Florissant Valley white, while the modest violet and other wild flowers in the dells are not too modest nor retiring to be found by the children. You can buy an acre in for the rent money you are now paying and have beautiful surroundings all the year.

To go to Kathmar Acres on the car line take the Kirkwood-Ferguson car at Wellston, change to the Florissant division at the transfer point just beyond Ramona Park—get off at Stella avenue. Fare five cents. Natural Bridge road is the direct automobile road to Kathmar Acres. Come out today—salesmen on the grounds.

An Actual Photograph of $1,079,500 Worth of Jewelry as Worn by Miss Martha Hedman

HOW much jewelry may [illegible] woman wear without incurring the reproach of bad taste? At a recent ball at Palm Beach certain ladies, whose magnificent adornments of precious stones were estimated as worth from a quarter to a half million each, were condemned as examples of extravagant ostentation. Yet no such criticism can lie against Miss Martha Hedman who, in this charming picture, is shown wearing actually over a million dollars' worth of jewels, It's an exhibit of quality rather than quantity.

MAN-TO-MAN TALKS WITH BOB

By Berton Braley

Number Seven—ON WATCHING THE JOB ABOVE.

Berton Braley is a Westerner whose widely known magazine work, including previous Sunday Post-Dispatch contributions, has been compared to the writings of O. Henry He says what he means and means what he says. Hence the wholesome tang of these everyday talks in the vernacular to the young men of today.

HELLO, Bob. What are you smirking so about?

How? What's that?

One of the fellows in the office is such a hog for work that he's doing some of yours as well as his own—and you're letting the poor boob do it? Ha ha! That is a good joke, I don't wonder you're chuckling over it. The poor simp—butting in on your job! Serves him right to let him toil his fool head off, doesn't it?

But say, wait a minute. Has he got a better job than you have—or one not so good?

Oh, you're getting a lot more salary than he is, are you—and that makes it even funnier to let him handle some of your duties?

Well, it's a good joke, son, but I'm afraid it's likely to be on you if you keep it up.

Why? Simplest thing in the world. If that poor simp, as you call him, keeps on doing a lot of your work the boss will get wise to him after a while and let him do it all.

And, as I presume the boss is not running an institution for the maintenance of gentlemen of leisure, one Bob will be wondering where a fellow can land another job.

Believe me, Bob, that boy isn't such a simp as you think. He's wise to himself and to you, and, if you like the position you hold and want to keep on holding it for a while—you make up your mind to do all your own work and do it as well as you can. Then the man below you won't move into your job until you've moved up out of it. It's a pretty good idea to keep your eye on the job above you all the time, just as that boy is doing. I don't mean that you ought to be jealous of the man who has the place ahead of you, or that you ought to conspire or plot against him, or use any underhand means to supplant him; but I do mean that you ought to know as much about his job as you can, and that you ought to be fitting yourself to handle it in case he moves up or out. I wouldn't recommend, however, that you try to do much of his work for him, or let him ease it off onto you, unless it's absolutely necessary.

Oh, I know I said the fellow below YOU might get your job by grabbing your work—and he might—but I don't believe in that plan of rising, just the same. Because there's always the chance that it may interfere with doing your own work properly—which would hurt a heap more than the other would help.

So, if you'll listen to your Uncle Dudley, you'll quit chuckling over the poor boob who's doing your work, and do it yourself—and do it a whole lot better than either you or any one else has ever done it before.

That'll bring the smile without a comeback to it.

A Russian Picture of the Beauty of Battle

This picturesque etching in words is so characteristic of the keenness of the Slav mind in finding the vivid and significant in the homeliest details, that it might have been a chapter from Tolstoy's "War and Peace" or his "Sebastopol Sketches." However, it was written by an unnamed correspondent of the Russian newspaper, "Russkoe Slovo." :: :: :: ::

THE master—a small, shriveled old man—can hardly get up from his filthy bed; and the mistress—a wrinkled, ill old woman—weeps unceasingly. Somewhere far away are her children—for she does not know where they are. There is nothing to eat, and she is ashamed to have to beg from the soldiers, who are so willing to share with her. Besides this, there is the ever-present terror that from the trenches, which are so very, very close, there may appear a German to fire the last remainders of her once-prosperous farm.

And with these two, in their half of the hut, there are billeted eight orderlies; in the other half, in which there are two low, minute bunks like those in a ship's cabin, there are living five doctors and three organizers of an ambulance unit. In these rooms are two offices—a kitchen and a store of provisions—and here is carried on the business interwoven with the life of every day.

Towards the evening it becomes hot and stuffy in the hut from the number of persons gathered in it, the tobacco smoke, and the stove on which the evening meal is being cooked. So everyone goes out for a walk in the road by the woods.

There is a moon, and the evening is bright and quiet. From here can be seen troops advancing, orderlies galloping to and fro, and a long line of field-kitchens on its way to the front stretched over the surface of the sparkling snow.

Now is a strange time, when everything along the front is quiet and the war ceases for an hour or two; for the men must rest and eat to be able afterwards to carry on as before.

At 9 o'clock everything is as it was; shrapnel bursts close by, and the heavy boom of artillery can once more be heard. Sometimes rifle firing will start, to continue intermittently throughout the night.

Having returned to the farm, where a lamp is burning and newly arrived papers are lying on the table, we drink tea with lemon juice. A young Caucasian doctor smokes now and then to lessen the numerous smells. Then we all begin to get ready to go to sleep. Some lie on their narrow folding camp beds, some on crates which once held provisions, and the rest simply on the beaten earthen floor. The conversation is of the war, of our birthplaces, and of the possibility of a night attack by the enemy. Soon all are asleep. In the little hut it is warm, quiet and snug, and only occasionally it shakes from the force of the exploding shells. It seems that here there is and can be no danger.

Close on 3 o'clock we are awakened by a series of shocks which by the rattling of the furniture seem to be so great that the flimsy hut is having great difficulty in keeping to one spot. Someone speaks excitedly: "Do you hear it? It must be a night attack."

An incessant artillery battle now begins. The bursts of shells come one on top of another; they are quite close, next to us, right under the walls of the hut; surely it must fall. And now we can hear a sound as of a person tapping persistently, untiringly, irritably at the wall with an enormous dry hard fist. This is the rifle fire beginning.

We hurriedly dress and go out.

It is terrible, but wonderfully beautiful.

Short red flames burst out one after another, the searchlight throws its strange, long pale beams as far as the horizon, and the screaming shrapnel falls on the ground in bright, meteor-like sparks and in the air there is the ceaseless crack of rifle fire, bursting of shells, and the clatter of shrapnel, the constant untiring business of a battle.

Then everything begins to quiet down, like a storm that has exhausted its fury. But hardly have we started toward the hut when again * * * It starts slowly, quietly, far away. Then nearer, clearer, more persistently, shriller. Rifles, quick-firers, howitzers, all once more enter the lists. The farther away the fiercer it seems. Now it becomes hard to distinguish one sound from the other, for the rifles and the big guns seem to make the same amount of noise.

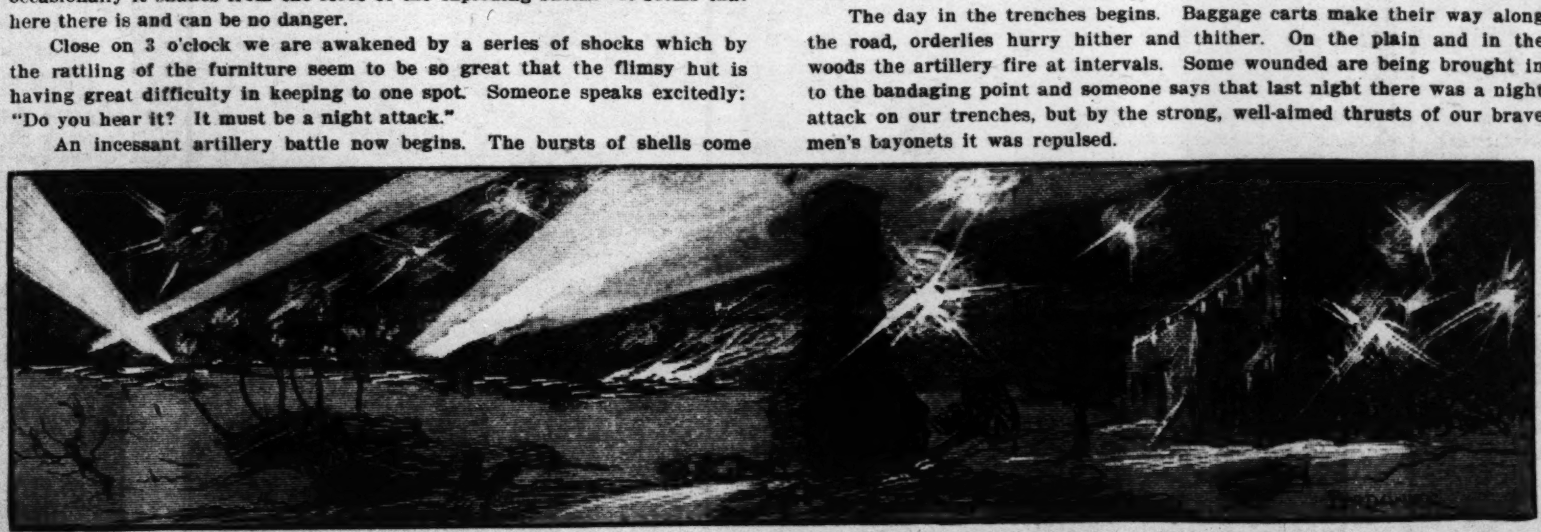
I have an unconquerable craving to go and see what is happening a verst or two away, where the battle is being fought. But from the peat bog on which the hut stands a fog has risen, and, in spite of the bright moon, it is impossible to see anything in the damp mist.

And then suddenly a drawling, low, distant roar arises, grows, approaches. I can clearly hear amid this tornado of sounds the tones of many men's voices. A faraway "A—a—a—!" getting louder every moment. Again, again! Here it is quite close to me, even farther off again, from this side, then from the other.

My heart beats with excitement and agitation. I imagine—as I cannot see anything in the cold, dank mist—that something is approaching, that in a minute out of that darkness there may appear foreign soldiers. And, again, although I am encircled by a blanket of fog, I imagine I can see something. But that is impossible.

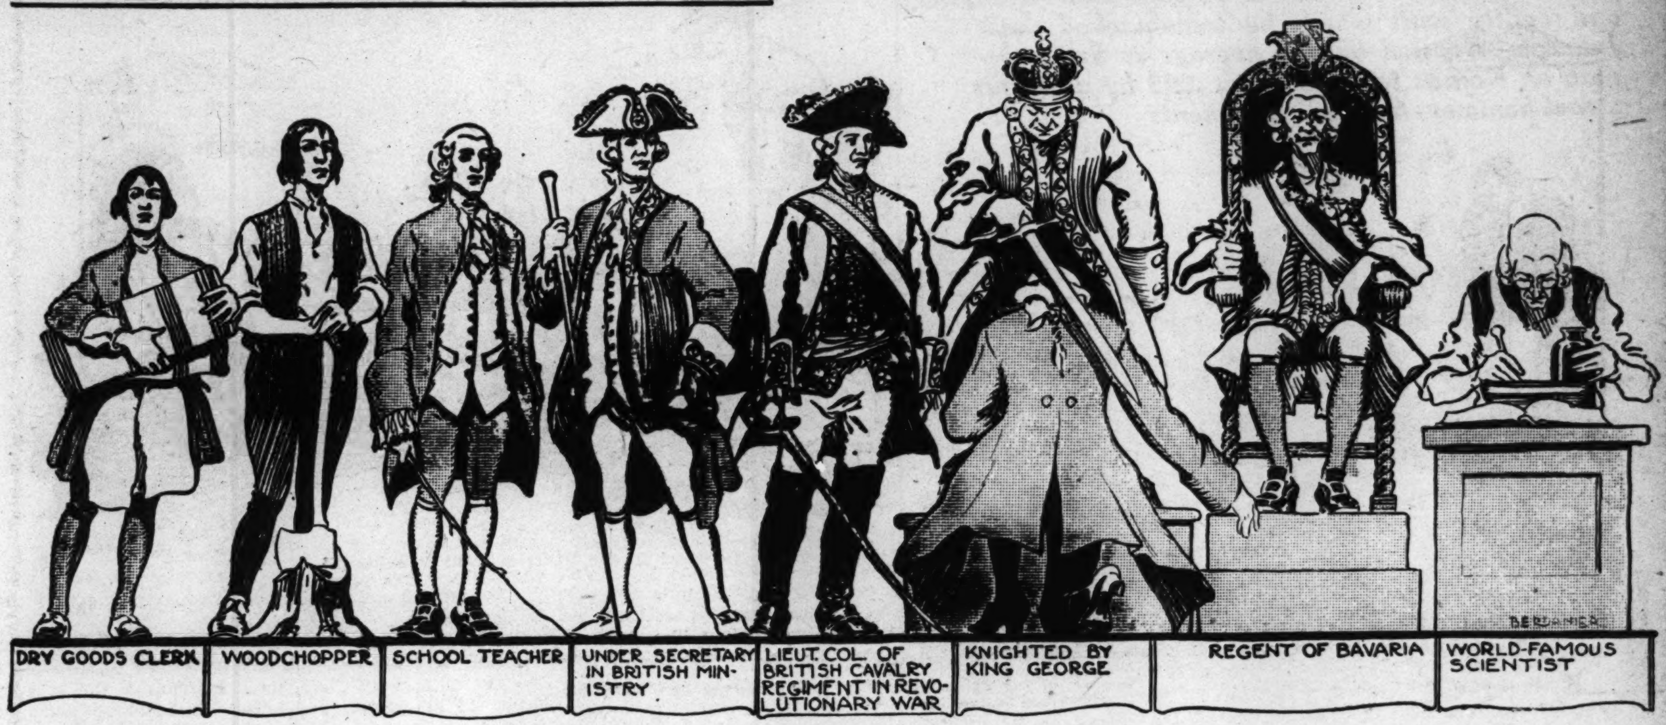
Then again the long-drawn-out "A—a—a—!" Now somewhat louder, more convincing, more triumphant. But suddenly everything almost at the same moment grows calm. One or two more shots are fired by rifles and guns. * * * And by 7 o'clock in the morning, when a slow, dull, drowsy dawn comes up from the north, there is complete silence all along our front.

The day in the trenches begins. Baggage carts make their way along the road, orderlies hurry hither and thither. On the plain and in the woods the artillery fire at intervals. Some wounded are being brought in to the bandaging point and someone says that last night there was a night attack on our trenches, but by the strong, well-aimed thrusts of our brave men's bayonets it was repulsed.



DISCOVERED!

AMERICA'S THIRD GREATEST MAN



Although few ever heard of him, Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, is thus ranked by Prof. F. H. Giddings—His career one of history's most amazing adventures—From dry goods clerk to ruler of Bavaria and Count of Holy Roman Empire—Country schoolmaster at 20, member of British Ministry at 27—Fought on English side during Revolution and won immortal fame as scientist.

DR. FRANKLIN H. GIDDINGS, professor of sociology and the history of civilization at Columbia University, has just aroused widespread comment by his promulgation of a list of "the three greatest Americans"—to-wit: Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford—excluding Presidents, of course.

Most persons would probably include Benjamin Franklin in such a list. Jonathan Edwards lingers vaguely in the popular memory as a sort of Puritan Billy Sunday, with a genius and scholarship of which the modern evangelist has no trace. But who, in the name of Edison and Rockefeller, was Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford?

It is possible that not one American in a thousand has even heard the name of this woodchopper and shop boy who for 11 years was the real ruler of Bavaria; of this Yankee schoolmaster who, at the age of 27 years, was an under Secretary of State in the British Ministry; of this mathematician with a personality so fascinating as completely to bewitch everyone whom he set himself to win; of this friend of mankind and flatterer of the great, at once a scientist ranking with Faraday, and the most ingratiating of courtiers; of this philanthropist with the keenest of eyes to the main chance; of this roue who, according to Prof. Giddings, was the founder of the modern German "culture of efficiency."

The sober facts of his career are such as make a novel of the wildest romance seem tame. In the midst of a life of dazzling personal adventure, he had time to achieve glory as a scientist through his fundamental discoveries concerning the laws of heat and its application to human service; or, as he called it, "the scientific management of fire."

Benjamin Thompson was born March 26, 1753, at Woburn, Mass., 12 miles from the birthplace of Franklin. His family had been settled in New England about a century, and were moderately well-to-do farmers. The boy received a fair education, particularly in mathematics, through the interest of a learned clergyman, a graduate of Harvard, to which institution Count Rumford afterwards showed his gratitude by founding the Rumford professorship at Harvard University. At the age of 14 Benjamin calculated a solar eclipse within four seconds of accuracy.

When he was 13 years old his parents, despairing of ever making a farmer of their indolent, mercurial and bookish son, apprenticed him to a storekeeper at Salem. He soon conceived an intense aversion for the shop, and when his services were needed for waiting on customers, was too often found under one of the counters, where he was building a perpetual motion machine, or practicing his talents as a draftsman and engraver. A passionate devotion to his violin only added to his commercial demerits.

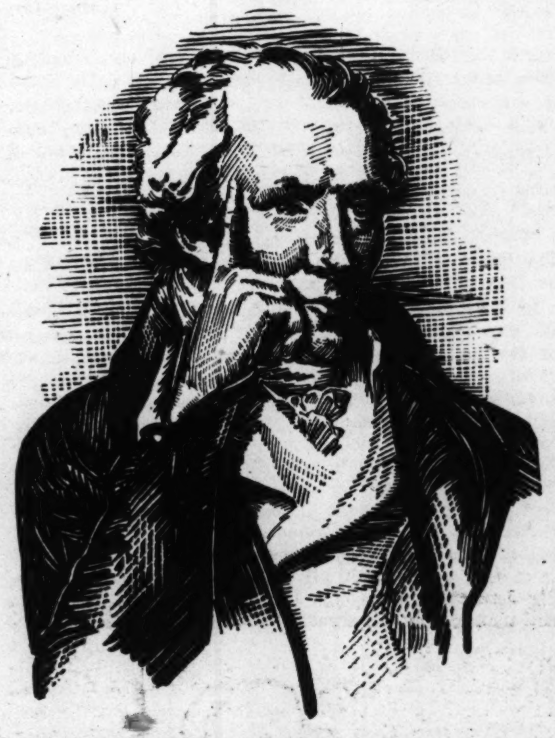
As a boy he began the experiments with gunpowder and firearms which afterwards won him fame as the greatest ordnance expert of his day. At the time of the repeal of the stamp act, the young apprentice was engaged to prepare fireworks for the public jubilation in Salem. While he was grinding his materials in a mortar an explosion occurred which came near blotting out the future Count Rumford then and there. His face, hands and chest were terribly burned and he suffered a long confinement, but escaped without marks of the accident.

His Salem apprenticeship came to an end after three years, much to the content of his employer, and he became a clerk in a dry goods shop in Boston. He studied French at night, formulated recipes for making all kinds of fireworks, and chopped cordwood to pay for cloth to make himself a coat and to defray his pew rent. Tradition asserts that the youth was present at the "Boston Massacre," sword in hand, "eager to attack the enemies of his country."

Notes from his diary show him to have been too busy at studying medicine and anatomy, making experiments in chemistry and physics and attending public lectures at Harvard to have had much zeal left for his duties as a clerk. In fact, he decided after two years that he had no talent for dry goods. So it was determined that as a last resort he should become a school teacher. He served six months at Bradford, N. H., and then was summoned to a better position at Concord, in the same State, a town which had until a short time previously borne the name of Rumford, after a suburb of that name near London.

He was 19 when he went to Concord, an extremely handsome and athletic youth, nearly six feet tall, with features frank and attractive, and aglow with intelligence and vitality. Here lived a rich widow, 33 years old—Mrs. Sarah Rolfe. Her instant capitulation was the first conspicuous example of the fascination of Thompson's personality. "I married, or rather I was married," Count Rumford said years afterwards.

This marriage was the beginning of Thompson's fortunes. Through his wife he made the acquaintance of Gov. Wentworth of New Hampshire, who was so infatuated by the skillful court paid him by the recent dry goods clerk that he appointed him Major of a company of militia, elevating him over the heads of officers of long priority in years and service.



Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, at the age of 45, when he was appointed Ambassador to England from Bavaria.

This mark of favoritism was the direct cause of the great blot on Thompson's name, from the American standpoint. When the Revolutionary War broke out and Wentworth, as Royal Governor, was compelled to flee, the officers whom Thompson had superseded denounced him as a Tory. A warning enabled him to flee in time, but a mob sacked his house and would have killed him had he tarried there. He went to Woburn, skulked about in hiding, applied for an officer's commission in the continental army and was thrown into jail as a suspect. An official inquiry acquitted him of blame, but the experience was bitter to one who never had a diffident opinion of his own worth.

Thereafter Thompson cast his lot with the British and against his native land. Making his escape to a British frigate, he was taken to Boston, then held by the English. In what manner he made the acquaintance of Gen. Howe is unknown, but when Gen. Washington compelled the evacuation of Boston, Thompson had won his way so far into the confidence of the British commander that he was sent to London with dispatches announcing the defeat.

He delivered the dispatches to Lord George Germain, head of the Colonial Office, and so fascinated the Minister at first sight that he immediately gave him a desk in his office and daily breakfasted, dined and supped with the youthful and entertaining American. Within a few months Thompson was appointed Secretary of the Province of Georgia, and four years later, at the age of 27, he became an under Secretary of State.

Several Boston Tories, exiles in London, have left on record their amazement and chagrin at being compelled to appeal for aid to the powerful favorite from whom, a few years before, they had bought drygoods. In addition, Thompson had been elected a Fellow of the Royal Society, because of his scientific researches into the effects of gunpowder and because, while on a cruise on a man of war in the channel, he devised a new system of signaling at sea which was adopted by the Admiralty. He was inspector of all the clothing sent to the army in America, and his perquisites, according to the reports of the day, netted him sums "beyond his most sanguine expectations."

Lord North's ministry fell and Lord George Germain lost office, but not before nominating his favorite as Lieutenant-Colonel, in command of a regiment of cavalry. Thompson sailed with his regiment to Long Island, towards the end of the war, and there carried on a guerilla warfare, during which his former countrymen accused him of many atrocities. Among other offenses, he was charged with razing churches to get stones for his fort, and with building an oven for his troops out of tombstones. It is pleasant to record that on his voyage to America he had a ship fitted up with cannon of his own design and busied himself experimenting with explosives.

At the end of the war Thompson was retired on half pay and obtained permission to make a tour of the Continent. One of his fellow passengers in the channel crossing was the famous historian, Gibbon, who notes in a letter to a friend that the three notables aboard were Gibbon himself, Henry Laurens, president of the American Congress, and "Mr. Secretary-Colonel-Admiral-Philosopher Thompson."

If Thompson's career so far was meteoric, it was now to rise to heights which in real life surpassed the exploits credited by George Barr McCutcheon to his American soldiers of fortune at imaginary foreign courts. At Strasburg, during a military review, the handsome figure of an officer in British uniform, sitting a horse with princely grace, attracted the attention of Count Maximilian de Deux Ponts, nephew of Elector Karl Theodor of Bavaria and later to be made by Napoleon the first King of Bavaria. The Count requested an introduction, and, like all others whom Thompson thought it worth his while to court, was instantly bewitched by the American's charming manners and unequalled wit.

When they separated, Thompson bore a flattering letter from Maxmilian to the Elector of Bavaria; and this ruler, in turn, at the first interview, succumbed to a most amazing infatuation for the stranger from Massachusetts. It is not too much to say that for 11 years the former shop clerk was the true ruler of Bavaria. The highest honors and offices were showered upon him in such multiplicity as to stagger and silence for a time the courtiers whom he supplanted.

But first he had to return to England and obtain permission to enter the Elector's service. King George not only granted his request, but created him a Knight, Sir Benjamin Thompson.

But this title was nothing compared to the distinctions awaiting him on his return to Bavaria. The Elector made him Commander in Chief of the army and Privy Counselor of State, Court Chamberlain and Chief of the General Staff. At the same time he was Minister of War and Minister of Police. The fascinated Elector later obtained for his adviser a patent of the Holy Roman Empire creating him Benjamin, Count of Rumford, the name being taken from the New Hampshire village which has now grown into the city of Concord.

Here, with the amplest of power, Count Rumford had a spacious stage on which to put into effect two of his strongest sentiments, both inherited from thrifty Yankee forebears—a passion for order and a horror of waste in any form. The reforms which he instituted are regarded as the earliest efforts at social efficiency, and as the forerunners of that state efficiency in every detail which is probably the most striking and admirable characteristic of modern Germany. In fact, according to Prof. Giddings, German "Kultur" of today, in many of

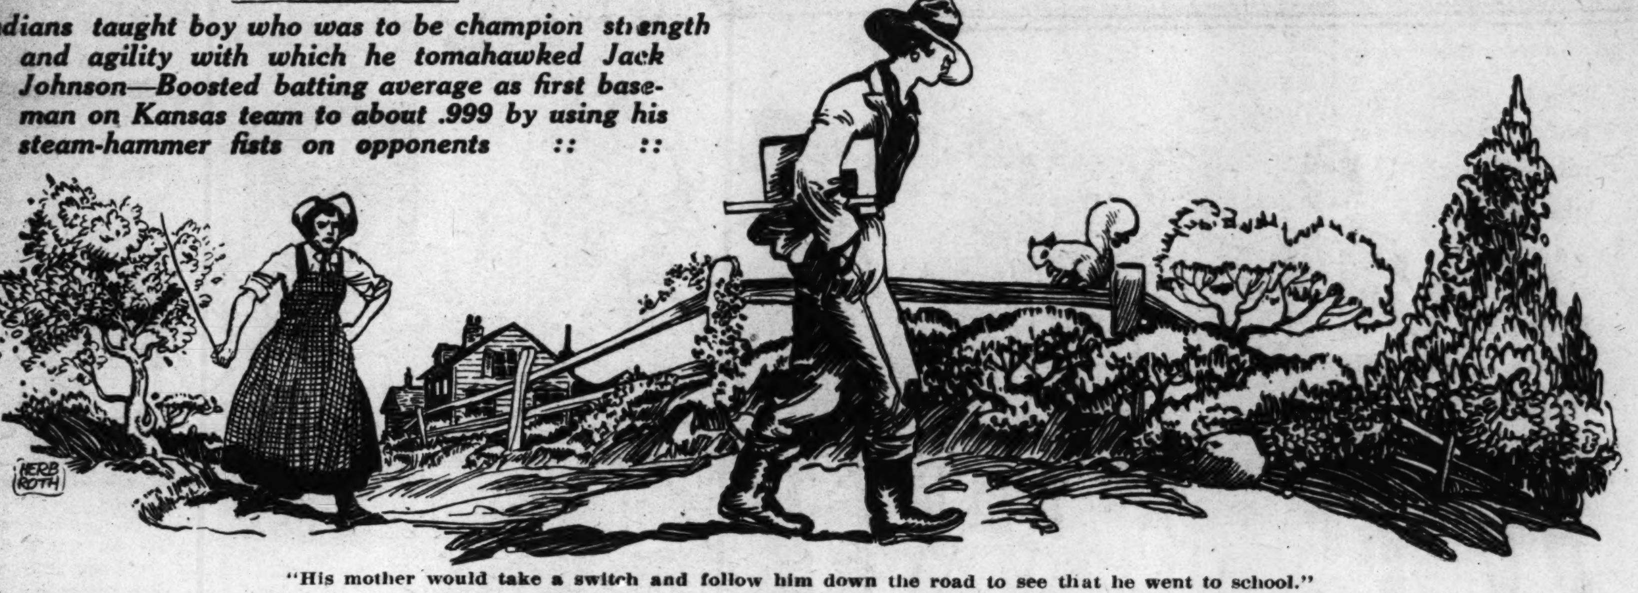
Untold Stories of Jess Willard's Youth

Indians taught boy who was to be champion strength and agility with which he tomahawked Jack Johnson—Boosted batting average as first baseman on Kansas team to about .999 by using his steam-hammer fists on opponents :: ::



"His mother would take a switch and follow him down the road to see that he went to school."

LIKE most men, Jess Willard, champion heavyweight boxer of the world, had a boyhood. We say like most men, because there are certain hard favored individuals with whom it is impossible to connect any thoughts of boyhood, who seem to have been born with their hands in their trousers pockets, a black cigar stuck at an angle in their mouths, and a well-defined working knowledge of the multiplication table in their heads.

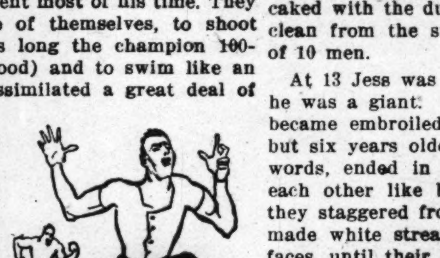
But Jess, from all accounts, was a real boy—an easy going, care-free, hookey-playing, scrapping, hard-fisted young animal, with unkempt hair and a broad, good-natured grin. He was always a husky youngster from the time he first crowed at the sight of a hearty meal until he attained his present proportions.

Before he was 16 he was a great, shock-haired hobbledehoy, staggering with strength and as active as a colt; his body always seemed about to burst through the seams of his clothes, and his clothes had perpetually a drawn, startled look, as if they were in a continual state of wonderment that they stayed on his body at all.

Willard was born in Emmett, Pottawotomie County, Kan., although, as with Homer, four or five other towns claim him.

His father died a few months before Jess was born. Jess divided his mother's care with three other brothers. Whether this lack of parental supervision had any bearing on Jess' later life it is hard to say; certain it is, however, he developed roaming proclivities very early in life, and it was no unusual sight of a sunny morning to see Jess, his hands stuck in his pockets and his hat tilted to one side of his head, sauntering calmly down the road, going nowhere in particular, when all the rest of the world was going to work or to school.

The Willard farm was near an Indian reservation, and among its denizens Willard spent most of his time. They taught him to ride like one of themselves, to shoot straight, to run fast (he was long the champion 100-yard runner of his neighborhood) and to swim like an amphibian. He must have assimilated a great deal of their craftiness, for he became as canny in a horse deal as David Harum. The upshot of his schooling by the Indians was that they themselves could not best him in a horse swap, and as a result they held him in greatest respect.



"He was long the champion 100-yard runner of the neighborhood."

From his association with the Indians he gained two things—health and agility—because of the open-air life he led with them.

But, like all abnormally big men and boys, he was as good-natured as a big dog, and, as the wiseacres who shook their heads at his vagaries put it, "was no one's enemy but his own." For all that, Jess was an exceptionally clean-living young fellow; he never drank and he never used tobacco; and the only thing people could ever say against him was that if he got a chance he'd "do" you in a horse deal. And yet that could hardly be considered immoral; for horse dealing is recognized as something outside the common law; and any man who swaps a horse, whether he be a Bishop or an out-and-out dealer, who does not get the upper hand of the other party to the transaction, if it be possible, is considered by all concerned to be an egregious jackass.

But whether as hookey player, freighter, cow puncher, horse breaker, ordinary "tambo" or prize fighter, Willard never took himself too seriously—nor anybody else. He was always on good terms with the world and everyone in it, and when anyone attempted to show him the error of his ways, he laughed it off with great good nature and continued to do just as he had always done—which is to say, he took things easy. The usual salutation he received when a neighbor found him airing himself at the sunny angle of a barn was, "Well, you big, lazy devil, when are you going to work and do something?" and the reply the neighbor invariably got was a bland smile from the big features of "Shorty," and a noncommital shrug from his Herculean shoulders. As his later life proved, however, Jess had a remarkable fund of determination and ambition when he wanted to use them; but in those days he kept them in a bag, and the bag was kept out of sight.

When Jess was 11 years of age his mother married a neighboring farmer named E. L. Stalker. Stalker had two boys and one girl. To this family Mrs. Stalker brought her four hulking sons. Although it is common enough for stepbrothers to fight, Jess Willard was always most considerate of his strength, and never tried to bully his weaker brethren. Not that they did not have occasional scraps. They did. But the peculiar part of these fights was that when Jess undertook to lick his two stepbrothers, his own brothers generally piled on against him, to even things up.

It was about this time that big Jess developed an abnormal fondness for the open air. He detested books and he detested the dead-alive hours between sleeping and waking in the classroom; and when he got out of the house in the morning—and he was always the last—his mother would take a switch and follow him down the road to see that he went to school. With his hands in his pockets, and his feet kicking up the white dust of the road, he would shuffle off in a high dudgeon, ever and anon looking doggedly over his shoulder at his determined parent. Between the Stalker house and the school was a belt of timber; and as sure as he reached it he disappeared; nor could his mother ever find him once he entered it. At the end of the day he would turn up again, a straw in his teeth, his face and hands caked with the dust of the day—or perhaps suspiciously clean from the swimming hole—and with the appetite of 10 men.

"At 16 he had his first real fight."

At 13 Jess was as big as an ordinary man, and at 16 he was a giant. At 16 he had his first real fight. He became embroiled with a husky individual of his size, but six years older, and the argument, which began in words, ended in downright blows. The two went at each other like bulls and hammered each other until they staggered from exhaustion, until the rills of sweat made white streaks through the caked grime on their faces, until their breath came in gasps. Jess made no impression on his antagonist and his antagonist made none on him. This disgusted the youngster. When he could again stand he put on his coat and exclaimed:

"I ain't goin' to fight all day!" And off he marched. The other belligerent offered no objections; he had all he could do to cool his puffed and bruised face.

In his later teens young Willard played first base for the ball team at Emmett, Kan., and when the outcome of the game had got beyond the playing stage, Jess usually covered the retreat of his comrades, or led the advance; for very often a team refused to accept defeat and set out to accomplish with their fists what they could not do with their bats. At one game (from which Jess was absent) the team at Maple Hill, Kan., gave the Emmett team a beating in two senses of the word. When Jess heard of it he bade his teammates wait until Maple Hill played the return game at Emmett. What he intended to do he kept to himself. When the Maple Hill team did come, with all the fighting men available, Big Jess stalked through the crowd, caught the Maple Hill manager by the scruff of the neck, lifted him bodily off the ground and set him before the manager of the Emmett team.

The Maple Hillite took one look at the gigantic first baseman and made a profuse apology. Willard then brought up a camp chair, set it in front of the hooting crowd of spectators, and threw the quaking manager into it.

"Now you sit there," he roared, "and don't move until I tell you to!"

And through the whole game the manager occupied that conspicuous stool of penance, the laughing stock of the crowd. There was no fighting that day.

All this Willard did without anger and without undue severity. The gentlemen from Maple Hill needed a lesson and Jess gave it to them, with the same deliberation and lack of hurry that he would go about any other piece of work. That will serve to illustrate his determination at that time.

Some time later, when Jess was selling Texas land for a living, he arrived in Topeka, Kan., tired out, and without a nickel in his pockets. Here he noticed a blue-uniformed individual parading up and down the main street, ogling the girls in the store windows and comporting himself with the air of a lord. This seemed to Jess to be his kind of a job. He sought out the Chief of Police and asked him if he wanted any cops. The Chief looked the young giant over and inquired if he lived in Topeka. Jess told him no, that he lived in Emmett.

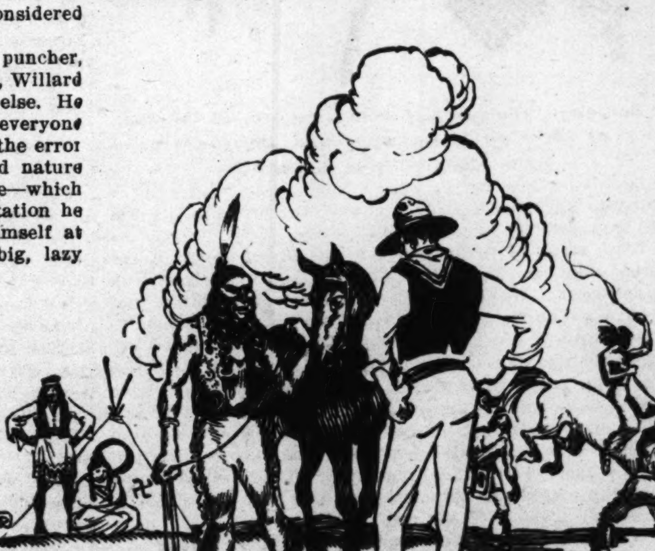
"Well," said the Chief, "you can't get a job here until you live six months in this town." And as Jess turned away in disgust, "We're all filled up, anyway," he added.

In December, 1910, Jess was breaking horses for a living and "doing" the unwary when he could trade with them. He went to Oklahoma City to buy clothes, and by mere accident fell in with W. T. Yoder of the Olympic Athletic Club. Impressed by his size, Yoder took him to the club and introduced him to boxing. The big fellow's action pleased Yoder, and he engaged him at $15 a week! Since then he has fought and starved and starved and fought, suffered ridicule and abuse—but stuck to his point like a man—and everybody knows what came of it.

"'Big Jess' stalked through the crowd and caught the Maple Hill manager by the scruff of the neck."

Among all the crop of "white hopes" he alone failed to wither, and at last he was matched at Havana with Jack Johnson, the cunning negro whose craft had kept him from sinking long after he had run upon the rocks of age. There were years, dissipation and conceit, supported by veteran generalship and strategy; and opposed to them were ignorance and clumsiness, upheld by youth, clean living and courage.

Youth was served, and the shrewd negro succumbed in the twenty-sixth round to the brawn and uncanny endurance of the former Kansas David Harum.



"From his association with the Indians he gained two things—health and agility."

United States Now Leads in Alcoholic Consumption

IN 1913 the total Russian revenue was 3,415,000,000 rubles, of which the vodka monopoly yielded 900,000,000 rubles and the State railways—the next highest source of revenue—yielded but 813,000,000 rubles.

Vodka is approximately 40 per cent alcohol, and it has been in this fact that the curse of vodka has been found. The Russians consumed annually far more alcohol than any other nation, before the vodka shops were abolished, although their drink bill in respect of beers and wines was moderate. Russia's consumption annually was approximately 240,000,000 gallons of alcohol, while the United States, whose alcohol consumption now leads the world, uses approximately 140,000,000 gallons. Russia's consumption of malt liquors is about 230,000,000 annual gallons, as against a consumption in the United States of about 2,000,000,000 gallons and a German consumption of about 1,700,000,000 gallons. The annual per capita consumption of vodka was about two gallons.

The monopoly which the Government relinquished was under the absolute control of the State on June 6, 1894, the monopoly being both as to production and sale. Only the most highly rectified, purified alcohol was permitted to be used. Vodka was sold in bottles only, and drinking was not supposed to be allowed in the vodka shops or on the streets.

St. Louis Woman World's Champion Movie Fan

In more than five years Mrs. Barbara Guentert has missed but two nights, sitting always in the same seat in the same Easton avenue theater—Has seen 9000 shadow dramas and nearly 10,000,000 feet of film—Invalid son her companion

MRS. BARBARA GUENTERT of 5707 Cote Brilliante avenue, has occupied the same seat in the same theater for 1800 nights, while 9000 moving picture plays, measuring 9,750,000 feet in length and containing 150,000,000 photographs have been flashed before her eyes. For every night of her life, with the exception of two, for more than five years, Mrs. Guentert has occupied the same seat in the same moving picture theater, and watched the magic shadows depict the tragedies and comedies of the films. She has seen the screen hero win the girl of his choice in the face of insurmountable difficulties; she has laughed at the antics of the slapstick comedian, and she has gazed in tense and pitying silence while score after score of bad men robbed persecuted and unsuspecting orphans of "the papers" times without number.

All the deeds of daring and high purpose, the trials and rewards of young love and romance that the fertile brains of the film author can patch together to make a moving picture play have delighted her eyes. She is familiar with all the changes that can be rung on the story of the little child that reunites the estranged parents; she has been in at the winning when thousands of noble young men, accused of crimes ranging anywhere from tapping the till to blowing up the Capitol at Washington, were fully vindicated and got their rights at last.

She has thrilled and waited with the lone bandit for the stage coach to swing around the bend and come to a quivering halt at the menace of his six-shooter—the stage coach that so often contain the Eastern schoolma'am that reformed the bandit and tamed him with the ties of love and domestic happiness.

She has ridden down the canyon with the Western girl as she galloped her buckskin pony after help for the brave young cowboy wounded in her defense, hotly pursued by Mustache Pete and his gang of villains. All possible versions of the burglar who came to rob and remained to act the part of nurse to the sick baby have been flashed on the screen for her benefit. There is no possible ending to the story of the spendthrift nephew who goes to his uncle's study to beg for money to pay his gambling debts and finds the old man dead, and is surprised by the faithful family servant with the smoking gun in his hand, that she does not know about.

This champion moving picture fan became a devotee of the art through her son, "Buster," 9 years old, who has always been too frail and delicate to take part in the ordinary activities of childhood. To compensate the boy for the loss of association with other children the mother made herself the child's companion, and devotes her life to the little invalid.

When the boy arrived at school age, Mrs. Guentert was not willing to subject him to the rough and tumble life of a school boy, and she began to cast about for something that would help amuse, and at the same time educate him. One night the mother and child visited a moving picture show in the neighborhood, and the problem was solved. The boy was delighted with the pictures. The magic shadows on the screen were like a peep into fairlyland, and that was the beginning of the daily visits that have extended over an almost unbroken period for more than five years.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with the nightly visit to the picture show. When the weather is bad the boy puts on his uniform, as he calls his long coat and cap, and mother and child set out for the hour that means so much to both of them, for the mother has learned to love the pictures as much as the child.

These premier film fans always attend the same theater, and have occupied the same seats, which are religiously reserved for them by August Roettger, manager of the Fairy Theater, on Easton avenue.

The boy likes the Western plays and revels in the wild rides of the cowboys and Indians, and the gun-play of the bad men of the screen.

The mother prefers the dramas and heart-interest plays, and both of them are very fond of the scenics and educationals, as the travel pictures and scenes in foreign lands are called in moving picturedom.

Mrs. Guentert was asked to name her favorite film actors and actresses. She assumed a thoughtful expression and finally said:

"Well, I would have to think about that and let you know. Of course, we like Charley Chaplin and we think Francis Bushman is fine."

Among the women who are seen on the screen she thinks Pearl White and Mary Pickford are among the best, but she refuses to say that any one actor or actress is the best of all.

Mrs. Guentert's husband does not care for the movies, but he agrees with his wife as to their educational value and is anxious for the boy and his mother to attend the show each night.

"I am contented at home until evening comes," said Mrs. Guentert, "but then I cannot rest until time to go and see the pictures." Then she told of her hearty laugh, with which every patron of the theater is familiar, and expressed the fear that some night she would be put out of the show. But there is no danger of that, for her laugh is not the kind that disturbs other patrons.

Mrs. Guentert is a little past middle age, and while she has to wear glasses when doing embroidery or other fine work, she has almost perfect eyesight, and declares that the thousands of moving pictures she has seen have not impaired her vision in the least, and she has never been conscious of eye strain or optical trouble.

The viewing of so many films has made this woman a keen critic, and her opinions of moving pictures would be invaluable to the manufacturers of films if they could hear her criticisms. Mrs. Guentert says she considers the art of motion pictures one of the most potent factors of our daily life, and she is sure photoplays exert a wonderful influence for good on the young people of the city. She advises parents to get their children interested in the movies.

"It will educate them and keep them off the streets," she says, "and they will get a better knowledge of the world than they could ever get unless they could enjoy a tour of European travel."

Mrs. Geuntert keeps exceedingly well posted on who is in the movie world. There are few actresses or actors who appear frequently on the screen even in minor parts, that she cannot call by name.

She expressed regret that John Bunny had left the movies and probably no picture fan felt a keener interest in his condition than she when she read in the papers a short time ago that he was critically ill.

"The moving picture shows are so inexpensive," said Mrs. Guentert, "that I think every person should take advantage of the educational opportunities they offer."

German Efficiency Overrated, Says Dr. Eliot

BELIEF in the overwhelming superiority of German efficiency is merely a superstition, according to Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University. He expresses this view with characteristic vigor in a book just published, "The Road Toward Peace" (Houghton Mifflin Co.).

"German efficiency has been an object of great admiration not only in this country," he tells the American reader, "but in England, France and Russia for twenty-five or thirty years. We have all admired it in the recent commercial and industrial development of Germany; not less remarkable because it started about sixty years ago from a low level. We have admired it, too, in the efficiency of her military and naval development. It is an extraordinary phenomenon in the history of the nineteenth century, this wonderful efficiency; but German efficiency is of a peculiar type.

"The German way of procuring industrial and commercial efficiency is to make each individual man in the first place a man well trained for the exact service he is to render and then to keep him under a severe discipline which will result in his doing every time exactly what he has been trained to do."

Dr. Eliot cites seven nations conspicuously illustrating today the worth of liberty in national development—Great Britain and her affiliated commonwealths, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United States; he also refers to the Scandinavian peoples. The efficiency of all these peoples he declares to be based on a high degree of personal initiative and of political and industrial freedom—not on the subjection of implicit obedience of the individual, but on the energy and good will in work which result from individual freedom, ambition and initiative.

"If this doctrine is correct," he continues, "the remarkable increase of industrial and commercial efficiency during the past 150 years should have proceeded from the freer nations and not from the nations governed autocratically.

"Going back to the latter part of the eighteenth century we find that propulsion by steam on land and water was first made commercially successful by Englishmen and Americans and that English and French chemists made the fundamental discoveries in chemical theory. In the early part of the nineteenth century the development of the factory system with steam driven machinery was an English achievement and later an American. Coming on in the nineteenth century, it was Americans who developed the telegraph and telephone as industrial implements and thereby changed in a large measure the habits of industrial, commercial and financial life, and in many respects of domestic and family life also."

Dr. Eliot proceeds to show a long list of inventions and discoveries in science and medicine, none of which was originated by the Germans. Among these he cites wireless telegraphy, electric lighting, the aeroplane, the cotton gin, anesthesia, asepsis, the rubber and oil industries and many others in which Germany has been merely a follower in the steps of other nations.

"The plain fact," he asserts, "is that the German system of education and government has not had freedom enough in it, and that the free peoples, among whom there exists a large amount of social and industrial mobility, are the peoples that have produced all the great science inventions of the last two centuries and this."

THE TURBULENT DUCHESS . . .

A Tale of Romance and Adventure

By Percy J. Brebner

SYNOPSIS.

SANDRA OF PODINA is known all over Europe as "the turbulent Duchess," because of her "devil's own temper." Her country is coveted by the Elector of Brandenburg, who is building up his duchy into the Kingdom of Prussia. Her court fool has died, and she chooses as his successor the younger of a pair of vagabonds, who recommends himself by his gallantry and wit. He takes the name of Bergolet. He learns that the marriage of the Duchess has become an affair of statecraft, and that a dozen Princes are suitors for her hand. Of these the favorite seems to be her cousin, Karl, and the least favored is the "black sheep," Maurice of Bavaria. A mysterious woman, in the guise of a fortune teller, holds an interview with Bergolet, in the midst of which soldiers arrive to arrest him on Prince Karl's order. They escape through a secret passage into the Burgomaster's house.

CHAPTER V.

Wherein the Fool Learns Villainy.

AS Berloget blew out the candles the woman touched his arm.

"There is no trap of my setting, Master Jester," she whispered. "That knocking at the door is unexpected, but it alters nothing; it only serves to hurry us a little. This room has a secret. I came upon it by chance, and in any case I should have had the lights out to prevent your learning it. Give me your hand."

She piloted him across the dark room, somewhere behind the screen he thought, for he lost the faint glimmer which came from the window.

"I shall help you to serve the Duchess," she said, stopping suddenly, "but in return I must have a promise from you."

"The fool is to pay without knowing what he buys."

"The fool should be thankful that he has found a woman to trust him," she returned.

"What must I promise?"

"You shall not betray anyone you may chance to see tonight, nor tell the true story of how you came to hear the plot. You will swear to this?"

"That is easy."

"How deep your honor goes I cannot tell, but every man holds something sacred, even if it be only his own self. You shall swear to me by what you hold most sacred."

"You have me in a cleft stick. I take the oath, for I think the soldiers are already in the house."

"And for all the harm they can do they might as well be snoring in their beds," was the answer.

There was a sound in the darkness as though for a moment a rat gnawed behind the skirting.

"There is woodwork a foot high to step over," she whispered. "Do not stumble. Now wait. Now step once more, a foot high again. So we escape the enemy."

Four times there was the momentary gnawing sound, the opening and shutting of two panels, and then she guided him across another dark space.

"Tell me, Bergolet, was it a woman you swore by?"

"Was it part of the bargain that I should confess?"

She laughed softly, and warning him to be silent, she quietly opened a door.

They came out upon a gallery at the head of a staircase. Above them was a painted ceiling dark with age, and suspended from it by a chain a great lamp hung low, lighting the hall beneath them. In gallery and hall stood carved chairs and presses; the walls were painted, here a battle scene, there some civic ceremony; over the balustrade hung a richly woven piece of tapestry, and rugs fashioned in the East lent warmth to the stone floor of the hall.

"The Burgomaster's!" whispered Bergolet.

"My uncle, and I would not betray him. That is why you have taken an oath."

A door opened sharply, there was a murmur of voices for a moment, then the door closed again, and heavy steps were in the hall below.

"My cloak, my hat!" said a voice heavy with good living. "Are you all asleep, or is my service so easy that you grow lazy?"

Quick feet hurried to do his bidding. One man brought his hat, another his cloak, as he stood breathing audibly beneath the hanging lamp, a fat man as full of his own importance as a tun is of wine; his legs were widely bowed under the weight, and his head was so insignificant a part of him that one marvelled there was brain enough to insure sufficient ability to nurture so large a carcass.

"My stick! Dolts, where's my stick? Would you have me walk the street without it? It is true that, thanks to me, Metzburg is a paradise to what it was, but even now the streets are none too safe at night."

"It was a fortunate day for the city when you became Burgomaster," said the sycophant who handed him his stick, but his tongue was in his cheek the moment his master's back was turned.

"There are visitors yonder," said the Burgomaster, pausing at the open door and nodding in the direction of the room he had left. "Others may come. They will wait for me, for my advice upon an important matter. Remember whose servants you are and attend them fittingly."

With a flourish of his stick the Burgomaster departed, and Bergolet smiled as he remembered how this same fat mass of importance groveled whenever duty brought him into the presence of the Duchess.

"I congratulate you, Fraulein, that I can discover no likeness between you and your uncle." he whispered to the woman beside him.

"The years may mend that, and if you mean a compliment this is no time for it. Come quickly and tread lightly. Chance may yet do us an ill turn."

She led him along the gallery, down one narrow flight of steps and up another, and by narrow passages which had an echo of emptiness in them, then through a room to an inner closet.

"Kneel here," she said, pulling him down by the wall. "There is a little shutter—I will open it directly. You will see nothing, but you will hear. Just below us is an inner room of a tavern in the Holtstrasse—the tavern of the Rising Sun. It has known the hatching of many a plot in Metzburg, I am told; how often there have been listeners here I cannot say."

The drawing back of the shutter revealed a glimmer of light, but nothing more. Sight was blocked by some projecting cornice in the room beyond, but sound was distinct. For a time there was only the clatter of flagons and the rough jesting of men met to drink away an evening, but presently a man spoke and the other voices were hushed.

"Tonight we touch the money, comrades, and this is an affair we agree to keep to ourselves."

"It is, Captain."

"We have friends yonder and hold with them in most matters, to the death if need be, but this is an especial affair, naught to do with law-breaking. For once we are in the employ of the state."

A laugh and an oath or two answered this statement.

"One or two of you will have it that we're too few for the business. Long Joachim there thinks so."

"Caution, Captain, just that."

"There's no risk. We attack men who are there to be beaten, paid to be beaten just as we are paid to win. When I bargained to do the business for a certain sum, I thought of choosing only six to help me—the fewer in it the fewer to share. I was told six would look too much like trickery, so we are a dozen."

"Supposing we are tricked?" queried Joachim. "There's plenty will lie when they've got the law on their side."

"There would be big men in Metzburg to pay for any trickery," answered the Captain, "very big men, comrades. We're upon their business, and by paying us they put themselves in our hands."

"Maybe, but we're dealing with a woman," Joachim returned, "and one who's not like other women. The devil's in her by all I've heard, and that's the kind men get fools over. A man may be all for her destruction until the moment comes, then she smiles on him, or gives him a honeyed word, and he'll shed his last drop of blood in her defense. That's what we've got to allow for."

"Show me the money and Venus might smile till she was sick without my seeing her," said the Captain.

"Not long since there was a woman stopped in the forest yonder," Joachim went on. "Some of you will have heard of it and know the two who stopped her. They are not the most gentle to deal with, and their luck had been of the devil's planning for days past; they hadn't a coin between them, and their stomachs were as empty as this flagon. What happened? Because she was beautiful and smiled upon them they let her pass with all her gear, and stood thanking her, caps in hand, when she threw them a crown."

"A good tale enough whether it's true or not," said the Captain, "but there's no robbing in our business. Here's the pith of it. Her Grace goes hunting. We care not who rules in Metzburg, nor who he may be who shall call the Duchess wife, but there are powerful men here who see great importance in such matters. They plan to bring the Duchess to reason. It is a simple matter."

"To bring a woman to reason?" asked one.

"In this way, yes. She is captured in the forest and held prisoner. There she must come to terms with the men who are powerful in Metzburg. She will have to rule as they wish, marry as they dictate, or some one else will be found to rule over Podina."

"I thought Prince Karl was to hunt with her," said one man.

"He does. We capture him, too."

"Rumor has it that he is to marry the Duchess," said Joachim.

"That's no affair of ours," the Captain returned. "He is to be captured; the rest of the company will run after a show of fighting."

"I've no liking for Karl," said Joachim, "but there is no denying he handles a good sword."

"In this business there is not likely to be much heart behind it," was the reply.

"For all that he may give us trouble when it comes to defending the Duchess," Joachim persisted. "And who are these great men? I like to know my paymasters."

There was a murmer of assent.

"Why, what ails you, Long Joachim?" cried the leader angrily. "Is your courage suffering from a touch of fever? When there's good money to be had for the picking up, would you have us cackling of fears like a parcel of scared women?"

An angry oath and the shuffle of impatient feet seemed to pressage a quarrel, when there fell a sudden silence. A door opened and closed, and a fat voice gave a greeting.

"Your uncle," whispered Bergolet.

"Your oath," the woman returned.

"A chair for the Burgomaster," said the Captain. "Here's one of the big men I spoke of, Long Joachim."

"And a flagon of wine for the Burgomaster, though it be but tavern stuff," said another.

It was apparent that a chair received the weight of the newcomer.

"Aye, I'm more likely to trust a man after I've drunk with him," said Joachim.

"I've known worse wine than this," said the Burgomaster, "but I have better guarantee for your trust than any tavern cellar can give. Listen to the music in this bag—good money, which you may come by far easier than most men earn it. Here is half the sum agreed upon, the other I hold until the work is finished. That was the bargain, I think?"

"It was. A fair bargain," came the answer in chorus.

"Tell me the plan then, so that I may be assured you understand before I hand over the money."

"I take it that the men who will be of the hunt tomorrow will only make a pretence of fighting," said the Captain.

"They have been carefully chosen and well paid," the Burgomaster answered.

"And the hunt will be towards Festenhausen?"

"That is so," said the Burgomaster. "Prince Karl has his house at Festenhausen, and it is arranged that the Duchess shall spend the night there."

"The rest is easy, and the Duchess will spend the night elsewhere," said the Captain. "Towards Festenhausen there is a ravine, deep and well-wooded, which has a good name with huntsmen. A blank day may finish there with excellent sport. A green track dips into the ravine at a spot which the woodmen call 'Gallows Oak'—maybe the law hanged one of us there, Burgomaster, at some time. A man is ill fruit for any tree, but the name has stuck. Along that dip there's hiding room for an army, and that's where we shall be tomorrow, a dozen of us, but with shouting enough for three score."

"It seems a good plan."

"It cannot fail," was the answer. "There'll be a pretty struggle, then our enemies flee, leaving the Duchess and Prince Karl in our hands. We shall find a safe place for them and bring you word."

"And receive the other half of the reward," said the Burgomaster.

"I shall not forget it," laughed the Captain.

"Would a thrust in earnest matter in Prince Karl's case?" asked Joachim.

"Matter!" cried the Burgomaster. "Have I not made it clear that this is a ruse to get the Duchess and the Prince into our hands? It is an affair of State. There must be no thrusts in earnest, a scratch or so amongst yourselves to give a look of truth to the fight if you will, but nothing more."

"And afterwards, Burgomaster?"

"Another bag of gold like this," was the answer, "and your work will be ended. The afterwards is for wiser heads than yours, for mine and for those with me in this matter. If we think a woman's whims dangerous to the State, if we choose to dictate how she should rule, and whom she shall marry, that is not for you to know. There is a bargain between us, a beginning and an end to it."

"What is it to us what happens afterwards?" said one man.

"Much, if it should presently be thought wise to silence us lest we should talk," Joachim returned.

"You have my word that with the completion of the bargain it will be forgotten."

"And those who are with you, Burgomaster? We know nothing of them."

"This is a strange fellow to have brought into the enterprise, Captain," said the Burgomaster.

"It's Long Joachim's way to ask questions," was the answer. "When his time comes he'll argue with death."

"I speak for all who are with me in this business," said the Burgomaster. "Nothing shall be remembered against any one of you."

"That's a seal to the bargain," said one contentedly.

"I'll give it a further seal. If chance should bring one of you to trouble presently, I'll so read the law as to find some circumstance which shall let him go free."

A rattle of flagons and noisy approval greeted this promise.

"It grows late," said the Burgomaster, "and the hunting party starts early. You have passes which shall see you through the gates tonight. There is the money. I have another bag of the same weight ready when you have earned it. Good night, and good fortune."

Still Bergolet listened, but there was nothing but the noise of departure and the paying of the score. The woman closed the shutter.

"Come. It is time you were out of the house," she said.

"Your uncle tells little."

"Enough surely. The hunt must not reach that ravine. Bergolet. You must see to that, and there are not many hours before the dawn."

"The Burgomaster has visitors and expects others. Shall we see who these visitors may be?"

"For what purpose? Your oath covers all those you may see in this house tonight."

"It is a pity. Your uncle is a great villain, but no doubt he will come to a bad end without any assistance. It puzzles me how you come to be connected with such a person."

"This is the time to act, Master Jester, not to wonder," she said as she led him back along the passages, but not by the way they had come. "I care not what story you tell. The result must be sure, though you may not betray me or my uncle. I have an end to serve which does not concern you, and you are the only man in Metzburg who can help the Duchess tonight. We work together, each for our own end. Here is a door into a side street. Good night. Would you kiss the fortune teller as once you kissed her when she was a merchant's daughter in Lorraine?"

He hesitated, then drew back.

"It was light then and I could see into your eyes. I never loved a kiss in the dark."

"You may claim it some high noon if you will, Master Fool," and opening the door she gently pushed him out.

Once in the street, with the door locked behind him, Bergolet's first thought was to marvel that he had not accepted the proffered kiss. Never had he seemed so much a stranger to himself. A kiss was pleasant and meant little; a score of pretty lips had met his willingly enough, if with a show of resistance for form's sake, but tonight—tonight there was more in a kiss than he had imagined. He was at enmity with the man whom the fortune teller had seen in the crystal, a mean and contemptible fellow whose idea of women was an outrage. They were all alike to him, city bred or wench of the country, merchant's daughter or—no, there had come a break. Clouds had gathered in the crystal, but dimly seen there had been a Princess. What was she to the man who kissed so lightly and so easily went his way?

"Enough to make him refuse a kiss offered by a pretty woman," Bergolet murmured, "a kiss in the dark, too, when nobody could be a whit the wiser."

He had not moved from the door, now he looked to right and left, wondering which way to take. A breeze ruffled the quiet of the night, and stars hung low in a sky which had a texture like velvet. He went to the right, still thinking of the man in the crystal.

"There are a thousand ways of sinning," he said to himself, "and I'm no worthy judge. The Burgomaster is not the only villain in the city. The moon would cast the shadow of one at my feet, only it is a crescent moon with little light in it, and moreover has set."

Metzburg was asleep. Tread as lightly as he would, his steps seemed to break the silence almost roughly. He went slowly, feeling his way, for in this narrow street it was dark. Besides, he had not determined how to act. He could not go to the Duchess tonight, tomorrow it might be too late. She might laugh at him for a fool. Perhaps already he had done something to make her angry, and it was in search of him that the soldiers had come to the saddler's. He stood for a moment to listen, fully alive now to his danger. He was not sure of his direction. The street was full of shadows and dark corners, villainy might be as wakeful here as in the Burgomaster's house, or in that inner room of the Rising Sun. With a sudden decision he quickened his pace. He could not see the Duchess tonight, he would tell the plot to Prince Karl. Even if Her Grace would not abandon the hunt, and laughed at danger as was her custom, the Prince would see to it that the men in the hunting party were changed for others who could be relied on. The ravine towards Festenhausen would be avoided, or the robbers lying in wait there would meet with a reception they did not bargain for. If the Duchess had ordered his arrest and he were put under lock and key, it would not matter so long as she was warned in time.

Bergolet had reached the end of the street and seen against the night sky a familiar spire which showed him in which direction he must go, when an unsteady figure reeled towards him from a dark doorway. He was a soldier, but fortunately was hopelessly drunk.

"A woman, and alone," he gurgled as he lurched forwards. "I'm in luck."

Content that the ample cloak should deceive the man, Bergolet had stepped aside as a preliminary to seeking safety in flight, when the drunkard fell forward and caught his arm in a firm grip to steady himself.

"If you will come abroad in the night, my pretty, there's toll to be paid."

The jester drew back his arm to strike, but it was caught behind him. The drunkard laughed and his grip tightened as Bergolet fiercely struggled to free himself.

"A toll to pay, my pretty fool."

There was a snigger of laughter with the words. For an instant Bergolet wrenched himself free, then all sound, sight and feeling ceased, and he was suddenly pitched forward into space and utter blackness. There was a sense of falling, then came oblivion.

For a few moments the street echoed with the sound of footsteps, a door closed heavily, then there was silence again.

CHAPTER VI.

The Marquis de Vannes.

AS Captain of the Guard Prince Karl had quarters in the castle. On leaving the Duchess' garden that night, his mind more occupied with the jester who had mocked at him than with the woman whose hand he had kissed, the sound of quickly following footsteps made him stop. An intriguer himself, none too particular in his methods, he put no great faith in his fellows, no matter how great their professions of friendship, and he heard something stealthy in the footsteps behind him.

"Monsieur le Marquis!" he exclaimed as the Frenchman joined him.

"What remains of me," was the answer. "For my sins I have been forced to spend a great part of the evening in Baron Kevenfelt's company. It is not a lively way of passing the time. I pray you have compassion on me and let me enjoy your society for a little while."

"I regret, but my day's work is not yet over, I"——

"Your Highness, I will be frank with you. I have something to say which concerns you rather closely. Indeed, it is too private a matter to whisper until I am certain of security."

For a moment Karl hesitated, but such a statement was not to be ignored. In the maze wherein he walked he could not afford to turn away from any man who had a secret to impart.

"It must perforce be a short interview, Marquis, but believe me I sympathize with you. I always find the Baron most weary company."

"And after Paris and Versailles!" exclaimed De Vannes. "Your Duchess is charming, but—will you think me lacking in all gallantry if I say I am an exile and long for home?"

"Will your mission take so long to accomplish that your exile need trouble you?" asked the Prince.

"I cannot tell. I shall know better after we have talked a little; but not here, Prince. I do assure you it is not safe."

The Marquis did not appear to feel himself secure until they were within four walls and the door closed.

"You spoke of my mission, Prince. You have guessed my reason for being in Metzburg?"

"I guessed, but it was beside the mark. I thought, Monsieur, you aspired to the hand of my cousin."

"Indeed, Prince, your thought did me too much honor. I came on business from my master King Louis."

"I heard the truth only tonight from the Duchess," Karl said with a smile.

"So naturally think my exile need be of no long duration. The Duchess was diplomatic. She can evade a direct answer and conceal her designs as cleverly as King Louis himself. She is a woman after his own heart, and I hope they may meet somewhere to enjoy each other's wit. I have been brought up in the midst of subtle diplomacy, Your Highness, and I am sure that whoever the Duchess may honor with her hand, he is not likely to be a Frenchman, and certainly not one of my master's choosing."

"I congratulate you on your clear sightedness, Marquis."

"As a fact, Your Highness, my mission was rather to you than to the Duchess."

"To me?"

"Under certain conditions, if I found that such conditions existed," De Vannes answered. "You permit me to be precise?"

Karl gave the permission with an inclination of his head.

"I should be blind, Your Highness, did I not see that the Duchess' choice has already been made, did I not understand that you are to be her husband. You have intimated that I may be quite definite. There will be many who will not be pleased with the Duchess' choice. Dreary companion as he is, Baron Kevenfelt has moments when he is extremely lucid, and in this matter he is your enemy. Doubtless he has a strong following in the State, and therefore Your Highness is almost compelled to look for support to many persons personally distasteful to you, but necessary to you under the circumstances. It is an everyday situation in diplomacy."

"At present, Marquis, you have given me no new information."

"Further, there is your cousin herself," De Vannes went on. "Love will hardly make her forget that she is ruler in Podina. A weak man would inevitably be of small importance as her consort, and even for a strong man, like Your Highness, the position must have difficulties."

"I fully appreciate them," Karl answered.

"I do not suggest your inability to deal with the situation, but for a moment let me emphasize the difficulties. The Duchess, just because she is the Duchess, must often be in opposition to your wishes, and there will be powerful support behind her wholly bent on frustrating you. The support behind you must be largely composed by those who look to you for favors; and if you are not able to give those favors their loyalty is likely to become lukewarm."

"I appreciate all these difficulties, Marquis, and I have taken some precaution against them."

"Indeed, Your Highness, I am sure of that. I had not had the honor of your acquaintance many hours before I knew what manner of man Podina had to deal with. It is your strength and ambition which make you so many enemies. One does not trouble to hate a weak man, we give him contemptuous pity. Still, the strongest man is only secure when he has staunch friends he can depend on, or one friend powerful enough to make him independent of sycophants and time servers. Louis of France would be that friend. This is my true mission to Podina."

De Vannes leaned forward, sinking his voice as though such a secret could only be whispered even within four walls and the door fast shut.

"Is it necessary to speak in detail of the advantages of such a friendship? There would be a force behind you which nothing in Podina could or dare attempt to stand against; and I think a strong man might rule even the Duchess—his wife."

"And the price to be paid for this friendship, Monsieur le Marquis?"

De Vannes laughed.

"I love a man who comes to the point so directly. Prince, do you love the Elector of Brandenburg?"

"I hate him."

"So does Louis of France, the more perhaps because there was once friendship between them. Hatred is always bitterest then. He is the one man in Europe at this moment who may thwart my master. He is hastening south to hurl his force against Turenne in Alsace. On his way he visits Podina. Without the Elector in its midst his army will hardly take the field. He might be delayed in Metzburg. He might be prevailed upon to go no further. Some accident might happen which would compel him to return to Berlin. With your hatred to help him, and the fact that he must have many enemies in this city, it should not be difficult to contrive some accident."

"That is King Louis' price," said Karl.

"Can such a bagatelle be considered a price?" the Marquis returned. "On his side, my master will promise that the State of Podina shall ever remain separate and free no matter what other territory it may please my master to bring under the French crown."

"You tempt me, Monsieur le Marquis. I see now why your exile from Paris and Versailles cannot be of such a short duration as I imagined. I would in my turn be frank with you. My precautions for the future are more far reaching than you suspect, and the position of the Duchess is not so strong perhaps as you imagine. Still, I hate the Elector and an accident would please me greatly. We must talk again. For the moment I will say no more than this; by some means I shall endeavor to win the friendship of Louis of France."

The Prince rose to end the conversation, and as the Marquis took leave of him at the door a trooper came to a halt and waited. It was evident that he had come in haste, but Karl did not speak to him until De Vannes was out of hearing.

"What is it?"

"Your Highness, Capt. Weber has sent me for your instructions. A fellow who haunts the market—drunken Peter they call him—has come with a tale that the jester Bergolet has gone in secret to a saddler's shop in the market tonight. Peter says he had your orders to report anything of this kind."

"And Capt. Weber did not believe him," laughed Karl. "For once drunken Peter must be on the edge of sobriety for he has told the truth. Get back quickly and bid Capt. Weber go to the saddler's and arrest Bergolet in the Duchess' name. Take him, without violence, if possible, but take him. Do you understand?"

The man saluted and disappeared as hastily as he had come.

"$10,000-a-Year" American Women

AN earning capacity of $10,000 or more a year is infrequent among masses of men, so that it is notable how many American women, by their own talents and industry, are wresting from the world incomes of this figure or greater. And the list need not include capitalists like Mrs. Hetty Green or actresses like Mary Pickford, whose large incomes are quite well known to the public.

One of the best known magazine and book illustrators of the day, the popularity of whose work presses hard upon that of men in the same field, is Mrs. May Wilson Preston. With her crayons she is believed to earn more than $10,000 a year. She is now 42 years old, and is the wife of James Moore Preston of New York. She was educated at Oberlin College and studied art at the Whistler School in Paris. She began work as an illustrator 13 years ago, and her charming drawings have aided many magazine stories to success.

Two women sculptors in America are classed in the list of $10,000 breadwinners. They are Miss Janet Scudder, who was born in Terre Haute Ind., and Miss Mary Evelyn Beatrice Longman of New York. Miss Scudder attended the Chicago Art Institute and MacMonnies' studio in Paris. Examples of her art are in the Paris Salon and the Metropolitan Museum in New York. She won prize medals at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis and at the Chicago Exposition. She resides at Ville d'Avray, France.

Miss Longman was born in Winchester, O., studied at the Chicago Art Institute, where she was graduated with honors, and was for several years assistant in the studio of Daniel Chester French, the famous sculptor. She won a silver medal at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

Among women writers who have achieved the $10,000 mark are said to be Mrs. Inez Haynes Gillmore, Miss Edna Ferber, Miss Margaret Mayo, Mrs. Louise Closser Hale, Miss Fannie Hurst, Princess Amelie Troubetzkoy, and Mrs. George Christopher Riggs, better known as Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine will remember a recent article by Mrs. Gillmore, in which she thrillingly described what she saw at a prizefight, which did not shock her in the least. This was unexpected, as she is the author of novels with such sentimental titles as "Phoebe, Ernest and Cupid," "June Jeopardy" and "Angel Island."

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, as her pen name is, holds high rank among American authors. She was born in 1859 in Philadelphia and educated in Massachusetts schools and at Bowdoin College. She organized the first free kindergartens for poor children on the Pacific coast, and in collaboration with her sister, Miss Nora A. Smith, has written a number of books on kindergarten work. She is best known, however, through her fiction writings, many of them stories for children. She is the wife of George Christopher Riggs.

Miss Hurst, formerly of St. Louis, has rapidly won her way to a place among the best paid writers of short stories She is said to have received $10,000 for one Christmas story, published in a Philadelphia weekly. Miss Edna Ferber also made a swift success, leading to fame and high space rates, with her "Roast Beef Medium" stories. Miss Mayo is a playwright, author of the successful comedies, "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds."

One of the most successful women lawyers in the country is Miss Bertha Rembaugh of New York. She was educated at Bryn Mawr and at the New York University Law School, and has practiced law in New York City since 1906. She made a specialty of medical jurisprudence.

Miss Belle da Costa Green is believed to receive at least $10,000 a year for her services as chief librarian of the great J. P. Morgan collection of priceless manuscripts and rare editions in New York. An equal earning capacity is credited to Mrs. Katherine Giles, a cotton broker in New York, and to Miss Josephine Wright Chapman, a New York architect.

THE HIGHER ABDICATION

By O. HENRY

CURLY, the tramp, sidled toward the free lunch counter. He caught a fleeting glance from the bartender's eye, and stood still, trying to look like a business man who had just dined at the Menger and was waiting for a friend who had promised to pick him up in his motor car. Curly's histrionic powers were equal to the impression; but his makeup was wanting.

The bartender rounded the bar in a casual way, looking up at the ceiling as though he was pondering some intricate problem of kalsomining, and then fell upon Curley so suddenly that the roadster had no excuses ready. Irresistibly, but so composedly that it seemed almost absentmindedness on his part, the dispenser of drinks pushed Curly to the swinging doors and kicked him out, with a nonchalance that almost amounted to sadness. That was the way of the Southwest.

Curly arose from the gutter leisurely. He felt no anger or resentment toward his ejector. Fifteen years of tramphood spent out of the 21 years of his life had hardened the fibers of his spirit. The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune fell blunted from the buckle of his armored pride. With especial resignation did he suffer contumely and injury at the hands of bartenders. Naturally, they were his enemies; and unnaturally they were often his friends. He had to take his chances with them. But he had not yet learned to estimate these cool, languid, Southwestern knights of the bungstarter, who had the manners of an Earl of Pawtucket, and who, when they disapproved of your presence, moved you with the silence and dispatch of a chess automaton advancing a pawn.

Curly stood for a few moments in the narrow, mesquit-paved street. San Antonio puzzled and disturbed him. Three days he had been a non-paying guest of the town, having dropped off there from a box car of an I. and G. N. freight because Greaser Johnny had told him in Des Moines that the Alamo City was manna fallen, gathered, cooked and served free with cream and sugar. Curly has found the tip partly a good one. There was hospitality in plenty of a careless, liberal, irregular sort. But the town itself was a weight upon his spirits after his experience with the rushing businesslike systematized cities of the North and East. Here he was often flung a dollar, but too frequently a good-natured kick would follow it. Once a band of hilarious cowboys had roped him on Military Plaza and dragged him across the black soil until no respectable ragbag would have stood sponsor for his clothes. The winding, doubling streets, leading nowhere, bewildered him. And then there was a little river, crooked as a pot hook, that crawled through the middle of the town, crossed by a hundred little bridges so nearly alike that they got on Curly's nerves. And the last bartender wore a No. 9 shoe.

The saloon stood on a corner. The hour was 8 o'clock. Homefarers and outgoers jostled Curly on the narrow stone sidewalk. Between the buildings to his left he looked down a cleft that proclaimed itself another thoroughfare. The alley was dark except for one patch of light. Where there was light there were sure to be human beings. Where there were human beings after nightfall in San Antonio there might be food, and there was sure to be drink. So Curly headed for the light.

The illumination came from Schwegel's cafe. On the sidewalk in front of it Curly picked up an old envelope. It might have contained a check for a million. It was empty; but the wanderer read the address: "Mr. Otto Schwegel," and the name of the town and State. The postmark was Detroit.

Curly entered the saloon. And now in the light it could be perceived that he bore the stamp of many years of vagabondage. He had none of the tidiness of the calculating and shrewd professional tramp. His wardrobe represented the cast-off specimens of half a dozen fashions and eras. Two factories had combined their efforts in providing shoes for his feet. As you gazed at him there passed through your mind vague impressions of mummies, wax figures, Russian exiles and men lost on desert islands. His face was covered almost to his eyes with a curly brown beard that he kept trimmed short with a pocket knife, and that had furnished him with his nom de route. Light blue eyes, full of sullenness, fear, cunning, impudence and fawning, witnessed the stress that had been laid upon his soul.

The saloon was small, and in its atmosphere the odors of meat and drink struggled for the ascendency. The pig and the cabbage wrestled with hydrogen and oxygen. Behind the bar Schwegel labored with an assistant whose epidermal pores showed no signs of being obstructed. Hot wienerwurst and sauerkraut were being served to purchasers of beer. Curly shuffled to the end of the bar, coughed hollowly, and told Schwegel that he was a Detroit cabinet maker out of a job. It followed as the night the day that he got his schooner and lunch.

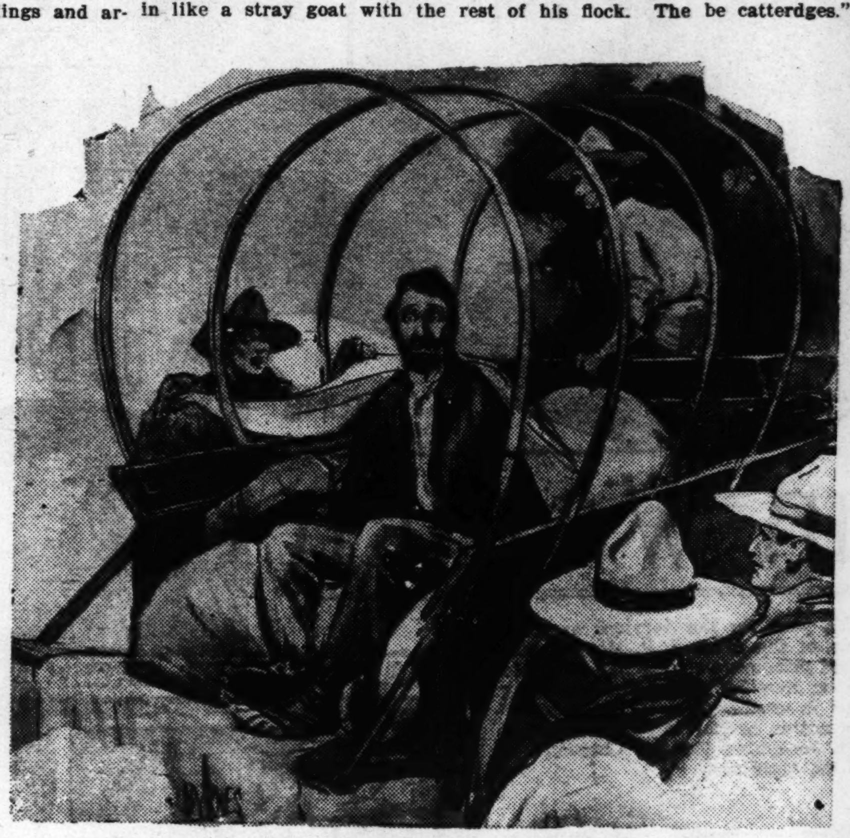
"Was you acquainted maybe mit Heinrich Strauss in Detroit?" asked Schwegel.

"Did I know Heinrich Strauss?" repeated Curly affectionately. "Why, say, bo, I wish I had a dollar for every game of penuchle me and Heinie has played on Sunday afternoons."

More beer and a second plate of steaming food were set before the diplomat. And then Curly, knowing to a fluid drachm how far a "con" game would go, shuffled out into the unpromising street.

And now he began to perceive the inconveniences of this stony Southern town. There was none of the outdoor gaiety and brilliancy and music that provided distraction even to the poorest in the cities of the North. Here, even so early, the gloomy, rock-walled houses were closed and barred against the murky dampness of the night. The streets were mere fissures through which flowed gray wreaths of river mist. As he walked he heard laughter and the chink of coin and chips behind darkened windows, and music coming from every chink of wood and stone. But the diversions were selfish; the day of popular pastimes had not yet come to San Antonio.

But at length Curly, as he strayed, turned the sharp angle of another lost street and came upon a rollicking band of stockmen from the outlying ranches celebrating in the open in front of an ancient wooden hotel. One great roisterer from the sheep country who had just instigated a movement toward the bar, swept Curly in like a stray goat with the rest of his flock. The princes of kine and wool hailed him as a new zoological discovery, and uproariously strove to preserve him in the diluted alcohol of their compliments and regards.



"Who-ee!" yelled Long Tom Collins. "Ranse, are you packing around a bunch of corpuses?"

An hour afterward Curly staggered from the hotel bar room dismissed by his fickle friends, whose interest in him had subsided as quickly as it had risen. Full—stoked with alcoholic fuel and cargoed with food, the only question remaining to disturb him was that of shelter and bed.

A drizzling, cold Texas rain had begun to fall—an endless, lazy, unintermittent downfall that lowered the spirits of men and raised a reluctant steam from the hot stones of the streets and houses. Thus comes the "norther," dousing gentle spring and amiable autumn with the chilling salutes and adieus of coming and departing winter.

Curly followed his nose down the first tortuous street into which his irresponsible feet conducted him. At the lower end of it, on the bank of the serpentine stream, he perceived an open gate in a cemented rock wall. Inside he saw camp fires and a row of low wooden sheds built against three sides of the enclosing wall. He entered the enclosure. Under the sheds many horses were champing at their oats and corn. Many wagons and buckboards stood about with their teams' harness thrown carelessly upon the shafts and doubletrees. Curly recognized the place as a wagon yard, such as is provided by merchants for their out-of-town friends and customers. No one was in sight. No doubt the drivers of those wagons were scattered about the town "seeing the elephant and hearing the owl." In their haste to become patrons of the town's dispensaries of mirth and good cheer the last ones to depart must have left the great wooden gate swinging open.

Curly had satisfied the hunger of an anaconda and the thirst of a camel, so he was neither in the mood nor the condition of an explorer. He zigzagged his way to the first wagon that his eyesight distinguished in the semidarkness under the shed. It was a two-horse wagon with a top of white canvas. The wagon was half filled with loose piles of wool sacks, two or three great bundles of gray blankets and a number of bales and boxes. A reasoning eye would have estimated the load at once as ranch supplies, bound on the morrow for some outlying hacienda. But to the drowsy intelligence of Curly they represented only warmth and softness and protection against the cold humidity of the night. After several unlucky efforts, at last he conquered gravity so far as to climb over a wheel and pitch forward upon the best and warmest bed he had fallen upon in many a day. Then he became instinctively a burrowing animal, and dug his way like a prairie dog down among the sacks and blankets, hiding himself from the cold air as snug and safe as a bear in his den. For three nights sleep had visited Curly only in broken and shivering doses. So now, when Morpheus condescended to pay him a call, Curly got such a strangle hold on the mythological old gentleman that it was a wonder that anyone else in the whole world got a wink of sleep that night.

II.

SIX cowpunchers of the Cibolo Ranch were waiting around the door of the ranch store. Their ponies cropped grass near by, tied in the Texas fashion—which is not tied at all. Their bridle reins had been dropped to the earth, which is a more effectual way of securing them (such is the power of habit and imagination) than you could devise out of a half-inch rope and a live oak tree.

These guardians of the cow lounged about, each with a brown cigarette paper in his hand, and gently but unceasingly cursed Sam Revell, the storekeeper. Sam stood in the door, snapping the red elastic bands on his pink madras shirt sleeves and looking down affectionately at the only pair of tan shoes within a 40-mile radius. His offense had been serious, and he was divided between humble apology and admiration for the beauty of his raiment. He had allowed the ranch stock of "smoking" to become exhausted.

"I thought sure there was another case of it under the counter, boys," he explained. "But it happened to be catterdges."

"You've sure got a case of happenedicitis," said Poky Rodgers, fence rider of the Largo Verde potrero. "Somebody ought to give you a knock on the head with a butt end of a quirt. I've rode in nine miles for some tobacco; and it don't appear natural and seemly that you ought to be allowed to live."

"The boys was smokin' cut plug and dried mesquit leaves mixed when I left," sighed Mustang Taylor, horse wrangler of the Three Elm camp. "They'll be lookin' for me back by 9. They'll be settin' up, with their papers ready to roll a whiff of the real thing before bedtime. And I've got to tell 'em that this pink-eyed, sheep-headed, sulfur-hoofed shortwaisted son of a calico bronco, Saw Revell, hasn't got no tobacco on hand."

Gregorio Falcon, Mexican vaquero and best thrower of the rope on the Cibolo, pushed his heavy, silver-embroidered straw sombrero back upon his thicket of jet-black curls and scraped the bottoms of his pockets for a few crumbs of the precious weed.

"Ah, Don Samuel," he said reproachfully, but with his touch of Castilian manners, "escuse me. Dthey say dthe jackrabbeet and dthe sheep have dthe most leetle sesos—how you call dthem—brain-es? Ah, don' believe dthat, Don Samuel—escuse me. Ah dthink people w'at don't keep esmokin' tobacco, dthey—bot you weel escuse me, Don Samuel."

"Now what's the use of chewin' the rag, boys?" said the untroubled Sam, stooping over to rub the toes of his shoes with a red-and-yellow handkerchief. "Ranse took the order for some more smokin' to San Antonio with him Tuesday. Pancho rode Ranse's hoss back yesterday; and Ranse is goin' to drive the wagon back himself. There wa'n't much of a load—just some woolsacks and blankets and nails and canned peaches and a few things we was out of. I look for Ranse to roll in today sure. He's an early starter and a hell-to-split driver, and he ought to be here not far from sundown."

"What plugs is he drivin'?" asked Mustang Taylor, with a smack of hope in his tones.

"The buckboard grays," said Sam.

"I'll wait a spell, then," said the wrangler. "Them plugs eat up a trail like a roadrunner swallowin' a whip snake. And you may bust me open a can of green-gage plums, Sam, while I'm waitin' for somethin' better."

"Open me some yellow clings," ordered Poky Rodgers. "I'll wait, too."

The tobaccoless punchers arranged themselves comfortably on the steps of the store. Inside Sam chopped open with a hatchet the tops of the cans of fruit. The cow punchers never failed to treat themselves to a change from the beans and bacon of camp whenever they rode in to the store.

The store, a big, white, wooden building like a barn, stood 50 yards from the ranch house. Beyond it were the horse corrals; and still farther the wool sheds and the brush-topped shearing pens—for the Rancho Cibolo raised both cattle and sheep. Behind the store, at a little distance, were the grass-thatched jacals of the Mexicans who bestowed their allegiance upon the Cibolo.

The ranch house was composed of four large rooms with plastered adobe walls, and a two-room wooden ell. A 20-feet-wide "gallery" circumvented the structure. It was set in a grove of immense live oaks and water elms near a lake—a long, not very wide and tremendously deep lake in which, at nightfall, great gars leaped to the surface and plunged with the noise of hippopotamuses frolicking at their bath. From the trees hung garlands and massive pendants of the melancholy gray moss of the South. Indeed, the Cibolo ranch house seemed more of the South than of the West. It looked as if old "Kiowa" Truesdell might have brought it with him from the lowlands of Mississippi when he came to Texas with his rifle in the hollow of his arm in 1855.

But, though he did not bring the family mansion, Truesdale did bring something in the way of a family inheritance that was more lasting than brick or stone. He brought one end of the Truesdale-Curtis family feud. And when a Curtis bought the Rancho de los Olmos, 16 miles from Cibolo, there were lively times on the pear flats and in the chaparral thickets of the Southwest. In those days Truesdell cleaned the brush of many a wolf and tiger cat and Mexican lion, and one or two Curtises fell heirs to notches on his riflestock. Also he buried a brother with a Curtis bullet in him on the bank of the lake at Cibolo. And then the Kiowa Indians made their last raid upon the ranches between the Frio and the Rio Grande, and

Truesdell at the head of his rangers rid the earth of them to the last brave, earning his sobriquet. Then came prosperity in the form of waxing herds and broadening lands. And then old age and bitterness, when he sat, with his great mane of hair as white as the Spanish dagger blossoms and his fierce, pale-blue eyes on the shaded gallery at Cibolo, growling like the pumas that he had slain. He snapped his fingers at old age; the bitter taste to life did not come from that. The cup that stuck at his lips was that his only son Ransom wanted to marry a Curtis, the last youthful survivor of the other end of the feud.

III.

FOR a while the only sounds to be heard at the store were the rattling of the tin spoons and the gurgling intake of the juicy fruits by the cow punchers, the stamping of the grazing ponies and the singing of a doleful song by Sam as he contentedly brushed his stiff auburn hair for the twentieth time that day before a crinkly mirror.

From the door of the store could be seen the irregular, sloping stretch of prairie to the south with its reaches of light green, billowy mesquit flats in the lower places, and its rises crowned with nearly black masses of short chaparral. Through the mesquit flat wound the ranch road that, five miles away, flowed into the old Government trail to San Antonio. The sun was so low that the gentlest elevation cast its gray shadow miles into the green-gold sea of sunshine.

That evening ears were quicker than eyes.

The Mexican held up a tawny finger to still the scraping of tin against tin.

"One wageen," said he, "cross dthe Arroyo Hondo. Ah hear dthe wheel. Verree rockee place, dthe Hondo."

"You've got good ears, Gregorio," said Mustang Taylor. "I never heard nothin' but the song bird in the bush and the zephyr skallyhootin' across the peaceful dell."

In 10 minutes Talyor remarked: "I see the dust of a wagon risin' right above the fur end of the flat."

"You have verree good eyes, senor," said Gregorio, smiling.

Two miles away they saw a faint cloud dimming the green ripples of the mesquits. In 20 minutes they heard the clatter of the horses' hoofs; in five minutes more the gray plugs dashed out of the thicket, wickering for oats and drawing the light wagon behind them like a toy.

From the jacals came a cry of: "El Amo! El Amo!" Four Mexican youths raced to unharness the grays. The cow punchers gave a yell of greeting and delight.

Ranse Truesdell, driving, threw the reins to the ground and laughed.

"It's under the wagon sheet, boys," he said. "I know what you're waiting for. If Sam lets it run out again we'll use them yellow shoes of his for a target. There's two cases. Pull 'em out and light up. I know you all want a smoke."

After striking dry country Ranse had removed the wagon sheet from the bows and thrown it over the goods in the wagon. Six pairs of hasty hands dragged it off and grabbled beneath the sacks and blankets for the cases of tobacco.

Long Collins, tobacco messenger from the San Gabriel outfit, who rode with the longest stirrups west of the Mississippi, delved with an arm like the tongue of a wagon. He caught something harder than a blanket and pulled out a fearful thing—a shapeless, muddy bunch of leather tied together with wire and twine. From its ragged end, like the head and claws of a disturbed turtle, protruded human toes.

"Who-ee!" yelled Long Collins. "Ranse, are you a packin' around a bunch of corpuses? Here's a—howlin' grasshoppers!"

Up from his long slumber popped Curly like some vile worm from its burrow. He clawed his way out and sat blinking like a disreputable, drunken owl. His face was as bluish-red and puffed and seamed and cross-lined as the cheapest round steak of the butcher. His eyes were swollen slits; his nose a pickled beet; his hair would have made the wildest thatch of a jack-in-the-box look like the satin poll of a Cleo de Merode. The rest of him was scare-crow done to the life.

Ranse jumped down from his seat and looked at his strange cargo with wide-open eyes.

"Here, you maverick, what are you doing in my wagon? How did you get in there?"

The punchers gathered around in delight. For the time they had forgotten tobacco.

Curly looked around him slowly in every direction. He snarfed like a Scotch terrier through his ragged beard.

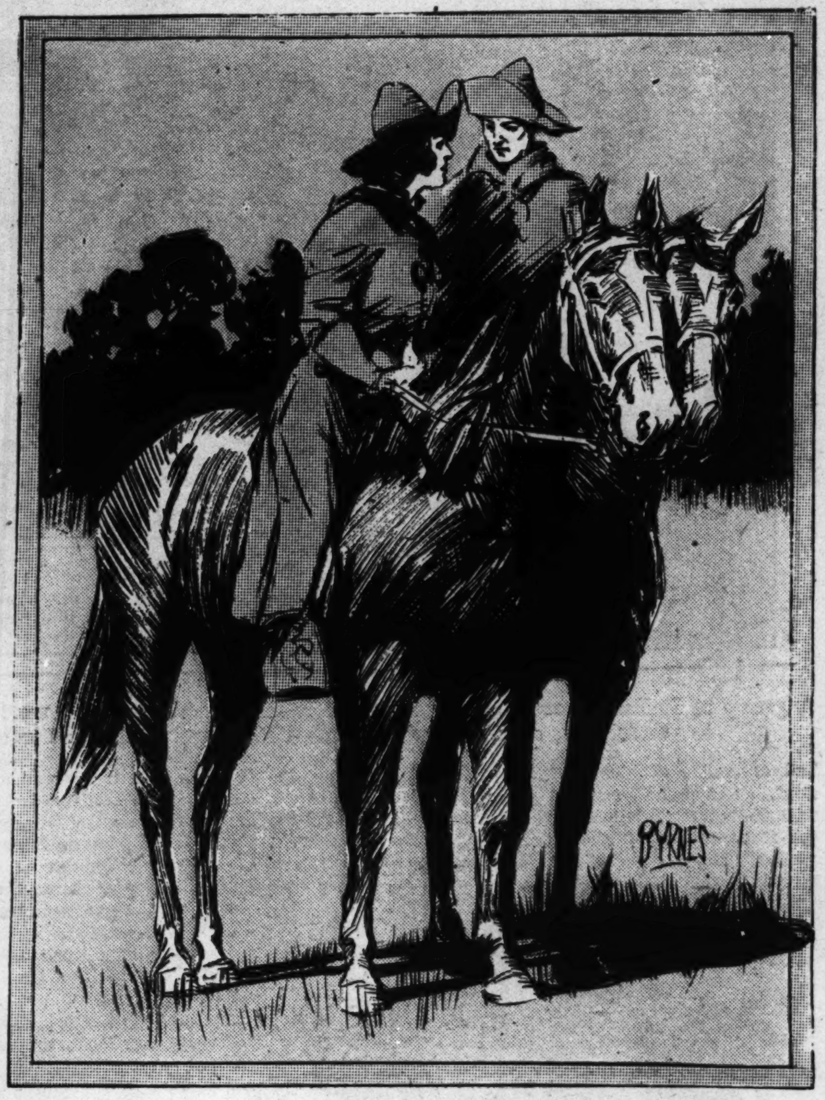
"Where is this?" he rasped through his parched throat. "It's a damn farm in an old field. What'd you bring me here for—say? Did I say I wanted to come here? What are you Reubs rubberin' at—hey? G'wan or I'll punch some of yer faces."

"Drag him out, Collins," said Ranse.

Curly took a slide and felt the ground rise up and collide with his shoulder blades. He got up and sat on the steps of the store shivering from outraged nerves, hugging his knees and sneering. Taylor lifted out a case of tobacco and wrenched off its top. Six cigarettes began to glow, bringing peace and forgiveness to Sam.

"How'd you come in my wagon?" repeated Ranse, this time in a voice that drew a reply. Curly recognized the tone. He had heard it used by freight brakemen and large persons in blue carrying clubs.

"Me?" he growled. "Oh, was you talkin' to me? Why, I was on my way to the Menger, but my valet had forgot to pack my pajamas. So I crawled into that wagon in the wagon yard—see? I never told you to bring me out to this bloomin' farm—see?"



"I never thought I'd like you better for giving me up."

"What is it, Mustang?" asked Poky Rodgers, almost forgetting to smoke in his esctasy. "What do it live on?"

"It's a galliwampus, Poky," said Mustang. "It's the thing that hollers 'williwalloo' up in ellum trees in the low grounds of nights. I don't know if it bites."

"No, it ain't, Mustang," volunteered Long Collins. "Them galliwampuses has fins on their backs, and 18 toes. This here is a hicklesnifter. It lives under the ground and eats cherries. Don't stand so close to it. It wipes out villages with one stroke of its prehensile tail."

Sam, the cosmopolite, who called bartenders in San Antonio by their first name, stood in the door. He was a better zoologist.

"Well, ain't that a Willie for your whiskers?" he commenced. "Where'd you dig up the hobo, Ranse? Goin' to make an auditorium for inbreviates out of the ranch?"

"Say," said Curly, from whose panoplied breast all shafts of wit fell blunted. "Any of you kiddin' guys got a drink on you? Have your fun. Say, I've been hittin' the stuff till I don't know straight up." He turned to Ranse. "Say, you shanghaied me on your d——d old prairie schooner—did I tell you to drive me to a farm? I want a drink. I'm goin' all to little pieces. What's doin'?"

Ranse saw that the tramp's nerves were racking him. He dispatched one of the Mexican boys to the ranch house for a glass of whisky. Curly gulped it down; and into his eyes came a brief, grateful glow—as human as the expression in the eye of a faithful setter dog.

"Thanky, boss," he said quietly.

"You're 30 miles from a railroad, and 40 miles from a saloon," said Ranse.

Curly fell back weakly against the steps.

"Since you are here," continued the ranchman, "come along with me. We can't turn you out on the prairie. A rabbit might tear you to pieces."

He conducted Curly to a large shed where the ranch vehicles were kept. There he spread out a canvas cot and brought blankets.

"I don't suppose you can sleep," said Ranse, "since you've been pounding your ear for 24 hours. But you can camp here till morning. I'll have Pedro fetch you up some grub."

"Sleep!" said Curly. "I can sleep a week. Say, sport, have you got a coffin nail on you?"

IV.

FIFTY miles had Ransom Truesdell driven that day. And yet this is what he did.

Old Kiowa Truesdell sat in his great wicker chair reading by the light of an immense oil lamp. Ranse laid a bundle of newspapers fresh from town at his elbow.

"Back, Ranse?" said the old man, looking up.

"Son," old Kiowa continued, "I've been thinking all day about a certain matter that we have talked about. I want you to tell me again. I've lived for you. I've fought wolves and Indians and worse white men to protect you. You never had any mother that you can remember. I've taught you to shoot straight, ride hard and live clean. Later on I've worked to pile up dollars that'll be yours. You'll be a rich man, Ranse, when my chunk goes out. I've made you. I've licked you into shape like a leopard cat licks its cubs. You don't belong to yourself—you've got to be a Truesdell first. Now, is there to be any more nonsense about this Curtis girl?"

"I'll tell you once more," said Ranse slowly. "As I am a Truesdell, and as you are my father, I'll never marry a Curtis."

"Good boy," said old Kiowa. "You'd better go get some supper."

Ranse went to the kitchen at the rear of the house. Pedro, the Mexican cook, sprang up to bring the food he was keeping warm in the stove.

"Just a cup of coffee, Pedro," he said, and drank it standing. And then:

"There's a tramp on a cot in the wagon shed. Take him something to eat. Better make it enough for two."

Ranse walked out toward the jacale. A boy came running.

"Manuel, can you catch Vaminos, in the little pasture, for me?"

"Why not, senor? I saw him near the puerta but two hours past. He bears a drag rope.

"Get him and saddle him as quick as you can.

"Pontito, senor,"

Soon, mounted on Vaminos, Ranse leaned in the saddle, pressed with his knees, and galloped eastward past the store, where sat Sam trying his guitar in the moonlight.

Vaminos shall have a word—Vaminos the good dun horse. The Mexicans, who have a hundred names for the colors of a horse, called him gruyo. He was a mouse-colored, slate-colored, flea-bitten roan dun, if you can conceive it. Down his back from his mane to his tail went a line of black. He would live forever; and surveyors have not laid off as many miles in the world as he could travel in a day.

Eight miles east of Cibolo ranch house Ranse loosened the pressure of his knees, and Vaminos stopped under a big ratama tree. The yellow ratama blossoms showered fragrance that would have undone the roses of France. The moon made the earth a great concave bowl with a crystal sky for a lid. In a glade five jack rabbits leaped and played together like kittens. Eight miles farther east shone a faint star that appeared to have dropped below the horizon. Night riders, who often steered their course by it, knew it to be the light in the Rancho de los Ilmos.

In 10 minutes Yenna Curtis galloped to the tree on her sorrel pony Dancer. The two leaned and clasped hands heartily.

"I ought to have ridden nearer your home," said Ranse. "But you never will let me."

Yenna laughed. And in the soft light you could see her strong white teeth and fearless eyes. No sentimentality there, in spite of the moonlight, the odor of the ratamas, and the admirable figure of Ranse Truesdell, the lover. But she was there, eight miles from her home, to meet him.

"How often have I told you, Ranse," she said, "that I am your half-way girl? Always half-way."

"Well?" said Ranse, with a question in his tones.

"I did," said Yenna, with almost a sigh. "I told him after dinner, when I thought he would be in a good humor. Did you ever wake up a lion, Ranse, with the mistaken idea that he would be a kitten? He almost tore the ranch to pieces. It's all up. I love my daddy, Ranse, and I'm afraid—I'm afraid of him, too. He ordered me to promise that I'd never marry a Truesdell. I promised. That's all. What luck did you have?"

"The same," said Ranse slowly. "I promised him that his son would never marry a Curtis. Somehow I couldn't go against him. He's mighty old. I'm sorry, Yenna."

The girl leaned in her saddle and laid one hand on Ranse's, on the horn of his saddle.

"I never thought I'd like you better for giving me up," she said ardently, "but I do. I must ride back now, Ranse. I slipped out of the house and saddled Dancer myself. Good night, neighbor."

"Good night," said Ranse. "Ride carefully over them badger holes."

They wheeled and rode away in opposite directions. Yenna turned in her saddle and called clearly:

"Don't forget I'm your half-way girl, Ranse."

"Damn all family feuds and inherited scraps," said Ranse vindictively to the breeze.

Ranse turned his horse into the small pasture and went to his own room. He opened the lowest drawer of an old bureau to get out the packet of letters that Yenna had written him one summer when she had gone to Mississippi for a visit. The drawer stuck, and he yanked at it savagely—as a man will. It came out of the bureau, and bruised both his shins—as a drawer will. An old, folded yellow letter without an envelope fell from somewhere—probably from where it had lodged in one of the upper drawers. Ranse took it to the lamp and read it curiously.

Then he took his hat and walked to one of the Mexican jacals.

"Tia Juana," he said, "I would like to talk with you a while."

An old, old Mexican woman, white-haired and wonderfully wrinkled, rose from a stool.

"Sit down," said Ranse, removing his hat and taking the one chair in the jacal. "Who am I, Tia Juana?" he asked, speaking Spanish.

"Don Ransom, our good friend and employer. Why do you ask?" answered the old woman.

"Tia Juana, who am I?" he repeated.

A frightened look came in the old woman's face. She fumbled with her black shawl.

"Who am I, Tia Juana?" said Ranse once more.

"Thirty-two years I have lived on the Rancho Cibolo," said Tia Juana. "I thought to be buried under the coma mott beyond the garden before these things should be known. Close the door, Don Ransom, and I will speak. I see in your face that you know."

An hour Ranse spent behind Tia Juana's closed door. As he was on his way back to the house Curly called to him from the wagon shed.

The tramp sat on his cot, swinging his feet and smoking.

"Say, sport," he grumbled. "This is no way to treat a man after kidnapin' him. I went up to the store and borrowed a razor from that flash guy and had a shave. But that ain't all a man needs. Say—can't you loosen up for about three fingers more of that booze? I never asked you to bring me to your d——d farm."

"Stand up out here in the light," said Ranse.

Curly got up sullenly and took a step or two.

COL. GOETHALS' OWN STORY OF BUILDING THE PANAMA CANAL

Chief Engineer has his way over opinion of President Roosevelt and enables the Government to run the big job itself, instead of giving it to contractors—Fostering spirit of team-work in vast army of laborers :: :: ::

A group of Italian laborers on the canal. The men in the picture worked on a dirt train, and their boss, an American, is shown standing in the center of the group.

INSTALLMENT TWO

BY MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGE W. GOETHALS,*
Governor of the Canal Zone.

IN my conversation with President Roosevelt, on the evening of Feb. 18, 1907, when he notified me that he had selected me to be chief engineer of the canal, and chairman of the commission, various matters connected with the canal were discussed, including the question of building the canal by contract.

Mr. John F. Stevens, my predecessor as chief engineer of the canal, had strongly advocated the contract method when first considered. In his report to Mr. Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the commission, he stated:

"This is no small undertaking, but one that calls for the united and untiring efforts of the best brain and muscle that the United States can produce, and there is no one capable, either physically or mentally, of carrying, in all its details, this stupendous work to a rapid and successful conclusion; but by associating with us the best of all the needed elements, we can do the work quickly and well."

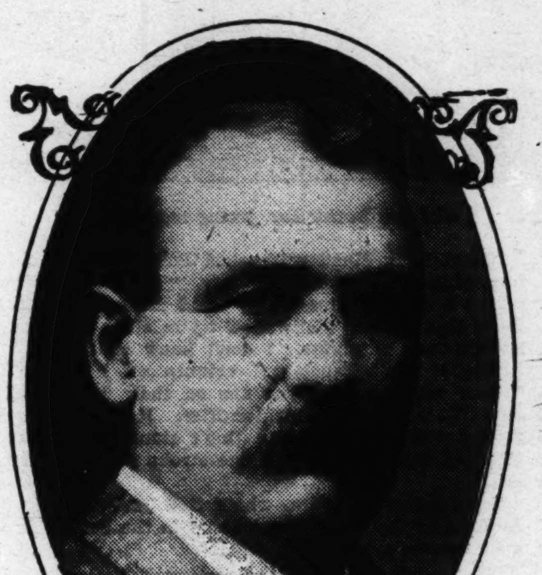
The President's action in placing the work under the army engineers created some feeling and criticism; the work was going to lag and suffer from lack of initiative. The very fact that they were to be placed in charge was held up as one of the principal arguments in favor of the contract method. Army engineers, as a rule, were said to be, from their very training, dictatorial and many of them martinets, and it was predicted that if they, rather than contractors, were placed in charge of the actual construction the canal project was doomed to failure. Their training was purely technical, they had never made a success as executive heads of great enterprises, and few if any of them had any construction ability.

It was claimed that proper headway in the construction of the canal had not been secured thus far, and that the chief obstacle in the way was Government "red tape," which the employment of army engineers would increase rather than decrease. On the other hand, with a contractor in charge, the first thing he would do would be to abolish this "galling red-tape system and introduce business methods."

The further criticism was made that the Government engineers did not know the kind of machinery to employ and that experimentation to find that best adapted to the work would be expensive both in cost and time. A contractor, on the other hand, from his varied experience, would not hesitate in such matters, and the contrary would be the result.

The main objection, however, to doing the work by Government forces, and one not usually considered at its full value, was the inability to foster esprit de corps among its employes. It was stated that: "It is a physical impossibility for the Government to secure team work amongst its employes, for the very good reason that there is no personal relation between the employer and the employe. High salaries will not give this result, nor will comfortable quarters and good food, as there must enter the human factor, which is entirely lacking in the Government. This feature is one in which the contractor will always have the advantage over the Government, and no Government employer, whether he be of the army or a civilian, can cultivate the spirit of good feeling or instill into the employe a spirit of enthusiasm as can a private employer."

Thus it had come about that I was confronted, in taking charge of the work, with the necessity of determining whether the task could be accomplished as well as by hired labor, through the application of Government methods, as it could be by contract. Not only were the President and Secretary of War prejudiced in favor of the contract system, but the former had assured me that the general opinion was on the same side. The convictions which I had expressed to the President before starting for Panama were strengthened after I had arrived and had looked over the situation. Indeed, what most surprised me was that Mr. Stevens, with the results before him that he had achieved through the force he had built up, could still favor the contract method. He had, it is true, advocated the rejection of all the bids, but his objection had not been to the contract system itself, but to the form it had finally taken.



John F. Stevens, Col. Goethals' immediate predecessor as chief engineer of the canal. Mr. Stevens favored the contract method of building the canal.

Under the circumstance, I had no choice but must go ahead with hired labor, following the established Government methods, but I was quite willing to do this. After a careful study of all phases of the situation, and after consultation with my colleagues and various other officials, I reached a conclusion strongly in favor of the existing method, and about three months after my arrival so reported to the President, giving my reasons.

The unprecedented magnitude of the Panama Canal and the conditions under which it was to be built made it entirely different from similar classes of work in any locality of the United States. There was no contractor or syndicate of contractors that by any combination could have brought to the Isthmus an organization ready for team work on any of the parts of the canal into which it could be subdivided.

The supply of superintendents, foremen, mechanics and skilled labor of all kinds must be secured from the United States, whether the work be done by contract or by the Government. The keen competition then existing in the United States because of the large amount of work in progress or contemplated, militated against the argument that contractors would have superintendents, foremen and others available for work on the Isthmus, for they would not break up their organizations, already engaged, for this purpose.

Aside from skilled labor, it was not possible to secure an adequate supply of common labor from the United States, as objections had been raised to recruiting in the South, so that recourse must be had to obtaining it abroad. A representative of the Italian Government recommended to the authorities that Italian labor be permitted to accept employment under the Government, but that such employment by contractors should not be allowed. A similar experience was had with respect to Chinese labor.

So far as dredging and lock and dam construction were concerned, the Government's experience had been, if not greater, at least as extensive as that of any contractor or association of contractors that could have been secured in the United States. So far as related to excavation in the dry by steam shovels and cars, the advantage at the start might have been with the contractor, yet the Government had secured one of the best experts in the country for this class of work, and he had built up an organization of the isthmus that could not be surpassed by any contractor.

When the Government does work in the United States the wage scale is determined by the amount paid similar classes of labor in the locality where the work is being done; there is no pressure brought to bear on higher authority for any increase over the salaries or allowances offered. Conditions on the isthmus are peculiar. It is contended by employes that service in the tropics saps the energy, and that a man is incapable, after a time, of performing the same amount of work that he would be able to accomplish had he spent the same period in a cooler climate. In support of the reasonableness of their claims, they point to the fact that the leave privilege to employes was established on recommendation of the sanitary authorities, who claimed that such a change was necessary for the preservation of health. This creates a desire to accumulate sufficient means to avoid the necessity of equally hard work on the return to the United States; consequently, the demands for increase in pay are frequent, and to accomplish this, when denied by those immediately in charge of the work, recourse has been had to higher authority.

This is a condition that a contractor would have been obliged to face as the Government did, and in some respects the latter has been in a position to handle the situation more satisfactorily than the former—as was plainly indicated by the trouble with the steam-shovel men in May, 1907.

It was claimed by the steam-shovel men that representations were made to them when the first came to the isthmus that eventually their pay would be $300 per month. Their demand was not granted by the authorities on the isthmus, and the question was taken up at Washington by the leaders of their union in the United States. A hearing was given the men by the Secretary of War in April of 1907, and his report recommended against the increase, which report was approved by the President. While the work, to some extent, was crippled in consequence, had a contractor refused to consider the demand a strike undoubtedly would have been declared, and the matter could not have been so successfully handled by a contractor under conditions as they actually existed.

With the settlement by higher authority of the demand for increased pay on the part of the steam-shovel men, locomotive engineers and conductors, a fixed wage scale was adopted, and the authorities in Washington decided that all questions of pay would thereafter be left for the commission to handle, and that no appeals to higher authority would be recognized. The wage scale adopted for the Government employes would have had to be accepted and maintained by the contractor, and, if payment to the latter was based on a percentage of the cost of the work done, the demands

United States Wipes Out Foot-and-Mouth Disease

Sets efficiency standard surpassing Germany, where livestock plague has spread so widely there is little hope of combating it—In six months Uncle Sam, at cost of $8,000,000, banishes disease from 21 states by slaughtering 140,000 animals — Some cases of human infection.

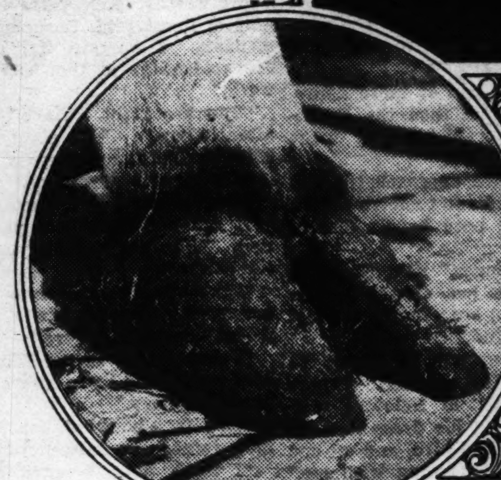
THE quick eradication of the epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease, which only a few months ago spread over 21 states and the District of Columbia, has again proved the superiority of one of the departments of the United States Government over the Governments of foreign nations.

The recent visitation of the livestock plague in the United States was the sixth one the agents of the Department of Agriculture, assisted by the various states, have been called upon to fight, and each time the disease has been driven from the country within a few months.

Germany, which is generally considered a little ahead of every other country in the matter of efficiency in almost every line of endeavor, has failed completely in her fight on the disease, and there is probably no other country, where the malady has once gained a foothold, in which it has been as completely eradicated as in the United States.

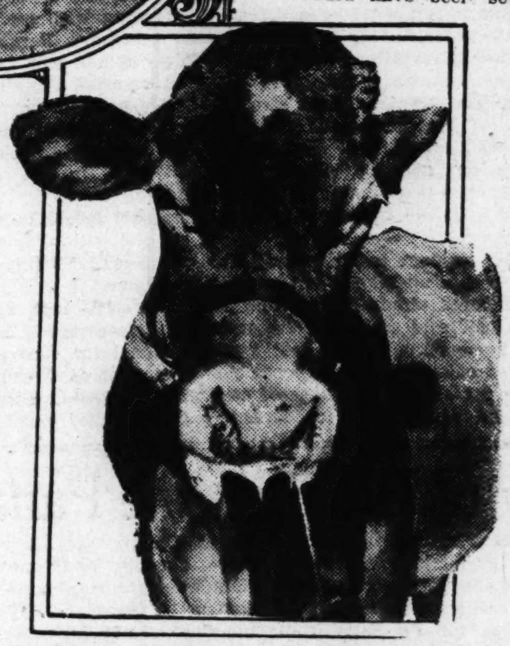


Sores between the toes are one of the characteristic symptoms.

The disease is now so widespread in Germany that there is said to be little hope of exterminating it. In 1911 about 8,000,000 of the 51,319,000 cattle, sheep, hogs and goats of that country were affected.

In justice to Germany it should be remembered, however, that the farms as a rule in that country are much smaller than those in America, and thus the herds are closer together and the disease would spread more quickly.

When the malady appeared in the United States last October, the Federal Government began its campaign by declaring a quarantine at the Chicago stockyards, where it was first discovered, and ordering that every animal should be killed as soon as symptoms of the disease developed. Since that time 140,000 animals have been slaughtered. The loss has been divided equally between the states and the Federal Government, and the owners of the slaughtered stock were reimbursed.



Frothing at the mouth is a warning of the malady's presence.

Not the least of the many difficulties which the Federal agents had to overcome in stamping out the disease was the opposition of farmers and stockmen to the slaughtering of the animals. The owners argued that the disease could be stamped out by quarantine, and that the greater part of the stock could be saved. Foot-and-mouth disease proves fatal in only from 2 to 8 per cent of the cases, but the animal which has been affected, veterinary men declare, is apt at any time to develop a new case, thus creating a fresh outbreak of the epidemic. There was also the danger that the quarantine could not be made tight enough to stop the spread of the disease, as there are many channels through which the germ may be carried to other stock.

In a few individuals there developed an attitude almost of rebellion against the authorities, and in one instance a temporary injunction was granted restraining the authorities from killing any more cattle in one county. This, however, was not made permanent.

Another source of trouble was lack of funds, especially in Illinois, where one of the frequent legislative deadlocks tied up a proposed $1,000,000 appropriation. Farmers whose cattle and hogs were slaughtered objected when they were told they would have to wait an indefinite period for their pay from the State.

Another obstacle was ignorance. Veterinarians know very little about foot-and-mouth disease. The exact cause has never been determined and the only sure cure so far found has been killing the animals to prevent the spread of infection.

Although no official Government figures, giving the total cost of the fight on the plague, are available, it is known that the campaign cost almost $8,000,000. Up to Jan. 1 the expenses of the Federal Government were $2,127,138.04. Of this sum $1,840,000 represented half of the cost of slaughtering infected herds and reimbursing the owners.

As the states paid an equal amount, another $1,840,000 can be added to the expense. This does not include the expense to the states for special veterinarians and inspectors. On Jan. 25 an emergency bill was signed by President Wilson appropriated another $2,500,000 for the work.

The actual value of the animals which were slaughtered and burned or buried in deep trenches, under the supervision of Federal or state inspectors, is estimated at $3,000,000. Many of these animals were of pure-blooded stock. One herd of 800 prize cattle at the National Dairy Show at Chicago, valued at $1,000,000, became infected, but it was found necessary to slaughter only a few of them.

There must be added to this, to gain an idea of the total loss, the cost of closing the stockyards at Chicago, Pittsburg, Buffalo, East St. Louis and Omaha, at a time when the packing houses of the country had enormous contracts with European Governments for tinned meats for the armies engaged in war.

There have been several theories advanced, regarding the manner in which the disease was brought into the United States. It is generally agreed by Government officials that the first case developed in Southern Michigan. Milk from an infected cow is said to have ben sent to a creamery and the "skimmed" milk sent to a farm and fed to hogs. These hogs were shipped to Chicago, where they developed the disease while in the stockyards.

The foot-and-mouth disease does not exist in the United State normally, and each time it has appeared in this country the virus has come from some foreign land. In the case of the last epidemic the theory generally accepted is that the germ was brought in a shipment of hides from Argentina. These were sent to a tannery at Niles, Mich., near the point where the disease is thought first to have developed.

The disease keeps the infected animals in constant pain from soreness of the hoofs and mouth. They are unable to eat and consequently lose in weight. In dairy stock the milk production is lessened, and even in cases where the animals seemingly recover, it is often many months before they regain their normal condition. In some cases the coating of the tongue disappears and the hoofs become separated from the skin above them.

The recent epidemic was the worst of the six which have visited the United States. The early epidemics were started by the importation of cattle from foreign countries. Such importations are now permitted only from countries in which it is certain no foot-and-mouth disease exists. The epidemics of 1902 and 1908 were caused by the importation of vaccine from Japan, which in some way had become infected. This avenue is now also believed to have been closed by legislation and Government regulations.

Although on April 1 the Government officials were convinced that the epidemic was practically stamped out, they have not ceased to keep a watch for new cases, and in a few instances new outbreaks have developed, the latest being in Pennsylvania.

Slaughtered animals ready to be covered with quicklime and buried.

The authorities have pointed out that there may have been cases in which animals had light attacks and apparently recovered without the authorities having been notified. These animals may develop new cases at any time, thus causing the disease to gain fresh foothold. The coming of warm weather also gives some cause for alarm, for, unless the germs of the disease were actually destroyed by the low temperatures of winter, they may have remained dormant, in out-of-the-way corners of stockyards, stockcars or farmyards, awaiting only warm weather to make them active again.

The foot-and-mouth disease is not always confined to animals, although cases of human infection in this country have been rare. During the recent epidemic, however, a few such cases were reported. It has never been known to prove fatal or even leave a permanent scar and the duration of the attack is only from ten to fifteen days.

Prince Karl was in no hurry to go about the duty which he had pleaded to the Marquis. For a long while he remained in deep thought which now wrinkled his brow into a frown and now made the corners of his mouth quiver with a smile. He believed himself a strong man, not of that sort which foolishly stakes all on a single throw, but of the strength which is tempered with prudence, and leaves a loophole of escape. The schemes which he had set in motion, using others to carry them forward, were not entirely to his satisfaction. The element of danger in them was too marked, and of necessity there were too many in his confidence. If failure came he believed he had secured sufficient lack of evidence to save himself, but with success, certain debts must accrue which he had never seen clearly how to avoid paying. Tonight the Marquis had shown him a high road out of this difficulty—the friendship of Louis of France. There might be a crooked way out which he would prefer to take, but at least he had a second way open to him, and the knowledge made him smile. Sandra would be forced to listen to his counsel, and the demands of his creditors would have to be reasonable. He was a gambler who could not lose.

"They have waited tonight and will complain," he said, taking his cloak. "They have a foretaste of my independence which will do them good."

Calling for a servant to attend him, he went out. He never went unaccompanied in the streets of Metzburg if he could help it. He had enemies, and he was not too trustful of his friends.

Certainly he was waited for tonight. The Burgomaster had returned from the tavern of the Rising Sun, and so sure was he that the number of his guests would be complete by this time that he did not question the servant in the hall.

"Not here yet!" he exclaimed as he entered the room which he had left not long ago.

"No," answered one of the three men with an oath. "It is not the first time we have had to dance attendance in this fashion."

"It will be the last," said the Burgomaster. "We are nearing the end. I have arranged everything. After tomorrow I shall speak plainly. We shall not dance attendance any more; we shall call the tune."

There was an air of finality in the statement as he seated himself. Heinrich von Lehmann had no doubt whatever concerning his own importance. Clothed in his robes and seated in the great carved chair of office in the Rathhaus, there was undeniably something imposing about the Burgomaster. There the ermined gown lent an air of wit to his commonplace utterances, and his pompous speech often passed for wisdom; in his own house, although he endeavored to preserve his public dignity and must needs occupy an ample chair, he was only a fat man who breathed heavily and was inclined to bluster.

Yet in his head, so disproportionate in size to his body, there was a brain of sufficiently high an order to appreciate how best to ensure the worldly prosperity of the Burgomaster, and since he possessed no conscience to speak of, the methods to be used towards this end troubled him not at all. Ready to consider any scheme or any kind of underhand dealing which might help to fill his private coffers, he was an easy friend to any man or woman who might be useful to him. His first thought was always for himself, and at any moment he would have sacrificed his best friend if he stood either in the way of his ambition or in the path of his escape. At heart he was a coward, but he could speak fearlessly enough on occasion to those he deemed sufficiently in his power; and since the friendship of a crooked man is always a dangerous thing, there were men of mark in Metzburg who could not safely offend the Burgomaster.

In some degree at any rate this was the case with the men who were with him tonight. Straubel, who had already complained of waiting, held office at Court and was ever alert to throw obstacles in the way of the policy of Baron Kevenfelt whom he hated; Kurd was one of the richest men in the city, as avaricious and as unscrupulous as the Burgomaster himself; Rahmer was a schemer against the existing order of things, a man ever on the side of change, gallant in manner, glib in speech, and popular with all those who were discontented.

They had waited and grumbled for an hour or more when Prince Karl entered the room. He offered no apology. He seated himself without any explanation, and looked at the Burgomaster.

"Well, Von Lehmann, have you carried out your instructions?"

"Instructions!"

The look on the Burgomaster's face caused a smile on his companions' faces, and the Prince burst into a laugh.

"The lateness of the hour forbids too nice a choice of words."

"The lateness is not our fault," the Burgomaster answered. "We have been waiting long enough to try our tempers, I do assure you."

"We are in like case then and may cry quits. I have been cursing myself for not arranging that you should come to me at the castle. I find the walk to the market place trying sometimes. Well, what have you done? Does that form of question please you better?"

"Your Highness, I think we all find it more appropriate under the circumstances," and then the Burgomaster slowly and ponderously reported his visit to the Rising Sun.

"Excellent," said the Prince. "We approach the end of this affair, gentlemen. I shall hunt tomorrow with a light heart, and afterwards—we need hardly discuss the afterwards tonight."

"There is just one point of danger," said Straubel, "the jester—Bergolet. Her Grace has elected not to take him with her to Festenhausen, but even at the last moment she might change her mind."

"The jester! What can he do even if he should be of the company?" gurgled the Burgomaster. "There will be short work with the pestilent fellow I warrant. A patch of darker crimson in his dress than he usually carries, a supper for beast and bird, and an end to him. You will see no sign of mourning with me."

"If excuse for my late arrival were necessary, Bergolet would furnish it," said Karl. "Your minds may be at ease concerning him. He has been arrested tonight while prowling about the streets. I hear he made some sort of resistance and consequently had the senses knocked out of him. By the time he is ready to jest again our hunting will be over."

"That is good news," said Straubel.

"Was it the Duchess had him arrested?" asked Rahmer.

"It was done in her name," Karl answered. "If there has been a mistake it can be explained later."

"I could almost regret that the forest will lack its carrion," said the Burgomaster as the Prince rose.

The opening of the door was the signal for conversation of a more conventional character, such as friends may use on parting; it acted as a warning, too, and the woman who had descended half a dozen stairs hastily retreated to the gallery again where she had watched ever since she had let the jester out of a side door. She had not been there when the Burgomaster returned, but she had seen Prince Karl enter and she wanted to know who all the visitors were tonight. Only a few moments ago a chain which she wore had fallen upon a rug in the hall below. As she fingered it with restless hands the clasp had become unfastened and it had slipped from her neck. She was going down to get it when the room door opened. Safe in the shadows of the gallery again she watched the men crossing the hall, hoping that her chain would remain unnoticed. It was Kurd who saw it and picked it up.

"You scatter your wealth in strange places, Burgomaster," he said, holding out the chain.

"Dropped by one of the servants, probably," said the Burgomaster, but as he took it the Prince saw it.

"May I look?" and then after examining it for a moment he said, "A servant, surely a servant never wore this?"

The woman in the gallery drew further back into the shadows, afraid of an upward glance that might pierce her hiding place.

"Why not?" said Von Lehmann, "it is only a cheap trinket."

"Look again, Burgomaster," and Karl held out the chain so that the light from the hanging lamp might fall upon it. "If that be a sample of your judgment of merchandise, I can picture you a ruined man. Only once before have I held in my hands such a chain as this, and though I am no merchant I knew that I held a gift worthy to clasp the throat of a princess. Surely it is of finest gold, Burgomaster, and look at the workmanship. I warrant it came from Florence and that the goldsmiths of that city never accomplished better work."

"You are right, Prince," the Burgomaster answered after a pause. "My sight in this light is indifferent. How she became possessed of it I do not know, but it may belong to my niece."

"Your niece!" Karl exclaimed.

"I did not know you possessed a niece," said Rahmer. "Has she delicacy and beauty which can match the chain?"

"Like other men I have relations," the Burgomaster answered somewhat irritably, "and my niece has sufficient beauty, I believe."

"Tell her that Prince Karl would make her acquaintance and would learn how she became possessed of such pretty jewelry."

"She is somewhat masterful, Your Highness, and may refuse the information."

"I think not," laughed Karl as he passed out.

For a few moments after his guests had gone the Burgomaster stood looking at the chain in the palm of his great fat hand. Very gradually his frown changed into a smile, a leering smile which had malice in it, and cold, calculating wickedness. They must be devilish thoughts which ran through his mind to make him smile so; and the woman watching him from the gallery seemed to read them, for a sudden shudder shook her. It was not fear she felt, but abhorrence, the presence of something unclean and unholy. At that moment Bergolet might have broken his oath to her and not have made her angry.

The Burgomaster dropped the chain into his pocket as he left the hall, and the woman hurried to her room and fast locked the door.

Col. Goethals' Own Story of Building the Panama Canal

for increases would be granted more readily than under Government control.

The records of the office of the Chief of Engineers of the army show that the letting of a piece of Government work by contract is by no means a reasonable assurance that the task will be completed in a definite time. On public works, including buildings, the records show that in a majority of cases the time limit is exceeded.

When all the conditions surrounding the work are known in advance, a reasonable definiteness in cost is usually obtained by contract when based on unit prices. This would be equally true if the contract were on a basis of percentage of the cost; but in either case, so far as the canal work was concerned, all the conditions were not known in advance. So far as concerned the determination of this question by a board organized as provided by the specifications of the proposed contract, it has been demonstrated that this could not have been done with assurance of its holding for any length of time, because of the change that was made in the location of the locks on the Pacific side and unforeseen difficulties in connection with Culebra Cut.

One of the unwritten reasons in advocacy of a contract, of which I learned soon after my arrival on the isthmus in talking with members of the supervisory force, was the fear of politics in the appointment of officials and in other ways, if the work were done by the Government, which would be entirely eliminated if placed under contract. It was contended by many of these persons that in another year a political campaign would be in progress and debts would have to be paid, and there was no place which offered better opportunities for this than the canal, for there was no limit in positions available for this purpose, since relatively few of them were under civil service regulations.

Up to that time the work had been conducted on a nonpartisan basis; in the selection of the new commission no word or question was mentioned or asked as to the politics of any of its members, and the appointment of a leading Democratic Senator by a Republican President showed pretty conclusively that politics would not enter. The necessity for the Panama Canal and for its early completion was fully realized, as well as the fact that the accomplishment could be secured only by the application of business and nonpartisan methods. This has generally been the case in all Government work wherever undertaken.

The canal, as a whole, has been built by hired labor, but a number of small contracts were made at various times during the construction period, with resulting economy. In some instances, due to the isolated locality of the work, the housing and feeding of the force engaged would have been very expensive, and while the commission, following the policy that had been adopted, would have been obliged to provide such facilities, a contractor was not, and recourse was had to the contract method.

Considering the work as a whole, were it to be done over, in the light of the experience gained by its construction, I would advocate employing again the method that has been followed.

From the very nature of the case it is impossible to say whether the work has been done more cheaply or more quickly than it could have been done by contract if the plan favored by Mr. Stevens had been adopted, for comparison is impossible. All that can be said is that the work has been completed within the time limit fixed by the International Board of Consulting Engineers in 1906, notwithstanding the increased dimensions of the locks and the unexpected difficulties which developed in excavating the channel through Culebra Cut. Also, that leaving out of consideration the accessories undertaken in 1912, and not originally contemplated, it has been built within the estimated cost.

As bearing on this question, it is interesting to record that one of the associated contractors who gave large financial support to the lowest of the four bids, offered when the contract system was advocated, and who visited the isthmus after the work was well under way, declared frankly that it was being done more cheaply and more expeditiously than would have been possible under the contract system, and expressed the opinion that he and all other financial backers of the proposed contract method would have been ruined if their bid had been accepted.

The third installment of Major-General Goethals' own story of the building of the Panama Canal will appear in next Sunday's issue, and in it Gen. Goethals will tell of some of the labor problems connected with the work that he had to meet and solve.

Various Forms Of Headache

"It is necessary in order to treat headaches properly to understand the causes which produce the affection" says Dr. J. W. Ray of Blockton, Ala. Continuing, he says: "Physicians cannot even begin the treatment of a disease without knowing what causes give rise to it, and we must remember that headache is to be treated according to the same rule. We must not only be particular to give a remedy intended to counteract the cause which produces the headaches, but we must also give a remedy to relieve the pain until the cause of trouble has been removed. To answer this purpose Anti-kamnia Tablets will be found a most convenient and satisfactory remedy. One tablet every one to three hours gives comfort and rest in the most severe cases of headache, neuralgia and particularly the headaches of women."

When we have a patient subject to regular attacks of sick headache, we should caution him to keep his bowels regular, for which nothing is better than "Actoids," and when he feels the least sign of an oncoming attack, he should take two A-K Tablets. Such patients should always be instructed to carry a few Anti-kamnia Tablets, so as to have them ready for instant use. These tablets are prompt in action, and can be depended on to produce relief in a very few minutes. Ask for A-K Tablets.

Anti-kamnia Tablets can be obtained at all druggists.—ADV.

SILVER JUBILEE!

Will you help celebrate? "How would you advise me to observe my 25th anniversary as an Ear Specialist?" was the question Specialist Sproule asked some of his friends. Their answer was unanimously: "Give away a certain number of your treatments for Head Noises, Free."

After careful consideration, the Specialist has decided to do this, and now he wants every sufferer from Head Noises to help him celebrate by sending for a Free Treatment.

Just 25 years ago he began curing this trouble and he has kept right on doing it for a quarter of a century. Hundreds and hundreds of people who never thought to be free from those incessant, terrible noises have secured a blessed quietness by the use of his treatment.

Moreover, every Head Noises sufferer's heart confirms the medical truth that his trouble is only too surely a red lantern of warning to tell of coming Deafness. Whether the ear-sounds are constant or occasional—whether the hearing is still acute or impaired to a greater or lesser extent Deafness will come. What more pitiful affliction? To be starving for love, yet unable to hear a word of sympathy, shut out from friends and companionship—to be only a burden and annoyance to others!

FREE
HEAD NOISES TREATMENT

To celebrate his Silver Jubilee, Specialist Sproule offers Free Treatment for a short time, to every Head Noises sufferer who reads these lines.

He does this in response to the requests of people just like you, who suffered from Head Noises and approaching Deafness, and who have been entirely cured by his treatment.

Don't miss this Silver opportunity. Just sit down and write a note to Specialist Sproule asking for a "Jubilee Free Treatment," or write "Jubilee Free Treatment" on a post card, sign your full name and address, and the treatment will come to you as quickly as the mails can bring it.

You can then see this Method for yourself. It won't cost you a cent. Don't delay and don't hesitate. Get in line to have a Jubilee yourself by getting rid of these terrible noises. Think how happy you would be to be free from them!

Write right NOW. Send for a Jubilee Free Head Noises Treatment and share in the Jubilee.

The Higher Abdication

His face, now shaven smooth, seemed transformed. His hair had been combed, and it fell back from the right side of his forehead with a peculiar wave. The moonlight charitably softened the ravages of drink; and his acquiline, well-shaped nose and small, square cleft chin almost gave distinction to his looks.

Ranse sat on the foot of the cot and looked at him curiously.

"Where did you come from—have you got any home or folks anywhere?"

"Me? Why, I'm a dook," said Curly. "I'm Sir Reginald—oh, cheese it. No; I don't know anything about my ancestors. I've been a tramp ever since I can remember. Say, old pal, are you going to set 'em up again tonight or not?"

"You answer my questions and maybe I will. How did you come to be a tramp?"

"Me?" answered Curly. "Why, I adopted that profession when I was an infant. Case of had to. First thing I can remember, I belonged to a big, lazy hobo called Beefsteak Charlie. He sent me around to houses to beg. I wasn't hardly big enough to reach the latch of a gate."

"Did he ever tell you how he got you?" asked Ranse.

"Once when he was sober he said he bought me for an old six-shooter and six bits from a band of drunken Mexican sheep shearers. But what's the diff? That's all I know."

"All right," said Ranse. "I reckon you're a maverick for certain. I'm going to put the Rancho Cibolo brand on you. I'll start you to work out in one of the camps tomorrow."

"Work!" sniffed Curly disdainfully. "What do you take me for? Do you think I'd chase cows and hop-skip-and-jump around after crazy sheep like that pink-and-yellow guy at the store says these Reubs do? Forget it."

"Oh, you'll like it when you get used to it," said Ranse. "Yes, I'll send you up one more drink by Pedro. I think you'll make a first-class cow puncher before I get through with you."

"Me?" said Curly. "I pity the cows you set me to chaperon. They can go chase themselves. Don't forget my nightcap, please, boss."

Ranse paid a visit to the store before going to the house. Sam Revell was taking off his tan shoes regretfully and preparing for bed.

"Any of the boys from the San Gabriel camp riding in early in the morning?" asked Ranse.

"Long Collins," said Sam briefly. "For the mail."

"Tell him," said Ranse, "to take that tramp out to camp with him and keep him till I get there."

V.

CURLY was sitting on his blankets in the San Gabriel camp cursing talentedly when Ranse Truesdell rode up and dismounted on the next afternoon. The cow punchers were ignoring the stray. He was grimy with dust and black dirt. His clothes were making their last stand in favor of the conventions.

Ranse went up to Buck Rabb, the camp boss, and spoke briefly.

"He's a plumb buzzard," said Buck. "He won't work, and he's the low-downest passel of inhumanity I ever see. I didn't know what you wanted done with him, Ranse, so I just let him set. That seems to suit him. He's been condemned to death by the boys a dozen times, but I told 'em maybe you was savin' him for torture."

Ranse took off his coat.

"I've got a hard job before me, Buck, I reckon, but it has to be done. I've got to make a man out of that thing. That's what I've come to camp for."

He went up to Curly.

"Brother," he said, "don't you think if you had a bath it would allow you to take a seat in the company of your fellow men with less injustice to the atmosphere?"

"Run away, farmer," said Curly sardonically. "Willie will send for nursey when he feels like having his tub."

The charco, or water hole, was 12 yards away. Ranse took one of Curly's ankles and dragged him like a sack of potatoes to the brink. Then, with the strength and sleight of a hammer-thrower, he hurled the offending member of society far into the lake.

Curly crawled out and up the bank spluttering like a porpoise.

Ranse met him with a piece of soap and a coarse towel in his hands.

"Go to the other end of the lake and use this," he said. "Buck will give you some dry clothes at the wagon."

The tramp obeyed without protest. By the time supper was ready he had returned to camp. He was hardly to be recognized in his new blue shirt and brown ducking clothes. Ranse observed him out of the corner of his eye.

"Lordy, I hope he ain't a coward," he was saying to himself. "I hope he won't turn out to be a coward."

His doubts were soon allayed. Curly walked straight to where he stood. His light blue eyes were blazing.

"Now I'm clean," he said, meaningly. "Maybe you'll talk to me. Think you've got a picnic here, do you? You clod-hoppers think you can run over a man because you know he can't get away. All right. Now, what do you think of that?"

Curly planted a stinging slap against Ranse's left cheek. The print of his hand stood out a dull red against the tan.

Ranse smiled happily.

The cow punchers talk to this day of the battle that followed.

Somewhere in his restless tour of the cities Curly had acquired the art of self-defense. The ranchman was equipped only with the splendid strength and equilibrium of perfect health and the endurance conferred by decent living. The two attributes nearly matched. There were no formal rounds. At last the fiber of the clean liver prevailed. The last time Curly went down from one of the ranchman's awkward but powerful blows he remained on the grass, but looking up with an unquenched eye.

Ranse went to the water barrel and washed the red from a cut on his chin in the stream from the faucet. On his face was a grin of satisfaction.

Much benefit might accrue to educators and moralists if they could know the details of the curriculum of reclamation through which Ranse put his waif during the month that he spent in the San Gabriel camp. The ranchman had no fine theories to work out—perhaps his whole stock of pedagogy embraced only a knowledge of horse breaking and a belief in heredity.

The cow punchers saw that their boss was trying to make a man out of the strange animal that he had sent among them; and they tacitly organized themselves into a faculty of assistants. But their system was their own.

Curly's first lesson stuck. He became on friendly and then on intimate terms with soap and water. And the thing that pleased Ranse most was that his "subject" held his ground at each successive higher step. But the steps were sometimes far apart.

Once he got at the quart bottle of whisky kept sacredly in the grub tent for rattlesnake bites, and spent 16 hours on the grass, magnificently drunk. But when he staggered to his feet his first move was to find his soap and towel and start for the charco. And once, when a treat came from the ranch in the form of a basket of fresh tomatoes and young onions, Curly devoured the entire consignment before the punchers reached the camp at supper time.

And then the punchers punished him in their own way. For three days they did not speak to him, except to reply to his own questions or remarks. And they spoke with absolute and unfailing politeness. They played tricks on one another; they pounded one another hurtfully and affectionately; they heaped upon one another's heads friendly curses and obloquy; but they were polite to Curly. He saw it, and it stung him as much as Ranse hoped it would.

There came a night that brought a cold, wet norther. Wilson, the youngest of the outfit, had lain in camp two days, ill with a fever. When Joe got up at daylight to begin breakfast he found Curly sitting asleep against a wheel of the grub wagon with only a saddle blanket around him, while Curly's blankets were stretched over Wilson to protect him from the rain and wind.

Three nights after that Curly rolled himself in his blanket and went to sleep. Then the other punchers rose up softly and began to make preparations. Ranse saw Long Collins tie a rope to the horn of a saddle. Others were getting out their six-shooters.

"Boys," said Ranse, "I'm much obliged. I was hoping you would. But I didn't like to ask."

Half a dozen six-shooters began to pop—awful yells rent the air—Long Collins galloped wildly across Curly's bed, dragging the saddle after him. That was merely their way of gently awaking their victim. Then they hazed him for an hour carefully and ridiculously after the code of cow camps. Whenever he uttered protest they held him stretched over a roll of blankets and thrashed him wofully with a pair of leather leggings.

And all this meant that Curly had won his spurs, that he was receiving the puncher's accolade. Nevermore would they be polite to him. But he would be their "pardner" and stirrup brother, foot to foot.

When the fooling was ended all hands made a raid on Joe's big coffee pot by the fire for a Java nightcap. Ranse watched the new knight carefully to see if he understood and was worthy. Curly limped with his cup of coffee to a log and sat upon it. Long Collins followed and sat by his side. Buck Rabb went and sat at the other. Curly—grinned.

And then Ranse furnished Curly with mounts and saddle and equipment, and turned him over to Buck Rabb, instructing him to finish the job.

Three weeks later Ranse rode from the ranch into Rabb's camp, which was then in Snake Valley. The boys were saddling for the day's ride. He sought out Long Collins among them.

"How about that bronco?" he asked.

Long Collins grinned.

"Reach out your hand, Ranse Truesdell," he said, "and you'll touch him. And you can shake his'n, too, if you like, for he's plumb white and there's none better in no camp."

Ranse looked again at the clear-faced, bronzed, smiling cowpuncher who stood at Collins' side. Could that be Curly? He held out his hand, and Curly grasped it with the muscles of a bronco buster.

"I want you at the ranch," said Ranse.

"All right, sport," said Curly heartily. "But I want to come back again. Say, pal, this is a dandy farm. And I don't want any better fun than hustlin' cows with this bunch of guys. They're all to the merry merry."

At the Cibolo ranch house they dismounted. Ranse bade Curly wait at the door of the living room. He walked inside. Old Kiowa Truesdell was reading at a table.

"Good morning, Mr. Truesdell," said Ranse.

The old man turned his white head quickly.

"How is this?" he began. "Why do you call me 'Mr.'?"——

When he looked at Ranse's face he stopped, and the hand that held his newspaper trembled slightly.

"Boy," he said slowly, "how did you find it out?"

"It's all right," said Ranse, with a smile. "I made Tia Juana tell me. It was kind of by accident, but it's all right."

"You've been like a son to me," said old Kiowa.

"Tia Juana told me all about it," said Ranse. "She told me how you adopted me when I was knee-high to a puddle duck out of a wagon train of prospectors that was bound West. And she told me how the kid—your kid, you know—got lost or was run away with. And she said it was the same day that the sheep shearers got on a bender and left the ranch."

"Our boy strayed from the house when he was two years old," said the old man. "And then along came these emigrant wagons with a youngster they didn't want; and we took you in. I never intended you to know, Ranse. We never heard of our boy again."

"He's right outside, unless I'm mighty mistaken," said Ranse, opening the door and beckoning.

Curly walked in.

No one could have doubted. The old man and the young had the same sweep of hair, the same nose, chin, line of face and prominent light blue eyes.

Old Kiowa rose eagerly.

Curly looked about the room curiously. A puzzled expression came over his face. He pointed to the wall opposite.

"Where's the tick-tok?" he asked absent-mindedly.

"The clock!" cried old Kiowa loudly. "The eight-day clock used to stand there. Why"——

He turned to Ranse, but Ranse was not there.

Already a hundred yards away Vaminos, the good flea-bitten dun, was bearing him eastward like a racer through dust and chaparral toward the Rancho de los Olmos.

Discovered! America's Third Greatest Man

its best features, may be labeled "made-in-Massachusetts."

At one stroke he changed the Bavarian army from an assembly of idle and vicious vagabonds into self-supporting workers. Bavaria was overrun by hardy and impudent mendicants, whose methods of beggary were little removed from highway robbery. Thompson arrested every beggar in Munich one morning and settled them all in an industrial asylum, where most of them were turned into workers and useful citizens, and the whole evil of mendacity was soon erased from the Duchy. He introduced potatoes into Bavaria as a food and revolutionized agriculture with such innovations as the rotation of crops.

The climax of his court career care in 1795, during the French Revolutionary Wars. Munich was threatened by both French and Austrian armies. The Elector fled, having named as Regent of the Duchy, not one of his relatives, but his trusted counselor—the American who had once served customers behind a Boston counter. This trust was well founded, for Count Rumford displayed such diplomacy and such an ingratiating tact toward both enemies that Munich was spared a hostile occupation. The Elector returned and in his gratitude named Count Rumford Ambassador to England from Bavaria; but the circumstance that he was a British subject proved, much to the Count's disappointment, an insuperable obstacle; such a position in a subject being forbidden by British custom.

Soon afterwards Count Rumford resigned his many offices in Bavaria and retired as a private citizen to London. Here he published the essays which have made his name one of the great ones in science. It was he who first formulated the fundamental theory that heat is a form of molecular motion and not a material substance, as the general belief then was. He published this conclusion, supported by many painstaking experiments, in his famous "Inquiry Concerning the Source of Heat Which is Excited by Friction." In 1799 he became the principal founder of the Royal Institution in London, and himself selected Sir Humphry Davy as scientific lecturer there.

His inventions for the economical use of heat—kitchen utensils, stoves and ovens—were numerous and were all given freely to the public. He was one of the first exponents of scientific dietetics, and was the great smoke abater of his day, perfecting a number of devices for smokeless stoves, fireplaces and grates. He built the first scientific smokestacks and invented the calorimeter and the thermoscope. So notorious were his principles of thrift as applied to food that thin soups in London were called "Rumford gruel," and on the Continent soldiers, when food was meager, said their rations were "a la Rumford." However, it was said that "Count Rumford lavished his own money to teach other people to save theirs."

He wrote voluminously, in an English style which, for simplicity and clarity, has been compared to Benjamin Franklin's. The military academy which he founded in Bavaria was the model, it is said, upon which the United States Military Academy was organized.

Americans at first heard with incredulity and then with amazement and irritation of the honors to which "Benedict Arnold the Second," as some of them termed him, had arrived in Europe. That he was really a Count and that he moved habitually in the circles of courts, statesmen and philosophers seemed to them like a tremendous fairy tale; and that the former dry goods clerk now possessed one of the world's great names in science appeared to his former neighbors almost beyond belief.

Count Rumford himself made numerous overtures for permission to revisit his native land, but the stringent legislation against Tories enacted during the Revolution had not yet been repealed, and he was still liable to arrest if he ventured to enter the United States. In his later years nothing gave him more pleasure than his election as a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

He never saw his wife after his flight from Woburn, and she died in 1792. Their daughter, Sarah, visited her father in London and Munich, but the unsophisticated Yankee girl showed little aptitude for the polished and polite circles in which her father moved, and was soon sent back home. Until her death she lived unmarried at Concord, and was known as Countess Sarah. Her father's gallantries abroad provided her with a brother and sister, the latter of whom died young, and the former grew up to be a distinguished army officer in France.

In 1804 Count Rumford married one of the most brilliant women of the day, the widow of the famous chemist, Lavoisier. Both were rich, and their magnificent residence in Paris was the resort of the lions of the day. But they soon proved utterly incompatible. Rumford locked the gates one day to keep out guests she had invited to her salon. She retailliated by pouring boiling water on his flower beds. After that they separated, the Count retiring to an estate at Anteuil, where he died suddenly, on Aug. 21, 1814, in the sixty-second year of his age.

THE FUN OF BEING A "CIRCUS BABY"

Above — Catherine Wallace, aged 3, with a baby lion; below— to left, with her first playmate, a tiger cub; and to right, as an infant equestrienne.

FOR children there is no such realm of magic and splendor as the circus; so let little boys and girls who have laughed at the funny clowns and held their breath at the big elephants and shrieked for joy at the cute ponies and dogs, just imagine how they would like to live in a circus and be a real "circus baby" like Catherine Wallace.

Catherine is three-and-a-half years old, and her mother and father are wardrobe superintendents of one of the several "greatest shows on earth." The child has lived in the circus all her life and has not known much of anything else.

The first thing she ever saw, to take notice, was a splay-foot clown who walked in front of her and for her especial entertainment stepped on his own foot and wailed with the agony it caused him. Her first playmate was a tiger cub, which—alas!—didn't play fair and grew ten or a dozen times as fast as Catherine, and had to be graduated from the nursery to a cage. Before she was a year old she had been swung aloft on the trunk of the most elephantine of all elephants, now that Jumbo is dead.

"Aren't circuses good fun?" Catherine was asked a few days ago as she sat with her nurse upon a curved section of dismantled ring, under what would have been the "Big Top" if it hadn't been the roof of Madison Square Garden in New York.

"Circuses is"——began the child.

"Are, Catherine," the nurse admonished.

"All right, Marie. Circuses are the best fun there are."

"Is, Catherine."

"Is," Catherine corrected dutifully. And despite incomprehensible eccentricities of grammar which are always arising to puzzle her, Catherine is as fine an expert on the subject as any other child would want.

At that very moment—it was practice hour in the circus—two men were balancing themselves on big gilt balls and holding at arms' length above their heads a ladder on which a third man footed his way back and forth, poised on a third gilded globe. A Samson-like understudy of Miller Huggins caught silvered cannon balls tossed roof-high from a mortar. High up in the roof hung a solitary gymnast, of the weaker sex, twirling from a strap gripped in her teeth. She was taking her morning constitutional. Across the way a troupe of horses and dogs were having a bit of extra polish put on their stunt.

Such spectacles, so awesome to other children, are the commonplaces of Catherine's daily life. She has her personal opinions about the animals. Elephants are the most dangerous, she says, because they are liable to eat you up just like loaves of bread. You must be respectful to lions and tigers because they are liable to scratch you, but they always spit to give you fair warning. She was sure it wasn't a proper time to try to play with the leopard, which, a 50-pound chunk of incarnate temper cased in gorgeous skin and looking out through eyes that were amber fire, arched its back and hissed and swore. The animal's attendant was cleaning out its cage with a long iron bar and making slow work of it.

Home is different when you are a circus person, according to Catherine. Bridgeport is home in winter, but in summer home is Car No. 27, a convenient sort of place that moves right on with you wherever you want to go.

Catherine was asked what she is going to be when she grows up.

"A great, big girl," she answered. "And perhaps I'll ride some horses, too, but I don't know yet."

BRITISH TORPEDO BOATS RESCUING GERMAN SAILORS AFTER THE SINKING OF THE BLUECHER. In the battle of the North Sea, when Germany lost the Bluecher, the task of saving survivors was undertaken by torpedo boats. This was continued, according to British reports, "until they were attacked by German aviators and had to abandom the Germans to their fate."
